WOMEN'S COLLEGE PLANS UNDERWAY

State Federation Through a Committee Starts a Vigorous Campaign.

BUILDING IS SECURED

New Institution to Be Located at New Brunswick Will for the Present Be Affiliated With Rutgers College.

New Jersey is the only State in the Union which has no undenominational college for women. The New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs, seeing the need, has organized a Woman's College Committee, which now has under way a vigorous campaign to establish a State college for New Jersey women.

Already a suitable building and twelve acres of ground adjacent to the Agricultural College at New Brunswick have been procured, and while the college will not in any sense be co-educational, it will, for a time at least, be affiliated with Rutgers College.

The committee has many reasons to justify this movement which will make a strong appeal to every loyal citizen of New Jersey. Among these reasons are that New Jersey does not prepare its girls to fill the high positions in professional life which are constantly demanding to be filled; that every year twelve hundred High School positions go to women educated in other States; that the highest public school training which New Jersey affords prepares women to teach only in primary grades; that more than eight hundred girls go out of the State every year to obtain higher education; and that this condition has resulted in the overcrowding of colleges in other States and a consequent increase of tuition, with the result that many New Jersey girls are denied the privilege of attending college.

The tuition at the New Jersey College for Women will be about $100, and the demands of the college for the first four years will be so small that the people of the State surely will not let the opportunity go by.

The success of the college will be assured if $15,000 is raised by May 1st, 1915, and $20,000 a year for the next three years is pledged.

The plan of campaign provides for the division of the State into districts with a vice president of the New Jersey Federation of Women's Clubs at the head of each. Local committees will be organized in the various towns and cities, and it will be the duty of the local committees to solicit funds and pledges.

The district comprising Union, Morris and Warren counties is in

MRS. EDDY TO SPEAK HERE ON MISSIONS

Will Address Federation of Women's Missionary Societies.

Mrs. Sherwood Eddy who, with some difficulty, was secured by the foreign committee of the Federation of Women's Missionary Societies, will speak at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church under the auspices of the federation. Mrs. Eddy, who is an able woman and a delightful speaker, was with Mr. Eddy on his recent trip to the students, gentry and officials of thirteen cities in China.

While he was speaking to thousands and thousands of men students and holding evangelistic meetings, the record of which is said to be "the biggest pieces of religious news, especially in its implications, that has been reported for a generation if not for a century," she was holding similar meetings with women students, Bible readers, and conferring with the heads of missionary and government schools.

Mrs. Eddy is in great demand and large audiences greet her wherever she goes. Therefore, although this meeting was planned that the women in Plainfield might hear her wonderful story, the committee in charge arranged to have it held in the Crescent Avenue church so that a general invitation could be given to men as well as women. The committee feels that no one can afford to lose this unusual opportunity.

THIEF LEFT LOOT IN HIS HURRY TO MAKE GETAWAY

For the third time within the last two months, Leo Zeisel, the West Front street bicycle dealer, was treated to a burglar scare, last night, but on this occasion he was fortunate enough to scare the prospective looter away before his operations were completed. The proprietor went into the store at 8 o'clock and noticed someone stirring in the rear.

When the intruder saw Zeisel he made a hurried leap for a window, throwing two suit cases aside in his rush to gain his liberty. Examination of the grips revealed a supply of bicycle accessories, which the thief had packed and was preparing to make a getaway with. No trace of the intruder has been found.

"LONGFELLOW AND HIS POEMS."

Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst, of the North Plainfield schools, will speak before the members of the Seventh and Eighth grades of the Somerset School, Wednesday morning, on "Longfellow and His Poems."

MISS GERTRUDE W. KING PASSES AWAY

Complications Following Demise of Her Father, D. W. King, Hastens the End.

Miss Gertrude W. King, daughter of Mrs. Amanda I. and the late David W. King, died at her mother's home on Craig place shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, following an illness of about three months. She had been afflicted with rheumatism and at the time of her father's death nine weeks ago, experienced a severe shock that developed complications. Heart trouble followed and for the past two weeks her life has been despaired of. Throughout her illness the young woman bore it patiently and as long as consciousness lasted her only concern was for her mother, and only sister.

Miss King was a native of the borough, where she was born eighteen years ago. She was of an unusual genial and social disposition and made friends with everyone with whom she came in contact. She attended the North Plainfield schools until two years ago, when rheumatic troubles caused an abadonment of her studies. Her leaving was deeply regretted by all of her schoolmates as she was one of the lightest hearted of her class. She was a member of the First Baptist church and also of the Young People's Society.

Beside her mother, Miss King is survived only by one sister, Miss Ethel King. She was a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William L. Smalley, her mother being Miss Amanda I. Smalley previous to her marriage, sister of David C., former Mayor Newton B., Albert I. and William L. Smalley and Mrs. H. C. Dunbar. The funeral will be held at her late residence, 27 Craig place, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30, and will be in charge of Dr. Philip Strong. Burial will be in the family plot in the Bound Brook cemetery.

EXPLODING WATER-BACK FIRES SECOND STREET HOUSE

The water-back of a stove at the home of Mrs. Martha Walker, colored, of 446 West Second street, exploded at 8:10 yesterday morning, scattering live coals about the kitchen. Fire started in several different places and an alarm was turned in from box 46, bringing out several pieces of apparatus from headquarters. The firemen were quickly on the scene and extinguished the flames with hand chemicals. Outside of the loss of the stove the damage was trifling.

The firemen were kept busy both Saturday and yesterday responding to telephone alarms for grass fires. There were three of these yesterday afternoon, one at 12:25 on South avenue, one at 3:07 on upper North avenue near the water works, and another at 8:07 last night, in the yard of the Scott Printing Press Works. No. 4 Hose company took care of the first two and headquarters apparatus put out the blaze in the Scott yard.

MISS EDNA COHEN A PROSPECTIVE BRIDE

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Edna Cohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cohen, of Putnam avenue, and Eugene Meyers, of Denver, to take place Tuesday, March 16. Miss Cohen has a wide circle of friends in this city, and is identified with the work of Temple Sholem.

Mr. Meyers is at present manager of Marcus Loew's western circuit of theatres, and was for some time identified with semi-professional baseball in the vicinity of New York. For some time he managed a team in the New York-New Jersey Railroad Baseball League, and was the first to introduce Dick Rudolph, one of the stars of last year's Boston "Braves" team, to the semi-professional "fans." Mr. Meyers, who is somewhat of a comedian himself, broke into the theatrical game one or two years ago, and is meeting with great success in the West as manager.

ENTERTAIN MEN'S CLUB.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Hubbard, of West Fifth street, entertained the members of the Men's Club, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, last night, with an illustrated account of their trip to California. They described the industries and characteristics of the country in that section and exhibited 150 pictures. The meeting was well attended and a social hour followed the lecture.

RASORES MEETING.

The Rasores will meet at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, with Mrs. J. S. Zelie, of Park avenue.

ON FRONT STREET ONE YEAR AGO TODAY

Auto Fire Engine Plowing Through Snow Drifts.

One year ago today Plainfield was gripped in the throes of the worst blizzard that has visited this section in twenty-six years. Grim destruction rode on the wings of a gale, accompanied by snow and hail and this city was isolated from all outside communication. All public utilities, including the telephone, trolley, telegraph and electric lights, were put out of commission and railroad men declared that it was even worse than the famous storm of March 12, 1888. For the most part all the telegraph poles along the line of the Central Railroad were prostrate, miles of wire being a tangled mass of wreckage.

Poles were blown down, in some cases actually uprooted by the force of the gale, others were snapped in two. In many cases the heavy ice-coated wires caused the breaking of the poles. There were about 2,000 telephones out of service in Plainfield and the entire electric lighting system in this part of the State was out of commission.

The storm started early Sunday morning, March 1, and the first train to arrive at the North Avenue depot from New York after 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon pulled in at noon Monday. No trolley cars moved a wheel in Plainfield for forty-eight hours and it was fully as long before lighting service was secured.

Every telegraph, telephone and electric light pole was down on South avenue, between Berckman street and Woodland avenue. Traffic was impossible on many thoroughfares because of tangled wires and fallen poles. Many windows of stores and houses were broken.

Scores of Plainfield people were marooned in the railroad station in Jersey City all night. The food supplies of the lunch room were soon exhausted. It was a hungry crowd that reached home at about noon Monday.

Inability to get power to drive linotypes or press made it impossible to publish a regular edition of the Daily Press, Monday.

NICHOLAS MEYERS ON RETIRED LIST

Veteran Patrolman Officially Completes Twenty Years of Service.

WILL BE PENSIONED

Was Sworn in as An Officer by Former Mayor C. J. Fisk, March 1, 1895—Will Now Enjoy a Much Needed Rest.

Patrolman Nicholas Meyers, who has been a member of the city police force since 1895, officially completed his twenty years of service at 12 o'clock last night and today went on the retired list. His application to be pensioned was acted upon favorably by the police committee of the Common Council at a meeting Friday night and Officer Meyers will be the third one to go on this list. The other two are former Captain Christian Frederickson and former Patrolman Thomas McCue.

Patrolman Meyers, or "Nick," as he is known by every one from one end of the town to the other, was sworn in as a policeman on March 1, 1895, former Mayor Charles J. Fisk then being chairman of the Police Board. Alexander Gilbert was the city's Mayor. Previous to this time, Mr. Meyers had done 18 months of service as a special officer in the Netherwood section, but this was not listed in his regulation term. At the time he donned the blue uniform the late Captain George W. Grant was the head of the department and there were six other officers, Sergeant Kiely, now chief; former Captain Frederickson, Thomas McCue, Patrick J. Flanagan, John Hartpense and William Mattox. Chief Kiely is now the only one of this group remaining. The department at the present time numbers about thirty men and is one of the best equipped in the State, having its own headquarters building, a complete Gamewell callbox system and a motorcycle squad.

Mr. Meyers is still in the prime of life, but decided that when he had completed the twenty years he would seek retirement for the purpose of enjoying a much needed rest and recuperation. He has no plans for the present, but may decide upon something later. His resignation from the force will be received with regret by his hosts of friends as he was one of those with whom everybody exchanged greetings and who had been looked upon in some sections of the city as a "Fixed institution." He has many important captures to his record, one of which was the apprehension of the Italian who slashed a fellow countryman to death at East Fourth street and Watchung avenue four years ago. Meyers pursued the man to a house on Cottage place where he took refuge under a bed, but gave battle when cornered. The officer finally subdued him despite the fact that he made every effort to follow up his first murder with that of the officer. Numerous other cases which occurred during the early years of his service will stand as a tribute to his bravery and zealousness as a guardian of the law.

Mr. Meyers' home is on upper North avenue, having resided in the Netherwood section ever since coming to this city from Williamsburg, New York, when a young man. Both he and his family are highly respected in the community. He is a member of Franklin Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and also the Oriental degree, the Patrolman's Benevolent Association and several social organizations.

JACOB E. HILPOT BORNE TO FINAL RESTING PLACE

The funeral of Jacob E. Hilpot was held yesterday afternoon at his late home on East Fifth street, in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. A delegation of Elks from Jersey City Lodge, No. 211, of which he was a charter member, was present and also a representation from Plainfield Lodge of Elks. The service was conducted by Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church.

The body was taken to Bound Brook this morning, where burial was made in the Bound Brook cemetery. A commitment service was conducted by the Bound Brook lodge of Masons, with which Mr. Hilpot had been affiliated for many years. The pallbearers were William Schure, David Hastings, A. E. Lloyd, Edward Casterlis, August Smith and Runyon Field, all members of the Masonic order.

OBSERVE JEWISH FEAST OF PURIM

Impressive Services Were Held in Local Temples and Synagogues Yesterday.

The Jewish feast of the Purim, commemorating the deliverance of the Jews from death at the hands of Haman, was observed in the local temples and synagogues yesterday. The celebration began at sundown Saturday and ended at sundown yesterday. In conjunction with the observance of Purim Sunday, the day was also observed as the Jewish Flag Day and as a day of giving to relieve the suffering and privation in the Jewish colony in Palestine. The members of the Young Judea Club, of Temple Sholem, divided into groups with a leader, visited the synagogues and homes in Plainfield all day yesterday, selling little buttonhole flags of blue and white, and as a result a substantial sum of money was received which will be forwarded to the National Jewish Relief Headquarters in New York.

The Palestine Relief Committee, composed of Dr. I. S. Finckel, E. Nadler, H. Matlin and N. Bernstein, realized a neat sum to send to the headquarters for the Palestine sufferers. On March 6, the United States Government will send an American ship with 9,000 tons of food for the relief of the Jewish population in that country. Donations from one cent to a dollar were received for the fund. Plainfield was one of 500 cities to agree to participate in the celebration of the Purim and to solicit contributions for the suffering Jews abroad.

Varley, Robert McCormack and J. J. Carty; speakers, George J. Tobin, Robert McCormack and J. A. Gaffney.

The dinner promises to be one of the most successful of the kind ever held in the city. It will take place at Columbus Hall on St. Patrick's Day night, March 17. The price of tickets has been placed at $2.00 and they may be procured only from members of the banquet committee.

CLAIM WILL WAS STOLEN.

Washington, March 1—In the United States Supreme Court today, the State of Virginia, through J. G. Pollard, its attorney general, asked leave to file a suit against J. P. Morgan, of New York, to recover possession of Martha Washington's will which the State claims was stolen during the Civil War and now is in Mr. Morgan's private collection. The court took the motion under advisement and a decision will probably be handed dwon in a week or two.

RISKS HIS OWN LIFE TO SAVE A WOMAN

In an effort to avoid hitting a woman and child walking in the middle of the road, Herman Knack, driver of an automobile owned by the Century Rubber Company, placed his own life and that of two companions into jeopardy on South avenue, near Fanwood, Saturday night, the result being the removal of Knack to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he is suffering from painful, though not serious, injuries. The trio in the local concern's truck were returning from Newark and the quick swerve to avoid hitting the woman and child caused the heavy vehicle to turn completely over.

George Smith and Stewart Baker, companions of Knack's, were thrown clear of the wreckage, but the driver was pinioned underneath the car. The screams of the woman, who proved to be Mrs. Charles Freck, of Hotel Maples, attracted Walter Sands to the scene, who stopped a passing automobile and had the injured Knack removed to the office of Dr. Westcott nearby.

The physician in turn ordered his removal to the hospital and at that institution this morning, it was said that his injuries consisted of a slight concussion of the brain and numerous cuts and bruises. The fact that the auto skidded on the slippery asphalt where the accident occurred caused it to overturn and the occupants had a miraculous escape from fatal injury.

LOCAL PATROLMEN PRESENT AT ASSOCIATION'S MEETING

A meeting of the Plainfield branch of the State Patrolmen's Benevolent Association was held in Westfield, Friday, Patrolman J. J. Burke, of Newark, the State president, conducting the session.

The local police officers present at the meeting were Tobias Nolan, Fred Bader, Arthur McGinley, Cornelius McCarthy and Nicholas Meyers.

UNDERTAKING FIRM TO CHANGE LOCATION

The undertaking firm of P. Casey & Son, of which John Casey, Sr., of West Third street, is the present head, located for the past fifteen years on Park avenue, will move to its new quarters at Park and North avenues, in the Depew building, on April 1. This concern is one of the oldest undertaking firms in the city, and was established by the late Patrick Casey, father of the present proprietor, who, for several years, conducted the business on West Front street, where the dry goods business of A. E. Force & Company is now located. The shoe business of A. K. Willett, now at 107 Park avenue, occupied Mr. Casey's present store prior to his occupancy.

Mr. Casey will move to his new place of business after slight alterations are made to the interior of the store. The place was for some time occupied by W. W. Warnock, the baker. The rental was made through the agency of Charles L. Lyman & Son, of Park avenue.

SCOTCH PLAINS MAN IS ATTACKED BY ASPHASIA

Louis Tuzo, whose home is in Scotch Plains, is a patient at Muhlenberg Hospital recovering from an attack of asphasia, with which he was seized while in a telephone booth at the Jersey Central's Communipaw terminal last Friday. He was found in an unconscious condition and removed to a Jersey City hospital, where his identity was learned through cards in his pockets. He recovered sufficiently after temporary treatment had been given to return to Scotch Plains, but later became worse and was removed to Muhlenberg.

Tuzo's mind is a blank most of the time, but occasionally he rallies sufficiently to be able to comprehend what is said to him. It was reported from the hospital at noon today that he showed signs of improvement.

NEARLY LOSES EYESIGHT.

Vannie Brower, of New Market, narrowly escaped losing the sight of his right eye yesterday, when one of his cows horned him in the eyebrow. Brower was standing near the cow which had its head down and without noticing the movements of the animal it suddenly raised its head the sharp point of the horn striking him in the eyebrow. The injury was such that treatment by a physician was necessary.

British and French Flags Now Flying Over Dardanelles Forts—Premier Asquith Estimates Present Cost of War $1,810,000,000.

London, March 1 (Central News Cable).—The expected announcement of a blockade of German ports was made by Premier Asquith in the House of Commons late this afternoon. His statement was a short one, declaring that Great Britain will prevent commodities of any kind reaching or leaving German ports.

London, March 1.—Expecting a momentous official announcement from Premier Asquith relative to retaliatory measures against Germany for declaring British waters a war zone, an enormous crowd filled the galleries in the House of Commons today. When Premier Asquith arose shortly before 4 o'clock an expectant hush fell upon the house, but the statesman had only arisen to move a new vote of credit for the prosecution of the war. Afterward the Premier began to answer interpellations which had been directed against the Government benches. He declared that the Government is well satisfied with the recruiting done in England. The Premier turned his attention to the official papers which have been issued by France, Russia and England relative to the responsibility for the war. The publications leave no doubt in impartial minds that the responsibility for the war did not rest on this country, he said. He said that in addition to the $50,000,000 advanced to Belgium and $4,000,000 advanced to Servia further advances of money to these countries are under consideration. The cost of the war up to March 31, was estimated at $1,810,000,000 by Premier Asquith. This represented a daily expenditure of $7,500,000 in excess of the Government's expenses.

A despatch from Petrograde states that a semi-official announcement made there today indicates that the Russian troops should be credited with the initiative of the offensive movement north of Grodno. Prisoners and artillery, the announcement says, captured by the Russians north of Grodno are from the best corps of the German armies now on the eastern front. Russian progress in the region of Przasnysz has been notable. We have captured one village after another, taking several hundred prisoners in each place. In other sections the Germans are delivering counter attacks, bringing fresh troops into action and certain villages pass from the possession of one side to another. Nevertheless, our front advances measurably each day.

An Athens despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says:

"The Allies have disembarked detachments of artillery near the destroyed Dardaneles forts, and British and French flags are now flying over them.

"The fleet continued a bombardment of the inners forts yesterday afternoon. A powder magazine was blown up. There were numerous victims. The fleet had reached as far as the lighthouse near Fort Kilid Bahr. The forts on the European side have been reduced to silenced. Minesweeping operations continue.

"There are 50,000 Turks on the European side and 15,000 on the Asiatic side.

"At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the attaching ships had reached Carophonia lighthouse, near Forts Kidelahr and Hanakale. All the forts on the European side of the strait up to that point have now been silenced. British and French flags are flying over the entrance forts. This is the first time in history that a hostile flag has flown on the Dardanelles.

"In the bombardment today the fleet was again led by the Queen Elizabeth, the great battle cruiser whose 15-inch guns did such effective work in reducing the fortifications at the Agean entrance of the straits.

"It is stated that the mine sweepers have done swift and thorough work, and have already cleared away part of the chains of explosives which begin at Kephex, eleven miles from the entrance, and continue through the narrowest part of the straits to Nagard roads, where the Turkish fleet is supposed to be stationed.

"The rate at which the demolition of the forts has proceeded leads to the hope that the fleet will win its way into the Sea of Marmora within two weeks. If the feat is accomplished in that time the fall of Constantinople cannot be long delayed."

S. S. SWACKHAMER GIVES ADDRESS ON "TEMPERANCE"

A large audience gathered at the Methodist Episcopal church, last evening, to listen to an address on "Temperance," delivered by S. S. Swackhamer, of Plainfield. The congregation of the Presbyterian church, by invitation, joined with their Methodist brethren. The pulpit was tastefully decorated with American flags and special music had been arranged by the choir. A solo was pleasantly rendered.

As a temperance advocate, Mr. Swackhamer is well-known in this vicinity and last evening's address was forceful and eloquent. His principal theme was the value of the ballot and he called the attention of the men to the great privilege and responsibility which is theirs in the power which is thus bestowed upon them. He pleaded with them to use this power to wipe out the saloon.

The speaker recited many touching incidents which had come to his personal notice, illustrating the destructive influences of this the greatest curse of mankind, and then pointed out the encouraging features of the fight which is being waged for prohibition.

AFRAID "SPUDS" WILL FREEZE, DIGS 'EM UP

For several years there has been considerable rivalry among certain residents in the neighborhood of Washington avenue and Second street, to see which would be the first to harvest various kinds of garden products. Among those who have entered into this annual contest has been C. L. Wahl, Sr., an ardent believer in the tradition of Candlemas Day, viz., that fine weather on that day portends a severe spring and bad weather on that day the opposite. So when the second of last month, which was Candlemas Day, dawned cloudy and threatening and remained that way throughout the entire day and the succeeding days became very spring-like, Mr. Wahl planned to steal a march on his neighbors. So one night after the lights in the houses of the neighborhood had all been extinguished, Mr. Wahl secured his trusty garden fork and planted seven rows of potatoes. A neighbor noticing this newly turned over patch of ground the next morning asked Mr. Wahl what it meant. "Oh, I have been merely practising for the contest this spring," he casually replied.

It was with much secret pleasure and anticipation that Mr. Wahl viewed this patch on the mornings of the succeeding spring-like days that followed. But alas, "man proposes and nature disposes" and the present frigid weather cast its breath upon this community. With every degree the theremometer dropped Mr. Wahl's spirits dropped correspondingly. On Saturday night when the theremometer registered 10 degrees above the freezing mark he became exceedingly restless in spirit at the thought of his potato seed lying in the cold earth and got his fork and went into his garden to dig them up. As fate would have it, an inquisitive neighbor happened along and saw what he was doing and now the tale is 'all over town."

'Plains & Fanwood.

Peter Ritter, the local liveryman, does not believe in the impossible, but he was never the less a bit staggered for the time being on Saturday afternoon when he went out to the stable to feed his horses, on the way feeling to see if the money he had but a short time before received in part payment for a horse was still ledged safely in his pocket. He found that the animal was back in his accustomed place. The whole affair assumed such mysterious proportions that Ritter decided to call on the services of Marshal Logan to solve the case. Accordingly the two set out for the farm of a William Gaskill on the outskirts of the township. On their arrival they sought an interview with the buyer of the horse, who explained that the beast would not work and he thought the best way to get rid of it would be to take it back and leave it in the stable, but after a short talk with the marshal changed his mind and said he would try the animal again.

Acting on the recommendation of the Council, residents in the western end of the borough are making preparations to petition the Board of Freeholders to remedy the drainage conditions. As it is Terrill road, which is under county supervision, that effects the drainage by causing the obstructing of several brooks it is not up to the local authorities to act. It is said that the stagnant water having no outlet also causes the presence of a large number of mosquitoes.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Feature photo-plays will be presented at the Plainfield Theatre every afternoon and evening during the present week and the list of announcements as made by the management shows that the bese to be secured is none too good for the Second street playhouse. Marie Dressler in the funniest film ever conceived, "Tillie's Punctured Romance," will hold the boards today and tomorrow. See it for yourself and verify the producer's claim that it has thown the whole country into hysterics. Charles Frohman's production of "Aristocracy," Bronson Howard's dramatic story of society and its shams, will be the attraction Wednesday, and on Thursday afternoon and night, the pictorial conception of "Damon and Pythias" will be presented under the auspices of Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias. The week will be rounded out on Friday and Saturday with the absorbing comedy drama in pictures, "The Circus Man." In addition to the photo-plays mentioned for Tuesday and Friday, these days are set for the continuation of the Plainfield Theatre's two serial films, "The Master Key" on Tuesdays and "The Trey O' Hearts" on Fridays.

The surprise play of the year in New York has been "On Trial," a melodrama by Elmer L. Reizenstein, heretofore unknown as a dramatist, but who will have to be reckoned with in future. The immediate success of "On Trial" may be attributed to its absolute originality. Mr. Reizenstein know little of the ethics of the stage, yet he has supplied it with one of the greatest novelties it has harbored in many seasons. "On Trial" is not only a good play, it is a well made play, containing some of the most radical innovations in construction that has been seen in years. The novelty of this. The curtain rises on a prologue, the scene a court-room where a man is being tried for murder. The district attorney is addressing the jury. The audience learns that not only did the dead man's widow see the prisoner fire the fatal shot, but that the prisoner wanted to plead guilty and wave trial. He is accused of having gone to the house of his victim, a friend and benefactor, stolen $10,000 from the safe and then committed the murder to escape detection. The widow takes the stand and starts to relate the tragedy, when suddenly the stage is plunged in darkness and a moment later the lights go up on the scene the widow is describing to the jury. It would be unfair to prospective audiences to disclose more of the plot of the play. It is sufficient to say that it is filled with real surprises and its climax so ingeniously arranged that its disclosure fairly lifts an audience from their seats. Cohan & Harris (by arrangement of Arthur Hopkins) are the producers of "On Trial," which is sufficient guarantee that its presentation here will be up to the standard always in evidence when these managers make a theatrical offering, and Cohan & Harris' own company will present this one at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday night, March 8.

The moving picture announcements for the week include the sensational five-part drama, "Money," this afternoon and tomorrow, and the anniversary blizzard pictures, taken in Plainfield, today and tonight. "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery" is scheduled for Wednesday, the succeeding episode of "Runaway June," Thursday; "The Exploits of Elaine," Friday, and Charles Chaplin, in a new two-reel comedy, Saturday. LOCAL GIRL COMMUNICATING WITH DOCTOR AT THE FRONT

Miss Ann Goerz, of 1304 West Front street, is one of those intensely interested persons who are watchfully waiting for the close of the present conflict on European soil. According to an incident related by Robert Dunn, a war correspondent working at the front, Dr. Michael Hofman, a regimental surgeon with the Bavarian troops, is corresponding with the Plainfield young woman, whom he is said to have met last summer.

Mr. Dunn came across a postal addressed to the local woman while inspecting the camp in which Dr. Hofman was located, and in response to queries put to him the physician admitted "that he held a warm spot in his heart for the far away New Jersey girl." When interviewed by a Daily Press reporter, Miss Goerz admitted that the interest was a mutual one.

A letter was received from him two weeks ago by the local correspondent, in which he held forth high hopes of soon being able to visit Plainfield and Miss Goez is anticipating the event.

ALL PLANS COMPLETE FOR "GET TOGETHER" DINNER

All plans have been completed for the "get together" dinner which is to be given at the Waldorf Hotel, tonight, under the auspices of the Business Men's Association. One of its primary purposes is to have the members meet with commuters and many of the latter have promised to be present and speak informally. Mayor Leighton Calkins will preside as toastmaster.

This is the first time an effort has been made to have the merchants and commuters meet for an exchange of ideas and social discourse and the response has been most gratifying. The sale of tickets had to be stopped sometime ago as the limit of the banquet hall was reached. The dinner has been arranged by a committee composed of A. E. Force, chairman; Samuel Rothberg, Albert A. LaRock and Leslie R. Fort.

CHANGE BUSINESS LOCATION.

Mr. Kliner is well known in this city, and is a member of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M. Mr. Kliner recently purchased the property from Gustave Hoffman, and is now having repairs and slight alterations made to the dwelling on the plot.

SEWING CIRCLE QUILTS VALUED BED SPREAD

A few months ago the Sewing Circle, of the First Baptist church, quilted a unique and interesting bed quilt for Mrs. Frank W. Jones, of Mountain avenue. The quilt was pieced fifty years ago by Miss Augusta Jones, an aunt of Mr. Jones. Miss Jones was fond of nature and had a truly artistic temperament. Each block represented some flower, fruit or vegetable. She gathered her specimens and with a true hand made fine copies from nature.

Like the Caucassion rug-maker, her colors were selected with the greatest care and have stood the test of years. The bed-quilt is not only artistic, but it is amply comfortable, and is greatly prized by the owners.

NON-SUPPORT CHARGE.

Harold Vanderhoef, of West Front street, was arrested by the local police, Saturday night, on a warrant sworn out by his wife, who feared that he was making ready to desert her. Soon after the husband's apprehension, Lawyer V. W. Nash, Jr., representing Mrs. Vanderhoef, had affected a reconciliation between the couple and in court this morning, Mr. Nash asked for a dismissal of the complaint. In view of the fact that Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., had previously requested a postponement of the hearing to Saturday next, the court fixing bail at $200 for Vanderhoef's appearance then.

AN INEXCUSABLE DEMAND.

Generous Plainfield people made it possible for a large number of the city's unemployed to procure employment at $1 a day during the business depression which has made the winter a hard one in the city. In order to make sure that the money will go toward the support of the families of the men and not be spent foolishly, the committee on the unemployed issues checks good for $1 each to those it employes, and those checks have been accepted at their face value by certain merchants in the city, who have issued necessities for them. Later they are cashed at the office of the committee caring for the unemployed. The movement has been an inspiring one because of the generosity of the people of the city, and has provided a satisfactory solution of a problem that has puzzled the organized charities in other municipalities.

It has come to the Daily Press that some of these men are now complaining because they are not paid in money and they are trying in a quiet way to create trouble. Ministers have been approached with a request that they use their influence to bring about payment in cash. If those who are responsible for the effort to create discord can be found, the committee on the unemployed would do well to cut them off the list entirely, and let them shift for themselves. When the people of a community respond as Plainfielders have done this winter to a request for aid, and as satisfactory a method as has been adopted in this city is used, it is certainly not up to those who are aided, to have anything to say about the method.

There is nothing that compels these men to work for the wages which are paid. They can prove that they are paupers and become charges on the city if they want to, but as long as they take advantage of the generosity of other citizens they should accept conditions cheerfully, and be thankful that they have something to do.

DESTRUCTIVELY EFFECTIVE.

"It must be admitted that Germany's plan of submarine blockade promises to be a success so far as inflicting damage on the enemy is concerned. To send eight vessels to the bottom in the first week is doing very well. It is doubtful, however," as the Paterson Press says, "if so large a number could have been disposed of by the ordinary plan of blockade if it could be made ever so effective."

As Germany is unable to use that plan she has to be content with the other. The difference in favor of the old system is that the aboveboard blockading power if it holds up a ship had something to show for it. Under the new plan everybody loses.

It is said that of the eight vessels that have been destroyed by German mines or submarines since the war zone was declared, all but two were British. But as the six latter were all craft of small importance and value, it is a question whether in destroying the cargoes of the two American ships which were carrying to Germany much needed supplies, the balance of injury is not heavily against the latter.

New Brunswick votes for the third time tomorrow on the adoption or rejection of commission government. Keeping everlastingly at it brings success, they say, and if there ever was a place where a change in the government is needed it is in New Brunswick. Perth Amboy will vote on the question in May. Slowly but surely they are all coming around, and Plainfield is heading that way at a rapid pace.

The dinner to be given tonight by the Business Men's Association should prove to be one of the most successful affairs ever held in Plainfield. The idea of bringing commuters and local men together is a splendid one, and for the general advantage of the city.

Norwegian exporters of dried codfish have suspended exports to Germany owing to the submarine attacks on vessels. Wonder what the Kaiser's people will do now for their Friday morning breakfasts?

"Rotten Egg Jury Acquits Newarker" says a headline. Haven't the men who served in that case a cause to sue for libel! Usually when a man is called a rotten egg, he is ready to fight.

A year ago today Plainfield was paralyzed by a blizzard. And still, in spite of that lesson, the Public Corporation brings its power to town on overheard wires.

Spring certainly must be right around the corner. A gutter band has been rending (or fracturing) the Plainfield air for a couple of days.

It's getting to a point where "old fashioned" means what mother thinks is right and daughter thinks is wrong.

It will be a case of "See America First" for tourists this summer, for the only alternative is to stay at home.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

There would be no question in the minds of a deep thinker but that, as the High School debate from the view-point of that which is fundamental, Senator Hennessey summed up in his quotation from President Lincoln's speech as to "Government of the people, by the people, for the people," all that is necessary ever to be said about the franchise for women and for men. All that was said during the debate by either side, or that can at any time be said, would simply throw light on the way the franchise may be used, or abused, and (as I see it) emphasizes the fact, that not all men, and not all women, should have the right to exercise their right to vote, the qualification for either sex, being as to morality, intelligence and patriotism. I would gladly been enrolled long ago, as a Suffragist, were I sure this distinction would be made (running the risk of being able, personally to quiltfy).

If the franchise is not a right, only a privilege, why employ the courts and have so much law in the matter? To me, it is not only a right, but a duty to vote, and to be educated for it.

JOIN PACIFIC TOUR CONTEST NOW

Candidates in Press Trans-Continental Trip to Be Announced Tomorrow.

INTEREST INCREASING

Four Local Women Who Will Get Free Trans-Continental Tours as Guests of Press Will Be Those Who Grasp Opportunity Now.

Life holds no greater regret than the remembrance of wasted opportunities. How few there are who have not at some time or other neglected to take advantage of some shining opportunity, later to bewail the shortsightedness of negligence! It has meen truly said:

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest of these—it might have been."

You have shrugged your shoulders at some chance which others more farseeing or appreciative than yourself have snapped up, to have the mortification later of seeing how much that same chance meant to you; one more wasted opportunity—neglected because of lack of thought or appreciation.

The World of Travel.

The World of Travel—have you ever stopped to think what these words mean? "The World of Travel?" Have you thought of the wild dreams and the visions which have surged through other people's minds in contemplation of being able to penetrate just a little into the great and wonderful world?

There is nothing more fascinating than travel. In these days of comfort there are many hundreds who long for a chance to view new scenes and faces, but are so situated that the gratification of their desire is entirely out of the question. How different it is for those who are fortunate enough to live in any of the districts outlined by the Press, in the great Trans-Continental and Panama-Pacific International Exposition tour!

The ability to cross the continent, to know its beauties, its history, its peoples, and the comedy and tragedy behind their lives is within the realms of possibility for four women of Plainfield and vicinity.

The Plainfield Press makes you an offer by which you can do all this—broaden your view of life and acquire a splendid education, for "travel is the real source of all true wisdom."

Don't hesitate; now is the time to get busy. "Procrastination is the thief of time."

The fact that the date of the tour appears to be so far in the future may take away some of the enchantment and its advantages may not present themseves to you with much vividness. But when the Press tourists are leaving their homes next July, waving adieu to their admiring friends and well-wishers, and the warning, "All aboard," rings out and the train carrying the "Merry Four" in their Pullman car starts for "Little Old New York," then a full realization will come to you, and if you are not one of the select party you will understand that it was caused entirely by your own timidity or hesitation. But will you neglect the opportunity?

Things to Remember.

Remember, the Press will send one woman from every district and a chaperone to be chosen by the one who receives the largest number of votes of all in the contest. Why should you not be one of the party?

Remember that you can secure subscriptions or votes anywhere in Plainfield, outside of Plainfield, or anywhere in the United States, or anywhere in the world. The only restriction is that you must reside in the district from which you enter the contest.

All prospective candidates should make it a point to call at the contest department at their earliest convenience, as there may be many things which they wish to know.

We have several forms of printed matter to aid candidates in their work, and if you have not already been supplied with these you had better attend to it at once.

The first announcement showing the list of names will be published tomorrow, and the first vote exhibit will appear in the Press, Saturday, March 6th.

Vote-Closing.

Those who want their vote to appear in next Saturday's announcement should have their ballots and subscriptions at the Press not later than 6 p. m. Thursday, March 4, in order to have them counted to appear in Saturday's issue of the Press. Any votes received after the above hour will appear in the following count.

About Votes.

The vote coupons, which appear on page two each day and which are clipped from the paper by the candidates and their friends, must be sent or brought in and received before the date limit printed on each. The vote ballots which are issued on subscriptions can be voted any time during the entire contest. All candidates are requested to turn in subscriptions as soon as possible, so there may be no delay in starting the delivery of the Press. This means saving of much time and confusion to subscribers, and avoids the subscriber wondering why the paper has not started, in case of delay.

Everyone Wins.

The management of the Press has decided to be most liberal to the candidates who may enter this contest, in addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all those candidates who do not win trips and remain active until the end of the contest, a commission of 10 per cent. and 5 per cent. will be paid.

PLAINFIELDERS PLAN TO HEAR BILLY SUNDAY

Plainfielders who so desire will have an opportunity to hear "Billy" Sunday, the evangelist, when he goes to Paterson for a seven weeks' campaign beginning April 4. The Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union is arraigning with the New Jersey Central for a special train from Plainfield to Newark and return, and with the Public Service Corporation for special cars from Broad Street station, Newark, to Paterson and return. The train will leave Plainfield about 4 o'clock on a Saturday afternoon in April, the exact date to be announced later. The Plainfield delegation will attend a Saturday night service.

In order that the committee in charge may have an idea as to the number of seats to be reserved in the tabernacle, those desiring to join the party are requested to send their name and address immediately to Robert B. Butler, 814 West Fifth street, or Clarence B. Lakue, 428 Spruce street. Persons are requested not to send car-fare at this time. While the excursion is under the auspices of the local Christian Endeavor Union, anyone desiring to hear the evangelist will be welcomed if the name is secured in time. The rate for the special trip will be $1.17.

Edward Gray, Jr., of First street, Dunellen, an ardent participant of the national pastime, cut his thumb on a broken jar Saturday afternoon while rummaging in a dark part of the cellar of his home for a last season's baseball. Gray works in the Hall Printing Press works and on Saturday he hastened home with the intention of spending the half holiday in playing ball. After hastily eating his lucheon he wanted to know where his baseball was.

"Why, Edward, I don't know, but you might look in the cellar," his mother said.

Edward ran through the cellar door and down the steps two at a time. He had been searching for about three minutes when a cry of pain issued from the cavern below and Edward came rushing upstairs with his hand covered with blood. The cut was a nasty one and necessitated prompt medical treatment.

WAR NEWS

the communication of yesterday evening except that in Campagne different positions we successively secured now form a continuous chain two kilometres in length to the north and northwest of Perthes and that in the Vosges our attacks made slight progress at Chapelotte, three kilometres north of Celles."

"Near Wervico, north of Lille, an English aeroplane was forced by the German fire to descend yesterday. On one place in the German front the French again, as some months ago used shells which developed ill smelling asphyxiating gas when exploded. No damage was done by them. The German position in Champagne was attacked several times yesterday by at least two army corps. The enemy was everywhere repulsed. After violent hand to hand fighting in the Argonne, two mine throwers were captured between the east edge of Argonne and VaugQuois. The French tried yesterday five times to break through the German lines. All the attacks failed with heavy French losses. The position east of Badonviller, in the Vosges, which were taken by the Germans, also yesterday successfully held against the enemy's attempt to recapture them. Russian attacks north of Lomza and northwest of Ostraleka were repulsed. Otherwise nothing important occurred in either threatre of war."

Rome, March 1.—A despatch from Sofia declares that 500 wounded Turkish soldiers from the Dardanelles forts arrived in Constantinople on Friday, and more on Saturday and yesterday. Djemal Pasha, leader of the Turkish expeditionary force against the Suez Canal, has been recalled from the Egyptian campaign to take charge of the defences of Constatinople, it was announced Sunday night.

YONKERS WALLOPED BY PLAINFIELD FIVE

The boys' basketball team, of the Plainfield High School, had little difficulty in defeating Yonkers High School on the local court, Saturday afternoon, by the score of 48 to 15. The game started off in fashion which indicated that it would be very close. After a few seconds of play Austine caged the ball by making a pretty shot from the centre of the court. This was the only time the Yonkers was in the lead, for Benny Rosenson soon caged the ball after some pretty passing by his teammates. The passing of the Plainfield boys was of the finest calibre and their shooting was also first rate. They soon drew away from their opponents and at the end of the first half had run the score up to 26 to 9 in their favor. In the second half the Yonkers team was allowed but three goals, two of these coming in the last two minutes of play. Chamberlain was unable to play Saturday because of illness and Peacock was sent in at centre and Ryder took his place at guard. Benny Rosenson was the high score man of the game, caging the ball for nine field goals and one foul goal.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR HOPE CHAPEL

North Plainfield "Pickups" Lost Game by a Big Score.

Guy Snyder's shooting was the feature of the game between Hope Chapel and Abrams' Braves at Hope Chapel, Saturday night. The Fourth street aggregation had an easy time taking the verdict, the final score being 56 to 32. Snyder, who played guard, was at his best and dropped in eleven goals from the field, leading Tommy Heron by two goals. The North Plainfield crew was not in the running from the start, the home players outclassing them in the passing and shooting ends.

Heron tallied nine field goals and seven fouls for a total of 25 points, nearly half of the team's score. For the Braves, Day and Townley made four and three respectively, while Hebert dropped in four and Abrams two. Hirsch, at centre, made one.

PLENTY ON PROGRAM FOR THE BASKETEERS

Plainfield basketball fans will be given many opportunities this week to witness their favorite pastime. Games are arranged on practically all the courts in Plainfield. Tomorrow night the West Orange team will lineup against the N. P. H. S. boys in Saengerbund Hall. Dancing will follow the game. Wednesday afternoon the Westfield girls will play a return game with the North Plainfield High School maidens on the Somerset street court and Morristown will appear against the Ninth street boys on that court.

Thursday night, the Columbus Club has arranged a pair of unusually interesting games. The Columbus five will lineup against a team of Westfield boys, while the "Plainfield Five" feminine quintet will appear in the preliminary with a representative Westfield team as their opponents. The Westfield lassies appeared here several weeks ago, losing to the locals by a wide margin, and they hope to redeem themselves this week.

On the T. A. B. court the St. Joseph's Boys' Club will offer their followers a good game. A team is being secured to lineup against them. Friday afternoon the Plainfield High School sextet will trolley to Cranford for their return game with the Cranfordites. The Cranford lassies appeared here recently and lost to the Ninth street players by a score of 20 to 0. A third game between the borough and city High School boys is scheduled to be played on Saturday. The court on which the game will be contested is undecided as yet.

Y. M. C. A. TEAM GOT AN AWFUL DRUBBING

Trenton Central Association Wins Game by 30 Points on Home Court.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team received its worst drubbing of the season at Trenton, Saturday night when the Central Y. M. C. A five, of that place, finished with the larger end of a 48 to 18 count.

The teamwork and accurate shooting of the home team made it dangerous to let the ball pass the centre of the floor and the Trenton forwards were sure shots, missing very few of those they tried for. One forward made ten goals and two fouls. The locals did not score during the first ten minutes of the first half and during that time their opponents were piling the score up to 17. Ricketts made five of the seven points for Plainfield in the first half, the score being 28 to 7.

Jack Ricketts registered three field goals and one foul in the last period, while Gavett and Dunning counted for one.

CLUB WOMEN TO ACT AS HOSTESSES

Club women are to gather the second week in April at the Grand Central Palace, New York. Organizations up and down the Hudson, from Connecticut, New Jersey and Long Island have joined with their urban sisters in serving as hostesses for the Women's Industrial Exposition which is to be held from April 10 to April 17. As the members of these various clubs and societies run into the thousands the Grand Central Palace will take on the dignity of a miniature biennial convention. Some sixty women's clubs are represented and the Exposition will show the widening of the women world during the last year.

The varied interest of the clubs acting as hostesses gives some suggestion of the scope of the Women's Industrial Exposition. It is meant for every woman. The wife and the mother who gives her first and last thought to her husband and children will find everything that she needs to make her home beautiful and comfortable. No less vital will the Exposition be to her sister whose home is the metropolis and who devotes herself to politics or a profession. Everything that is made for women or made by women will be on exhibition with the special emphasis on new developments, from the latest "house-wife helper" such as a glass, ice-filled rolling pin to the most recent word in stenotypes.

Early as it is plans are maturing rapidly to make this Exposition excel those of the past. Each day of Exposition Week is to have a special feature. Women of national importance will make addresses. One day will be devoted to child life and education. Another to the home, while music, art, and drama will be told of by a celebrated singer, painter and playwright. Peace will be the great topic of one day and the program will center about this subject now so close to the heart of every American woman.

MISS RODRIGUES DIES IN MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL

Miss Soila Rodrigues, aged 43 years, died in Muhlenberg Hospital at 11:45 last night, following an operation performed Saturday morning. She had been ailing for several weeks and was removed to the institution Friday in the hope that some relief might be afforded. She rallied yesterday, but complications developed which caused her death.

Miss Rodrigues was a native of Venezuela, South America, but had resided in Plainfield for the past twenty years. During the last half of this time she had lived at the home of former Councilman and Mrs. Ralph I. Tolles, of Westervelt avenue, by whom she was regarded highly and held in the greatest esteem. She was a member of the First Presbyterian church and the Christian Endeavor Society, and had been active in the work of the latter. Miss Rodrigues had many friends in this city and borough, all of whom deeply regret her untimely demise. Her only surviving relatives are two aunts who reside in Venezuela. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made

IMPROVEMENTS BEFORE WASTE

Hurtful Law Works Against Progressive Development Everywhere.

Osceola, Pa., Feb. 25.

The published announcement by twenty-one railroads of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, that the repeal of the Full Crew Laws now operative in those states would release for improvements and increased facilities approximately $2,000,000, which now is being paid yearly to trainmen whose services are unnecessary, and consequently a drain on the companies' resources, has won many converts to the railroads' cause in this town.

It is estimated that this money would build two hundred new stations at an average cost of $10,000 each. One is badly needed here. It is understood that the Pennsylvania Railroad management has under consideration the proposition of a new station at Osceola as one of the system improvements to be made just as soon as the directors feel that the expenditure can properly be made.

Other cities and towns where new stations and additional freight terminal facilities would be justified, citizens here who have fully considered the effects of the Full Crew Laws point out, should join in immediately urging their elected representatives at Harrisburg and Trenton to repeal these wasteful laws as one way to enable the railroads to provide better facilities.

The continuation of these laws on the statute books, it is declared, representing an annual loss of $2,000,000 to the railroads, while primarily borne by the companies, ultimately falls largely upon the people. Public-spirited citizens of this town are, therefore, leaving no stone unturned to bring about repeal of the laws.

FUNERAL OF GRACE E. M'CAFFERY LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral of Grace E. McCaffrey, of South Plainfield, was held Saturday afternoon at her home and later at the Church of the Sacred Heart, where Father Baldwin conducted the service. Father Baldwin spoke touchingly of the little child. The funeral was largely attended.

Six girl companions acted as pallbearers. They were Rose Horn, Elizabeth Horn, Margaret Kaine, Catherine Kaine, Margaret Hamilton and Elizabeth McGuire. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE IN MEMORY OF FANNY CROSBY

An impressive service in memory of Fanny Crosby, the famous blind hymn-writer, was conducted by Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, at the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening, and enjoyed by a large congregation. Dr. Hudson gave a short sketch of her life, relating the circumstances under which a number of her hymns were written, all of which were sung by the congregation, led by the chorus choir of the church, with S. Frederick Smith at the organ.

Of all the 8,000 hymns writtten by Fanny Crosby, she considered "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" her most successful composition and favorite hymn. This was beautifully rendered last evening by Mrs. Grace Robinson. The hymn, "Saved by Grace," was given by a male quartet including Karl Wilson, Walter Weber, Raymond Manley and John Lindaberry. The service closed with an interesting talk by Dr. Hudson on "The Ministry of Christian Song."

CIVIC ASS'N MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the East End Civic Association will be held in the Netherwood Reformed church tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The school question for that section will be the chief topic under discussion. It is expected that Dr. H. M. Maxson, city superintendent of schools; President Archibald Cox, of the Board of Education, and Mayor Calkins will be present, as well as a representation from the Netherwood Residents' Association.

SEVENTH EPISODE.

The Tormentors.

CHAPTER I.

THE Widow O'Keefe stooped quickly and snatched something from the floor while five strangers peered into every absurd nook and corner of the two rooms and bath which comprised the Widow O'Keefe's top floor suit. The object was a small snapshot of June.

The deserted husband of pretty June Warner was at the hall door with his hand reached out for the knob, and in another instant Ned Warner and June would have been face to face! In that instant the Widow O'Keefe whipped the snapshot under her apron, and the very swiftness of the motion struck into the corner of Ned Warner's restless eyes. He turned, and he and the father of June glanced at each other. There was something suspicious in the bent and warped and withered Widow O'Keefe and her tall slip of a son. Ned came abruptly from the door and renewed his search. At that very moment June, just outside, had paused on the third step from the bottom to retie the bow upon her saucy little slipper and to give it a vigorous pat to make it behave and stay in place.

Slim young Sammy O'Keefe walked to the window, whistling, and glanced out with an air of great indifference. On the other side of the street stood Officer Toole, and his eyes roved anxiously from window to window of the narrow, dingy slice of a house which was the Widow O'Keefe's. At sight of Sammy Officer Toole pointed energetically toward the door. He waved both arms and pointed toward the doorway.

Sammy then slipped quietly out of the room.

June! The listless Sammy used the next quickest method to wireless. With one noiseless spring he straddled the banister rail, whizzed around the curve and down to June, who was halfway up the stairs, jumped off with a footstep as light as a feather, grabbed the astounded girl by the wrist and dragged her down the steps at the risk of both their necks. Sammy shoved June into the second floor hall closet. Sammy locked the door and stuck the key in his pocket and set the springs in his thin legs to work and was sitting lazily on the top step, bored and whistling softly, when Ned Warner and Mr. and Mrs. John Moore and Bobby and Iris Blethering came out, Bobby extremely dejected and Iris explaining volubly that it was all a mistake. June couldn't possibly have been here. But she must have been, after all, because— Still, how could it be?

June in the dark closet, shut off from all light and sound, stood bewildered, her eyes distended in the darkness, while Ned stood not two feet away from her. He had paused before that very door, as if some delicate magnetism had caught and held him there. No trace of her anywhere; no trace of Marie, the French-Canadian maid with the high cheek bones; no trace of the mysterious black Vandyked man, whom none of them had cared to mention to the Widow O'Keefe, Gilbert Blye! Ned clinched his fists, and his brow grew black as his mind filled with the image of that dark, handsome face with its glowing eyes and suave smile. That image had never been absent from Ned's mind since the disappearance of his beautiful bride. A thousand times that succession of incidents had flashed upon his memory with vivid clearness—June asleep in the Pullman drawing room on their honeymoon trip, while he, up forward, happily smoked; the finding her gone after the train had left Tarnville; the discovery that she had been helped by the black Vandyked man to board a local headed to New York; Ned's chase after them in an express train, and his train pulling alongside them in the approach to the Grand Central station; the sight, through the windows of the parallel cars, of that suave stranger bending over June with his infernal smile, and her smiling up at him; Blye following June's taxi in another from the station, and Ned's fruitless pursuit in a third taxi; the chase out to Brynport that same night, when June had stolen her clothes and Marie; the return chase, where Ned had seen June and Marie step into Blye's luxurious limousine and whirl away with him! Everywhere that Ned had found a trace of June he had found a trace of Gilbert Blye, and he wished to live for one thing—to meet Blye face to face and with his bare hands strangle that scoundrel to death!

Ned became aware of the Widow O'Keefe eying him from midway of the stairs. She was a frail looking old woman, with her gnarled hands clasped before her, but her beady little eyes were as sharp as the unexpected fires from dull jewels, and there was not one move of Ned's party which escaped her. Sammy, still whistling with overnonchalance, was so persistently not gazing at the closet door that it was a wonder no one asked for the key.

"We're wasting our time," finally said Iris Blethering. "We're probably letting them get away." And June's friend took her husband with her. The rest of the party followed.

Meanwhile Marie, disguised in the suffocatingly tight black mourning outfit of the Widow O'Keefe, was many blocks out of the danger zone, smothering in a telephone booth and calling up the place where June had gone to work. Mrs. Villard was not in her beautiful home up the Hudson, nor was Miss June there. They had gone into the city, but the maid gave Marie a telephone number. Mrs. Villard answered that call from a gorgeously furnished room where half a dozen stunningly gowned young women sat smoking, and her kindly face showed immediate concern when she learned that June must not come home to the Widow O'Keefe's.

"Why?" she naturally wanted to know.

"Well, then I'll tell you." Marie threw her thick black veil over her shoulder for the twentieth time, and a drop of perspiration trickled down her nose. "I'm her maid Marie, and she mustn't come home."

"But she's already started," worried Mrs. Villard. "She's probably there by this time. Why mustn't she come home?"

"Has she?" And the voice of Marie cracked. "Oh! Goodby! How am I to get her away from there?"

"Wait a minute!" This seemed to be no time for asking questions. "I'll come down in my car!"

"Oh, yes, do!" gasped Marie, nearly pulling the transmitter off the wall. "Goodby! I have to hurry!"

"Wait a minute! Wait, Marie! Where am I to come?"

"Oh, yes!" And Marie gulped. "It's the Widow O'Keefe's, at the corner of Deshley street and Duck alley, right across from Tim Courky's saloon. Any policeman can tell you the place. Hurry!" And Marie, starting another seam in the Widow O'Keefe's mourning dress, plunged out of the telephone booth, battling for air.

A Severe Looking Man Came Out to Meet Them.

Mrs. Villard stood at the phone a moment, with a musing smile growing upon her lips; then she gave the number of a magnificent club. The man whom a brass buttoned page brought through the marble corridors from the leather hung library to answer the call wore a suave smile and a black Vandyke.

"This is Mrs. Villard, Gilbert," came the low, sweet voice. "I have something very important to tell you, June."

"Shall I stop at your club?"

"Please." Gilbert Blye walked out of the telephone booth, sent for his hat and sat in the reception room near the door.

The family limousine of the Moores had no sooner rolled away from the widow's house than Sammy O'Keefe unlocked the closet door in proud self approbation.

"What was it?" June asked.

"Your husband, miss." And the Widdow O'Keefe laughed her cackling triumph and rubbed her gnarled hands over each other. "It's small satisfaction he got out of me and Sammy with his pryin' and inquisitive"—

"Ned!" cried June, and she clutched at the banister rail. "He was here!"

"Right where you're standin', miss. And your father and mother and"—

"Daddy! Mummy!" The tears gathered.

"Don't you mind, darlin'," encouraged the widow heartily. "They got nothin' out of either Sammy or me. Sammy, I'm proud of you, boy. I didn't know you could lie so good, and I'll never believe anything you tell me again. And there was a couple of your friends, miss—hearty soul of a young woman that never left off talkin' or laughin' or cryin' or somethin' one minute after the other and her husband, a henpecked little fellow that'll be no trouble until he gets waked up some day; then watch out for his kind. My Dan was that way. I could bullyrag that poor devil night and day till I see the glint begin to come in his eye— Why, darlin', what's the matter? Sammy, you big simpleton, why don't you get Miss Junie a glass of water! And be quick, will you?"

Jabbering out all her pentup excitement, not a word of which June had heard, she helped the colorless, half fainting girl up to her own rooms and mothered around her with a solicitude which was fully as lively as her tongue and far more sincere.

June might as well have been alone for all that she was conscious of the O'Keefe ministrations. They had been here, here in these very rooms, Ned, her father and mother! How she longed for them! How she wished they had found her! And a great flood of love surged up in her. She must see them! She must go to them at once! She must give up this foolish flight for a romantic ideal and be just a girl, and return to her own people, and be petted and forgiven, and be clasped in Ned's strong arms, never to leave them again! She rose with a wild impulse to hurry straight after them, but her knees bent under her. She had not known how much this sudden emotion had taken away her strength. The Widow O'Keefe pressed her tenderly back in her chair, and Sammy held a glass to her lips and spilled a trickle of water on her chin. She smiled at them both, for she was very fond of them; then the widow drove Sammy from the room and put June on the bed, and took off her little shoes, and drew the blinds, and left her alone to cry it out. And the Widow O'Keefe rasped her own eyes with lumpy knuckles as she closed the door.

June sat suddenly bolt upright and dried her eyes and hunted for her shoes. How bare everything looked in the room! Why, everything was gone! And where was Marie?

Marie had just turned the corner of Officer Dowd's post when there came swiftly toward her a family limousine which she remembered with a jump in her breast.

Suddenly there was a loud yelp of joy from a handsome collie sitting beside the driver, and Bouncer, who never left his seat when in the city, was halfway to the curb in one spring. With a shriek Marie headed for the nearest alley, Bouncer barking happily at her heels.

Five voices yelled for Jerry to stop, but it was unnecessary. That good chauffeur had used both brakes, and the Moores, the Bletherings and Ned Warner all tried to crowd out of the door. While the agitated Bobby blocked the doorway Ned rushed after Marie, but he suddenly found himself breastbone to breastbone with Officer Dowd.

"Excuse me," said Officer Dowd, still breasting him. "Was it you or me that's in the road?"

"I want to speak to that young woman!" And Ned tried to pass around Officer Dowd as "that young woman," accompanied by the leaping Bouncer, turned swiftly into a narrow alley. The last flash of her was a red and white striped stocking.

Officer Dowd was at this moment one of the most awkward men on the force. He had tried to shove around Ned, and now they met again, breastbone to breastbone.

"Get out of my way!" yelled Ned.

"Who you orderin'!" retorted Officer Dowd.

"She was a servant of mine," said Moore.

"Did she steal anything?" demanded Dowd.

"No."

"Then it's none of my business." And Officer Dowd looked toward the alley with a twinkle dawning in his eye. Marie knew every turn and twist within ten blocks of the Corners. "Go on and speak to the lady."

They went down to the alley mouth and looked in. There was a wilderness of crooked byways and no Marie visible.

"Where to, sir?" asked Jerry.

"The Widow O'Keefe's!" declared Ned.

CHAPTER II.

MARIE dashed into the O'Keefe house as fast as her red and white striped legs would carry her. Fast as she was, Bouncer was six springs ahead of her, and she had no sooner started to open the door than he burst out of her grasp and was across the floor and up on the bed and trampling all over June, barking in her ear.

"Bouncer!" sobbed June. "Bouncer!"

"Will you be still?" screamed Marie to the dog. "Miss June, dear, get up! Mrs. O'Keefe, hide us! They're coming!"

"I don't think I shall need to wait."

"Coming!" June was startled.

"I'll hide you," offered Sammy from the doorway. "Come right here!" And he rushed across to the side window.

It was but a few seconds' work to transfer June across the fire escape platform connecting with the McPherson house. The family limousine containing the Moores, the Bletherings and Ned Warner, came spinning around the corner!

"My wife is here!" declared Ned Warner to Mrs. O'Keefe, with conviction. "I want her!"

"Come right in and get her," invited the widow, flinging wide the door. "It you take her along this time you won't be a nuisance to me any more today."

But their second search revealed nothing.

In the meantime Mrs. Villard had stopped in front of Gilbert Blye's magnificent club. A short, wide, fat man was leaning against the lamppost smoking a short, thick cigar when Mrs. Villard's chauffeur jumped down and ran into the club, but he paid little attention until Gilbert Blye came out then the short, wide man pulled his slouch hat over one eye, dropped his cigar and with remarkable agility beat both Blye and the chauffeur to the car where he opened the door obsequiously. Blye and Mrs. Villard talked in low, quick tones for a moment.

"At Pinknam's, then, you think, in half an hour." And to Mrs. Villard's nod he lifted his hat, and the car drove away. Blye gave the fat man a quarter and went back into his club.

The fat man stuck the coin into his pocket, went to a telephone and hoarsely called for a number.

A sharp faced woman with a long nose and high arched eyebrows answered that call.

"Say, this is Bill Wolf," reported the thick one. "Say, I got him! Do you know where Pinknam's is?"

"Yes!" unexpectedly shrilled Mrs. Blye.

"Well, your husband's gonna be there in half an hour and meet the gal!"

"June Warner?" snapped Mrs. Blye violently.

"That's the name," said Bill Wolf. "I heard him say it half a dozen times."

Honoria was hastily preparing to go out when a sudden thought came to her, and she called up Ned Warner. He had just arrived at the lonely apartments which June and he had fitted up with such care.

"Well, Mr. Warner," came the parrot-like voice of Honoria, "your wife is to meet my husband in the offices of Benjamin Pinknam, in the Bond Securities building, in half an hour."

The coast was quite clear when Mrs Villard arrived opposite the O'Keefe house.

Sammy came out on the doorstep.

"Do you know where Mrs. O'Keefe lives? This lady says she has a young lady friend stoppin' there, and"—

"Is it Mrs. Villard?" asked Sammy, and he exchanged a pleasant smile with the lady.

"Yes, indeed. Is Miss June at home?"

"No," he grinned, "but you come right in."

The coast was still clear when, a few minutes later, Mrs. Villard and June and Marie and Bouncer and a huge bundle of clothes came out of the passageway between the O'Keefe and McPherson houses and climbed into the car.

In front of one of the tallest of those mighty towers which commerce has reared as monuments to her imperious sway Mrs. Villard led June through portals of a majesty which would have graced a cathedral in older days. June, lost in the beauty of this entrance, did not notice a peculiar circumstance. Mrs. Villard had dismissed her car, sending Marie and Bouncer home with the clothes.

She hurried straight back to the elevators with June and shot up to the eleventh floor, where they entered a suit of offices furnished with the heavy richness of a club or a millionaire bachelor's quarters. Mrs. Villard on announcing her name was shown at once into a private reception room. A severe looking man came out to meet them, a hard man, one with a smileless face and a metallic looking nose and chin.

"I'll see you in just a moment, Mrs. Villard," he said in an unbending voice, and his chill gray eye, roving to June, speculated appreciatively upon that very pretty young person.

There swept into the reception room a woman who almost stopped June's breath. She was startlingly handsome, with a skin like velvet, a complexion of exquisite tinting, a facial contour without a flaw. Her nose was perfectly modeled, her eyes were full and large and round and clear as crystal, and she held her head tilted backward at a slight angle which was the perfection of insolence. She was extravagantly gowned and glittering with jewels, but the most remarkable thing in connection with her was the transformation in the severe man. He had been changed from metal into wax; his eyes had come to life and on his lips a smile.

"Why, my dear," he said, "this is an unexpected pleasure. May I ask you to wait just a moment?" And he glanced apprehensively toward his private office, where a small, impatient man, with his gloved hands clasped on a cane, sat nervously.

"I don't think I shall need to wait." And the woman glanced around the reception room. Her glance swept just above the head of Mrs. Villard, but it swept downward as it came to June. She calmly lifted her pearl handled lorgnette, opened it with a snap and surveyed the girl from head to foot with a cold appraisement of that beautiful young person's charms. She swept her gaze to her beaming husband. "I shall need some money," she remarked, and there was an additional insolence in her having made herself oblivious to the fact that there were strangers present.

"With pleasure, my dear." And Mr. Pinknam was as obsequious as if he had been a salesman whom the woman had just favored with a large order. "How much shall it be?"

"Ten thousand," she said calmly.

The impatient little man leaned forward and started to talk as Pinknam sat down at his desk, but no attention was paid to his eager renewal of the conversation, and he died into fuming silence while the check was written. Mrs. Pinknam stood in disdainful repose.

"I have made it twenty," Mr. Pinknam observed, using the ingratiating tones as he tried to smile.

"Thank you," she said and, folding the check, dropped it into a little gold purse as if it were a trifle of vulgar insignificance. If the man had thought by his eagerness and generosity to strike from her any spark of gratitude or affection he had been mistaken, for, having thanked him in a manner which made the thanks themselves an insult, she bade him goodby and swept from the office. And the man? He beamed after her!

Mrs. Villard and June breathed a sigh of relief. They were invited into a handsome inner office. The insolently handsome woman! In Mrs. Pinknam the runaway bride had recognized another and a startling phase of her own problem. Here it was again—the same, never ending condition of the man owning all and the woman none, of the man giving and the woman receiving.

Suddenly June gave a start of mingled surprise and fright. In the doorway stood the darkly handsome, suavely smiling Gilbert Blye!

CHAPTER III.

GILBERT BLYE suavely approached June, and Mrs. Villard went into an adjoining office to talk with Mr. Pinknam. Following Blye came Orin Cunningham, Tommy Thomas and a white haired man with heavy lidded eyes.

Then June received the great shock of her life—Blye offered her a trip on a private yacht. He had a photo of it with him. She gasped in amazement and refused it.

Then Cunningham drew out a check book and asked her how much money she needed. June's cheeks paled. She burst into the office where Mrs. Villard sat with the iron Pinknam.

"Did you bring me here to be tormented by those people?" she demanded. Her cheeks were flaming, her eyes snapping.

Mrs. Villard hesitated a moment.

"Did you?" insisted June. "If so I shall resign!"

"Why, no, child," returned Mrs. Villard rising and holding out her hand

"I only want you to do the things best for you to do."

"I'm going!" June suddenly decided.

June, followed by Mrs. Villard, sailed through the magnificent reception room and into the hall. Blye and his companions followed them.

At that moment Ned Warner's taxicab drew up in front of the Bond Securities building, and close behind it came the electric of Honoria Blye, that lady driving it herself, bolt upright.

June darted into the first elevator, and her pursuers crowded in after her. Mrs. Villard put an arm around June in a corner of the elevator, and there were tears in her eyes as she talked to the distracted girl. It was that which brought sympathy to June. It was her greatest weakness, sympathy.

and by the time they reached the ground floor she had consented to return to Pinknam's with Mrs. Villard. She would not talk to [illegible], however, and they very [illegible] held their peace.

As they emerged on the main floor, however, Cunningham turned to her with twinkling joviality in his eyes and, leaning over, whispered something into her ear just as she was about to step into the adjoining upward bound elevator.

At that very instant Ned Warner strode into the rotunda, closely followed by Honoria Blye. He saw his beautiful bride in the company of the black Vandyked man, who was watching her with that suave smile upon his dark, handsome face, while a debonair white mustached man bent over her familiarly and whispered in her ear. He saw June blush; he saw her step back; then the lady with her drew her into the elevator. Blye and the others crowded after her, and as Ned raced vengefully through the corridor, with the shrieking Honoria behind him, the door closed with a bang, and the car shot upward.

They rushed into the next car, Ned black browed and silent, and the shrill Honoria jabbering incessantly. The car had scarcely started to move when a sudden idea came to Ned, and he turned to Mrs. Blye with the first words he had spoken to her.

"We might miss them," he snapped. "They may have seen us and not go to the office you named. I'll go back down and wait."

As they left the elevator at the eleventh floor the door of a down car clanged. If Ned had got out at the first stop, which was the ninth floor, he would have caught that down car.

Gilbert Blye Was Enjoying That Chase Immensely.

But more than that. He would have come face to face with June and the one person whom of all the people in this world he most longed to meet, Gilbert Blye.

June, who had burst from her tormentors at the ninth floor, stepped into the down car which Ned two floors above had just missed. Mrs. Villard, still pleading, followed her, and Blye's audacious crew laughingly joined them.

Two down cars shot by Ned, and by the time he reached the main floor the faces for which he was watching were lost in the throng at the door. He might even then have distinguished his runaway bride and the man with the black Vandyke had he looked in that direction, but he did not expect to see them there. He expected to see them coming through the open door of an elevator, the girl whom he loved above everything in the world and the scoundrel whom he intended to strangle to death.

June meantime had hailed a taxi. She saw standing in front of the door the luxurious limousine of Gilbert Blye and understood why Mrs. Villard had dismissed her own car.

"So Mr. Blye was to take us home!" she hotly charged.

"Don't, child!" begged Mrs. Villard, beginning to be as much distracted as June. "Let's go home." And, stepping in the taxi with June, she gave a sharp direction to the driver. "Don't you dare follow!" she ordered Blye and his companions.

The tormentors laughed and walked forward to Blye's car.

Uptown on busy Broadway sped June and Mrs. Villard, and by the time they had reached Columbus circle June's suspicions of Mrs. Villard were allayed.

Through beautiful Central park with its branches interlaced against the wintry sky, and now June was beginning to feel a little more kindly toward the vivacious brunette, Tommy Thomas.

On Spuyten Duyvil parkway a luxurious limousine had halted, and as the taxi passed it rolled out and followed. In it sat June's determined pursuers, and on the dark, handsome face of Gilbert Blye was again that suave smile. June turned chill with nervous apprehension.

Suddenly Blye leaned forward with an oath, and there was a shriek from the vivacious brunette. Something seemed to be wrong with the steering wheel of the taxi, for, as it went up the hill ahead of them, it wabbled to and fro uncertainly, dangerously near the crumbling bank which was protected by a flimsy rail, and there was a curve ahead!

There was a cry of horror from them all as the taxi at the curve ran up the embankment, paused at the brink for a moment and then with its precious burden inside crashed through the rail and plunged down the hill!

PEG O' MY HEART

CHAPTER XX.

A Real Friend.

A DOOR slammed loudly in the distance as Peg talked to Jerry. Peg distinctly heard her aunt's voice and Alaric's. In a moment she became panic stricken. She made one bound for the top stairs and sprang up them three at a time. At the top she turned and warned him:

"Don't tell any one ye saw me."

"I won't," promised the astonished young man.

But their secret was to be short lived. As Peg turned Ethel appeared at the top of the stairs, and as she descended, glaring at Peg, the unfortunate girl

They all greeted Jerry warmly.

Mrs. Chichester was particularly gracious.

"So sorry we were out. You will stay to lunch?"

"It is what I came for," replied Jerry heartily. He slipped his arm through Alaric's and led him up to the windows.

"Why, Al, your cousin is adorable!" he said enthusiastically.

"What!" Alaric gasped, in horror. "You've met her?"

"Indeed I have. And we had the most delightful time together. I want to see a great deal of her while she's here."

"You're joking?" remarked Alaric cautiously.

"Not at all. She has the frank, honest grip on life that I like better than anything in mankind or womankind. She has made me a convert to home rule already."

The luncheon gong sounded in the distance. Alaric hurried to the door.

"Come along, every one! Lunch!"

"Thank goodness!" cried Jerry, joining him. "I'm starving."

Peg came quietly from behind the newel post, where she had been practically hidden, and went straight to Jerry and, smiling up at him, her eyes dancing with amusement, said:

"So am I starvin' too. I've not had a bite since 6."

"Allow me," and Jerry offered her his arm.

Mrs. Chichester quickly interposed.

"My niece is tired after her journey. She will lunch in her room."

"Oh, but I'm not a bit tired," ejaculated Peg anxiously. "I'm not tired at all, an' I'd much rather have lunch down here with Mr. Jerry."

The whole family were aghast.

Ethel looked indignantly at Peg.

Mrs. Chichester ejaculated, "What?"

Alaric, almost struck dumb, fell back upon "Well, I mean to say!"

"And you shall go in with Mr. Jerry," said that young gentleman, slipping Peg's arm through his own. Turning to Mrs. Chichester, he asked her: "With your permission we will lead the way. Come, Peg," and he led her to the door and opened it.

Peg looked up at him, a roguish light dancing in her big, expressive eyes.

"Thanks. I'm not so sure about that wager of yours. I think yer life is safe. I want to tell ye ye've saved mine." She put one hand gently on her little stomach and cried, "I am so hungry me soul is hangin' by a thread."

"Disgraceful!" ventured Ethel.

"Awful!" said the stunned Alaric.

"She must be taken in hand at once!" came in firm tones from Mrs. Chichester. "She must never be left alone again. Come quickly before she can disgrace us any further today."

The days that followed were never to be forgotten ones for Peg. Her nature was in continual revolt. The teaching of her whole lifetime she was told to correct. Everything she said, everything she looked, everything she did was wrong.

Tutors were engaged to prepare her for the position she might one day enjoy through her dead uncle's will. They did not remain long. She showed either marked incapacity to acquire the slightest veneer of culture—else it was pure willfulness.

The only gleams of relief she had were on the occasions when Jerry visited the family. Whenever they could avoid Mrs. Chichester's watchful eyes they would chat and laugh and play like children.

Her letters to her father were at first very bitter regarding her treatment by the family. Indeed, so resentful did they become that her father wrote to her in reply urging her, if she was so unhappy, to at once return to him on the next steamer. The month she had promised to stay was drawing to an end. But one more day remained. It was to be a memorable one for Peg.

Jerry had endeavored at various times to encourage her to study. One day he gave her a large, handsomely bound volume and asked her to read it at odd times and he would examine her in it when she had mastered its contents. She opened it wonderingly and found it to be "Love Stories of the World."

It became Peg's treasure. She kept it hidden from every one in the house. She made a cover for it out of a piece of cloth, so that no one could see the ornate binding. She would read it at night in her room, by day out in the fields or by the sea. The book was a revelation to her. It gave all her imagination full play. Through its pages treaded a stately procession of kings and queens—Wagnerian heroes and heroines, Shakespearean creations, melodious in verse, and countless others.

All through the month Christian Brent was a frequent visitor. If Peg only despised the Chichesters she positively loathed Brent. Peg was waiting for a really good chance to find out Mr. Brent's real character. The opportunity came.

On the night of the last day of the trial month Peg was lying face downward on a sofa reading her treasure when she became conscious of some one being in the room watching her. She started up in a panic, instinctively hiding the book behind her. She found Brent staring down at her in open admiration. Something in the intentness of his gaze caused her to spring to her feet.

"The book must be absorbing What is it?" he asked.

Peg faced him, the book clasped in both of her hands behind her back, her eyes flashing and her heart throbbing.

"You mustn't be angry, child. What is it, eh? Something forbidden?" and he leered knowingly at her. Then he made a quick snatch at the book, saying, "Show it me!"

Peg ran across the room and, turning up a corner of the carpet, put the book under it, turned back the carpet, put her foot determinedly on it and turned again to face her tormentor.

Brent went rapidly across to her. The instinct of the chase was quick in his blood.

"A hiding place, eh? Now you make me really curious. Let me see." He again made a movement toward the hidden book.

Peg clinched both of her hands into little fists and glared at Brent, while her breath came in quick, sharp gasps.

"I love spirit!" cried Brent.

Then he looked at her charming dress, at her stylish coiffure, at the simple spray of flowers at her breast. He gave an ejaculation of pleasure.

"What a wonderful change in a month! You most certainly would not be sent to the kitchen now. Do you know you have grown into a most attractive young lady? You are really delightful angry. And you are angry, aren't you? And with me, eh? I'm so sorry if I've offended you. Let us kiss and be friends." He tried to take her in his arms. Peg gave him a resounding box on the ear. The door opened, and Ethel came into the room.

Peg hurried out through the windows.

Brent turned to Ethel.

"My dear!"

Ethel looked coldly at him.

"Why did she run away?"

Brent smiled easily and confidently:

"I'd surprised one of her secrets, and she flew into a temper.

"Secrets?" was all Ethel said.

"Yes. See." He walked across to the corner and turned back the carpet and, kneeling down, searched for the book, found it and held it up triumphantly. "Here!" He stood up and opened the book and read the title page:

"'Love Stories of the World.' 'To Peg from Jerry.' Oho!" cried Mr. Brent. "Jerry! Eh? No wonder she didn't want me to see it! Jerry! So that's how the land lies! Romantic little child!"

Ethel looked steadily at him.

"Why don't you go after her?" and she nodded in the direction Peg had gone.

"Ethel!" he cried, aghast.

"She is new and has all the virtues."

"I assure you"— he began. "Really—Ethel"—

"Were you 'carried away' again?" she sneered.

"Surely you're not jealous—of a—a—child?"

"No. I don't think it's jealousy," said Ethel slowly.

"Then what is it?"

"Disgust!" She shrugged her shoulders contemptuously. "Now I understand why the scullery is sometimes the rival of the drawing room. The love of change!"

He turned away from her.

Ethel watched him quietly.

"Chris, come here!"

He turned to her.

"There! It's all over! I suppose I have been a little hard on you." She held out her hand.

"My nerves have been rather severely tried this past month," Ethel went on. "Put a mongrel into a kennel of thoroughbreds and they will either destroy the intruder or be in a continual condition of unsettled, irritated intolerance. That is exactly my condition."

Brent sat beside her and said softly:

"Then I've come in time?"

Ethel smiled.

"So did I, didn't I?" and she indicated the window through which Peg ran after assaulting Brent.

"Don't! Please don't!" he pleaded.

"Very well," replied Ethel complacently, "I won't."

"I'm sorry, Chris," remarked Ethel finally, after some moments had passed. "A month ago it wouldn't have mattered so much. Just now—it does. It's been horrible here."

"A month of misery for me, too," replied Brent passionately.

"I'm going away—out of it. Tomorrow!" he added. "To Petersburg—Moscow—Siberia"—

"Oh, the cold places!" She paused, then asked, "Going alone?" He whispered almost into her ear:

"Unless some one—goes with me! Will—you—go?" And he waited breathlessly.

She thought a moment, looked at him again and said quietly, "Chris, I wish I'd been here when you called—instead of that—brat."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"What does this mean?" and Mrs. Sampson laid her hand on the heaving shoulder of her friend and gave it a consoling little stroke. The bowed head was not lifted, but a groping hand was reached out in welcome.

"Tell me your trouble," urged the friend. "Perhaps I can help you."

"Oh, there is no help," came in muffled tones from the sobbing woman.

The neighbor drew up a chair and sat down, saying softly, "Sympathy always helps."

The sobs quieted under the comforting ministrations, and the tear-stained face was raised.

"Have you heard that Grace is going to leave me?"

"No; where is she going?"

"She is going back to Jethro; going to marry him again. I had rather see her in her coffin. How she dare trust herself to him the second time, after her bitter experience, I can't see."

"I never knew anything of her reasons for leaving him; was it some outsider making trouble?" asked Mrs. Sampson.

"It was a case of stenographer," the grandmother dropped her hands despairingly into her lap. "I never liked Jethro; never felt that he could be trusted, and events proved that I was right. After the baby was born, just when a man would be expected to be awake to his responsibilities, he began to spend his evenings with this girl; some said to drink, too. You may know things got pretty bad when Grace was willing to leave him. After the divorce he went to Arizona and braced up. Grace has a cousin living near Bisbee, and he kept her informed of his doings. I so [illegible] times think she might have got over caring for him if [illegible] kept him in her mind. Of cour Grace asked to keep her informe Charlie says he has been as straigl as a string and is doing well."

"How long has he been there? asked the interested listener.

"He went when the baby was seve months old. She is four now."

"He surely is not keeping straigh because of the newness of his reso lutions; maybe he is truly reformed." Mrs. Sampson leaned comfortabl back in her chair.

"About a year ago he began writ ing to Grace and now he wants he to go there and marry him." Mrs Linden looked dismally out of th window.

"Of course if Grace loves him tha is the only thing that will make he happy," argued the friend.

"So she says, but I can't feel the her happiness is any safer this tim than it was before. I suppose shouldn't feel as I do about it. Grac and the little girl are to meet him i Kansas City, where they are to b married."

* * * * * *

"Oh, Mrs. Sampson," said Mr Linden, some months later, "I war to read you part of Grace's lette You comforted me so much tha morning you came in and found m crying just before Grace went t Jethro. I want you to know wha she says. 'I have never been sorr for the decision I made, dear mother Jethro has been goodness itself. People here think Jethro ma ried a widow, which of course is tru in a sense, and he laughs abou caring more for his second wife tha his first. You must come and see m lovely new bungalow and meet m friends. Mother dear, one bad fa is not final and a little faith w help a man make a new start. have never regretted trusting Jeth this time.'"

"I know how happy that mak you, dear friend," said Mrs. Sam son. "You must get down there a see them."

CARE OF HOUSE PLANTS IN WINTER.

If there is danger of their freezing move them from the window and wrap newspaper around them. Do not water them when very cold, as they will freeze sooner. Geraniums do not need as much water as begonias and fuchsias. When the pionettia is through blooming cut it back and place in a cool, dark room or cellar two months, then bring out and repot. They will blossom lovely the next winter. When hyacinths, tulips and narcissus are through blooming put them away the same way until the next winter. They will bloom again.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Blouses for boys from shirts that have become worn out around the neckbands but are otherwise good. Lay front of blouse pattern on fronts of shirt below the worn place; back of blouse pattern on back of shirt, high enough to include yoke; sleeve pattern on lower part of shirt sleeve, upper part of sleeves to be used for collar—or a new white collar and cuffs could be attached. These blouses are quickly made, as the buttonholes and buttons are already made, with the exception of the two lower ones on front of waist.

THE TABLE.

Oyster Tarts—Line muffin pans with pie crust and bake. You can fill them whenever you are ready to serve. For the filling, take oysters, salt, pepper, butter size of an egg, one tablespoon flour; mix the tablespoon of flour in a little milk. Take juice of one lemon. Place filling in pan and let it come to a boil.

Graham Bread—Two cups sweet milk, two cups graham flour, two cups wheat flour, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon soda.

Steamed Fruit Pudding—One egg, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoon butter, two-thirds cup milk, pinch salt, one teaspoon baking powder, two cups flour. Put fruit in cups, batter on top. This makes six cups. Steam.

"Never Fail Cookies"—Two cups coffee. A (light brown) sugar creamed with one cup butter and lard, two eggs well beaten, half cup sweet milk, one teaspoon soda, two teaspoons baking powder, sufficient flour to roll.

Chocolate Cookies — Four eggs, one cup sugar, three squares unsweetened chocolate melted, one cup butter, three cups flour, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract; flour sufficient to roll very thin.

Marshmallow Whip—Take 10-cent box marshmallows (be sure they are fresh), cut in halves, line bottom of glass dish. Whip one-half pint cream, pour over marshmallow; stir in one cup walnuts chopped fine. Place a few marshmallows on top and sprinkle lightly with the chopped nuts. Serve very cold. This dessert is very simple to make; can be made in the morning and placed on ice until wanted.

Apple Pudding—Three-fourths cup sugar, one egg, one-half cup milk, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, 1½ cups flour or enough to make a stiff batter. Mix in order given, sifting flour, baking powder and salt together. Place six tart apples sliced in baking dish, with one-half cup water and sprinkling of cinnamon or any preferred flavor. Cover with the batter and steam one hour. To be eaten with milk or cream or vanilla sauce: One-half cup sugar, one cup boiling water, one tablespoon cornstarch, two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon vanilla; cook in double boiler.

Eggless Fruit Cake—One level teaspoon soda, one-half level teaspoon salt, one level teaspoon cinnamon, one-half level teaspoon allspice, one-half level teaspoon ginger, one-fourth nutmeg grated, one cup sour milk, one-half cup shortening, one cup brown sugar, one-half cup figs cut small, one-half cup molasses, 2¾ cups flour, 1½ cups raisins chopped, one-half cup citron sliced. First mix soda and milk, then add other ingredients. Bake 1½ hours slowly.

Layer Cake Without Eggs—Cream together two cups sugar, one-half cup butter and lard blended, two cups sweet milk, four cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder. Beat very thoroughly. Flavor and bake in layers; makes a nice white cake and a large one.

"THE $20,000,000 MYSTERY"

Formerly Called ZUDORA

Thirteenth Episode Shown at Proctor's Theatre, March 3, 1915.

"THE SECRET OF DR. MUNN'S SANATARIUM."

The incarceration of Howard, the mine superintendent, and Zudora in the sanatorium, as set forth in Episode Twelve, and their subsequent release made Madame Duval still more eager to accomplish her evil ends. This the more so as it is decided to send Jim Baird to South Africa to examine the Zudora mine properties and, if possible reclaim them for the rightful owner. But Baird has hardly left New York, before Zudora and Howard, the latter a very ill man after his rough treatment at the hands of Dr. Munn, suddenly disappear again. Tom Hunt and John Storm are at their wits' ends, and fruitlessly search everywhere for the missing pair, never suspecting that the subtle mind of Madame Duval has arranged for their imprisonment in the sanatorium again, as she realizes that this is practically the last place where Hunt and Storm would expect to find them.

In the meantime Baird has arrived in South Africa. Nor is Bruce, Madame Duval's able lieutenant, far behind him, for a few days later he, too, reaches the mine. He does not know that Baird has recognized him and that he is watching his every move. It happens that a short time later one of the Kaffir miners unearths a sixty-carat diamond—a gem of purest water as expert examination proves, and Bruce, homesick for the joys of Broadway, cables Madame Duval and Captain Radcliffe of the find, announcing that he will bring the diamond to New York in person. That night, as Bruce smokes his cigar, Baird is watching the waste-basket, where he has hidden the treasure trove. As soon as Bruce falls asleep Baird climbs in at the window, obtains the diamond, and escapes into the darkness, but not before Bruce, awaking, fires at him with a shotgun.

Unfortunately, Bruce has recognized him, and so when Baird takes ship for New York, almost the first person he encounters on board is that worthy. Together they are fellow-passengers during the long voyage. As Baird has already notified Hunt and Storm that he has the gem and knows they will meet him at the pier, he has scant fears that the band will be able to trap him. He little realizes the desperate character of Madame Duval and her aids.

Meanwhile Storm and Tom Hunt have been able to gain no trace of Zudora, nor the vanished Howard, and it is with downcast faces that they meet Jim Baird at the steamship dock. In the confusion, Bruce deftly snatches Baird's satchel, which contains the precious diamond, and dashes through the crowd. He springs into a taxi, which is driven by one of the gang, and dashes off at top speed. But he is not to escape so easily, for Hunt, Storm and Baird leap into another machine and start in pursuit.

Then follows a mad race between the two machines. Soon the city is left behind and Bruce's vehicle turns into a road, which the trio behind recognize. A minute later it stops at the driveway of the sanatorium and Bruce dashes into the house. But his pursuers are too close behind to enable him to escape without a struggle, and the same thought has struck them all. Perhaps Zudora is within these wicked walls? Baird flings aside the attendants, who would stop him at the door, while Storm and Hunt force their way in through a window. Hurriedly they make a search of the building, finding Zudora and Howard imprisoned in an inner room, and while Storm carries her half-fainting form to the limousine, Baird and Hunt continue their quest for Bruce, who has disappeared in the melee. At last, however, they are compelled to acknowledge defeat. Bruce has got clean away with the diamond.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Can You Guess It?

And did you guess the animal I gave you yesterday?
It was a BAT—that wasn't hard to tell.
And now I'm going to give you one that doesn't live round here,
And so you do not know it quite so well.

The animal I have in mind is something like a goat,
And lives away up in the mountains high;
It scrambles up the steepest cliff so very agilely,
You really couldn't catch it if you'd try.

It has a splendid pair of horns, which curl back at the top;
Its tail is short and black, and do you know,
Its hair is brown in winter, and is grayish in the spring?
That is most curious, but it's really so.

You'd be surprised if you could see the little creature jump
Across a chasm that would take your breath,
And it can calmly walk along beside a precipice,
Where you and I would 'most be scared to death.

It's very fleet and graceful, and I'm sure that you have seen
Its picture in your big geography.
I'll tell its name tomorrow; in the meantime I will give
A little hint—its name begins with "C."

PICTURES MANY BEAUTIFUL HOMES

Evarts Tracy Lectures On "Contemporary Architecture.

CONTRASTS IN TYPES

Speaker Says That Plainfield Has No Real Fine Architecture Although the Modern Houses Now Being Built Are Attractive.

"Contemporary American Architecture" was the subject of an illustrated lecture given before the members of the art department of the Monday Afternoon Club and their friends, in the parish house of the Congregational church, yesterday afternoon. Evarts Tracy, of Hillside avenue, the well-known architect, was the lecturer.

"American architecture is most interesting," said the speaker; "England, France and Germany even admit this. We are developing an architecture which was begun years ago by the early man. When man first came on this earth his first thought was for food and then shelter, and we have our egrliest signs of architecture in these rude shelters. First graphic arts were mere scratches on rocks. Ruins of architecture have told us more about ancient people than history or books."

Mr. Tracy's talk was divided into three divisions, namely, houses, churches and buildings, and each was illustrated by numerous slides.

"Our study of architecture was started at the Centennial Exposition in '76, and later at the Chicago Exposition," said Mr. Tracy. "From that time we were restrained in our style. The architecture of early days, which is commonly called Colonial, dates since the Revolutionary War, and should properly be called Georgian architecture. A great many of the government building at Washington are of the Georgian design, and the style is becoming a governmental one. The Georgian spirit prevailed in the plantation houses of the South, being simple in line and free of all the frill of the early period."

Mr. Tracy pictured many beautiful houses of the Georgian style, of the Italian-French design, Louis XIII. period and English architecture. The stiff formation in the homes of the Louis XIII. period contrast greatly with the beautiful artistic handling of the Italian-French era. The latter's gardens and flowers are kept up in grand style. In direct contrast to the above are the houses that are typically English in design, and which are built of red brick and white, very irregular, and with no sense of symmetry.

"We haven't many churches of real good architecture in this country, except the Georgian churches," continued the speaker. "We haven't the feeling for such cathedrals as the people of the Middle Ages, who were ruled by three ways, force, reason and emotion. Ninety-five per cent. of the population was illiterate and very difficult to arouse to reason, and the church, seeing this, ruled through the emotions. Being desirous to increase this rule, she devolved upon the idea of building magnificent churches, and in this way got the people to give their wealth for these fine structures."

"We have developed some Gothic architects who are truly in feeling with the architecture of that period," said Mr. Tracy, but the greatest difficulty that the architect experiences nowadays is to find an understanding craftsman, one who feels, and takes a heart interest in his work, and does not consider his pay envelope more than his duty. Another thing that confronts the architect is the conflicting desires between the architect and the property owner. People seldom consider the property, location and neighborhood when building, consequently all this devolves upon the architect. In the New England States we have the best craftsmen of the country.

"Plainfield has no real fine architecture," said Mr. Tracy, "although the modern houses that are going up nowadays are beautiful. The home of Frederick W. Yates approaches the most satisfactory type, although the residence of Dr. F. J. Hughes is also very interesting."

WHY MR. HOFFMAN SMILES.

Mr. and Mrs. Sylvanus Hoffman, of 674 West Front street, are the parents of twin children, a boy and a girl, born to them at noon today. Dr. P. B. Cregar declares both new arrivals to be bright and cheerful and giving promise of becoming typical West End residents. Mr. Hoffman is associated with his father, Henry H. Hoffman, in the carpentering contracting business.

B. A. M. BANQUET A NOTABLE EVENT

Commuters Met With Members of Thriving Organization at "Dollar Dinner."

MAYOR TOASTMASTER

Men Prominent In Municipal Work Delivered Appropriate After-dinner Remarks—110 Present—Association Work Lauded.

Men prominent in the promotion of Plainfield's business enterprises, the individuals behind the guns in the city's mercantile field, and their invited guests, including many of the "commuter element," attended the Dollar Dinner of the Plainfield Business Men's Association at the Waldorf, last night, the affair being one of the most successful of its kind ever conducted in this municipality. Included in the 110 diners, besides the local business men, were representatives of mercantile and professional life in the Metropolis, men who leave the city in the early morning hours and return late in the afternoon. The function was arranged primarily for the purpose of bringing the local business man and the commuter together and its success was even greater than was anticipated. On Saturday the committee deemed it advisable to discontinue the sale of tickets and indications at the Waldorf last night gave evidence of the fact that this precaution was a prudent one, as overflow tables had to be set on the first floor. The clergy as well as the laity was represented.

The speech-making was in keeping with the occasion, short after-dinner talks on subjects pertinent to the interests of the guests and members prevailing. Mayor Leighton Calkins presided as toastmaster and his introductory remarks indicate the impression the organization promoting the affair made in the eyes of the city's chief executive. He took occasion to laud the association for the novel idea it had hit upon in bringing the commuter and home tradesman together and classed the Business Men's Association as the liveliest civic body in the city of Plainfield. The Mayor again brought to the attention of the gathering the advisability of consolidating the various groups of civic workers in the city and suggested that the Business Men's Association be used as a nucleus around which one greater organization might be molded. The keynote of the Mayor's opening remarks was concentration of civic interests and he urged co-operation on the part of individual and group. Referring to the agitation launched by the Board of Trade for the publication of tax assessments in Plainfield, the Mayor said:

"I am not opposed to the plan but think it advisable to wait until experts go through our city government with a view to ascertaining where savings could be made and where new features could be injected. We are here as boosters, not knockers, and we have no axes to grind. I am trying to work out a business-like form of government in Plainfield and I want the help of the Business Men's Association. I want to organize the city for an economical expenditure of its funds and the survey I have suggested to the Common Council will go a long way toward bringing this about. It will not be a graft hunt and it will not cost the city one cent, for certain men have promised to "dig down" into their own pockets and supply the money needed. In Plainfield we haven't an auditing system that's worth the name, the present one being a waste of time and unbusiness-like. The tax rate is going up each year and it seems to me that the time has come for us to see whether or not we are properly organized. I want the business element more generally represented on the Board of Education, Library Board, Board of Health and other city departments. In the past there has been too great a tendency to divide this work among the commuter element, men who spend the larger part of their time out of the city.

"I am an advocate of 'Home Rule for Cities' in New Jersey and I would like to see Plainfield handling all of its own affairs without the intervention of State powers."

In concluding his talk Mayor Calkins commented on the idea of engaging a city manager at a salary of between $12,000 and $15,000 a year, and said that in his opinion this was the coming thing in city government. He said: "I believe that a city manager could run the city better than it is run by a Mayor and Council, and if the people of Plainfield wake up to this fact I am ready to resign my office of Mayor."

Former Mayor G. W. V. Moy said in part:

"The Business Men's Association is

WELSH AND FLATLEY FOILED THIS CROOK

Summit Man Taken Into Custody While Cutting Lock On Watchung Avenue Store.

Vigilance on the part of Patrolmen Martin Welsh and Martin Flatley at 2 o'clock this morning, caused the downfall of one Frank Kreyser, of Summit, who is thought by the police to have had designs of burglary on the bird store of Alber. Brooks, at 206 Watchung avenue. Kreyser has maintained a sulky attitude since his apprehension and when arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, to plead to a charge of attempted burglary, he failed to establish a successful alibi and was committed to the Union county jail at Elizabeth in default of $500 bond to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Welsh was patrolling Watchung avenue, near East Second street, when he heard a peculiar grating noise near the corner. Flatley happened along at the same instant and Welsh signalled to him to "close in on one side and he took the opposite corner. As the two bluecoats came together at Brooks' store door Kreyser made a wild break and flung himself unknowingly into the arms of the coppers.

Examination of the doorway indicated that the man had been chiseling away a portion of the door-lock preparatory to entering the store when the officers came along. Welsh held the man while Flatley searched him. This Kreyser resented and shoving his hands into his pocket he brought out a roll of bills in one and pushed a hard object down with the other. The second object turned out to be a long knife which was open in his pocket. This fell to the sidewalk, and when the patrolmen accused the man of carrying the weapon he denied ownership.

It is the belief of the police that the man had made careful plans for a haul at this spot and the timely intervention of the officers spoiled his prospects. Arraigned in court the prisoner would say nothing except that a sister of his lived at a certain address on West Third street. The place was visited by Roundsman Charles Flynn, who brought the woman to headquarters. She denied relationship.

G. N. BURNETT WEDS MISS MARY WESLEY

Miss Mary Wesley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wesley, of Mt. Kisco, N. Y., and George N. Burnett, of Watchung, were married, Saturday, at the Mt. Kisco Methodist church, Mt. Kisco, N. Y., parsonage, by the Rev. George E. Farrar. The wedding was a quiet one, and, after a short wedding trip, the couple will reside in Watchung, where Mr. Burnett has purchased the Burnett homestead.

Mr. Burnett is widely known throughout this city and borough, being engaged in the farming business in Watchung. Mr. Burnett was formerly superintendent of Rev. Dr. C. A. Eaton's farm and dairy at that place.

CITY'S OLDEST COLORED RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

Page Finney, aged 95 years who has been considered Plainfield's oldest colored resident since the death of Nelson Peterson, a few weeks ago, died early this morning at the home of Mrs. Sarah Scott, 617 South Second street. He had been in poor health for the past year. Mr. Finney was born in the South, where he was a slave previous to the Civil War and shortly after securing his freedom came to Plainfield. Many years ago he embarked in the ash carting business and he and his rig were known all over the city and borough. He was a member and faithful attendant at Bethel chapel for thirty years. There are no surviving relatives.

The funeral will be held at the undertaking parlors at 206 West Second street, Thursday afternoon at 2:30. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MISS MARY C. PARELLO.

Miss Mary Catherine Parello, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Parello, died in Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday afternoon. She was 12 years old. CIVIL WAR VETERAN DIES IN 85TH YEAR

Thomas R. Gregory Passed Away at His Home After a Brief Illness.

Thomas R. Gregory, a veteran of the Civil War, died early this morning at his home on East Second street following a brief illness. He was taken ill about a week ago, but his condition was not considered serious until late last night when apoplectic symptoms developed. Mr. Gregory was a native of England where he was born in 1835. He came to America when a young man and lived in various parts of New Jersey for many years, afterward going to South Dakota. He was a mason and building contractor and was quite successful. Nine years ago Mr. Gregory sold his business in South Dakota and came to Plainfield, continuing work here for about two years. Since that time has has led a retired life.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Mr. Gregory enlisted in Company A, 15th Regiment, of New Jersey, as a musician, and served from August, 1862, until mustered out in 1865. He was connected with a G. A. R. Post in South Dakota, but Winfield Scott Post will accord full military honors at his funeral. The only surviving relative is his widow, Mrs. Eliza J. Gregory.

The funeral will be held at his late home Friday afternoon at 2:30 and will be in charge of Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, of which Mr. Gregory was a member. Burial will be in Evergreen cemetery.

MEYER MIHALOWITZ WEDS DUNELLEN GIRL

Takes Miss Dora Victorson For His Bride at Attractive Ceremony.

Miss Dora Victorson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Victorson, of Dunellen, and Meyer Mihalowitz, an attorney, of Brooklyn, were married Sunday evening, at 6:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. Dr. Herman Martin, of Temple Sholem, Plainfield, officiated. The bride was gowned in white charmeuse, trimmed with chiffon. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white sweet peas. The ceremony was performed in the parlor of the home, which was attractively decorated. The Mendelssohn "Wedding March" was played by William Victorson, a brother of the bride. The bride was atended by the bridegroom's brother, David Mihalowitz. She was given in marriage by her father.

A reception was held in Walter G. Clawson's house on First street, Dunellen, where congratulations were offered and supper was served. During the evening Dr Martin made an appropriate address. The couple received many gifts. The honeymoon is being spent at Atlantic City.

THIEVES ENTERED DUNELLEN HOMES

Got Small Haul at One Place, But Were Frightened Away at the Second.

The homes of Councilman Richard M. Ryan and T. P. Stryker, which adjoin each other on First street, Dunellen, were entered early yesterday morning by thieves. Entrance was gained through a window of the sitting room of the Stryker house, which had been left unlocked. The thieves confined their activities to the first floor, which they ransacked, getting away with about $9 in cash, a dozen solid silver spoons, two pairs of kid gloves and a coat with valuable fur trimming belonging to Miss Edith Williams, of Roselle, who was visiting the Strykers.

The burglars overlooked a solid gold watch belonging to Miss Alice Stryker and some money. As they were departing they left, evidently as a joke, a sign-painted "Fritz's Ice Cream For Sale Here," on the front porch. The robbery was discovered by Mrs. Stryker when she came downstairs.

From the Stryker home the thieves went to the Ryan home where they gained entrance through a back kitchen window which had not been locked. The thieves were scared away here by James Ryan, a son. They departed without any booty, leaving a valuable coat of James Ryan's folded up on a chair and the drawer of a sideboard open. They had evidently just pulled the drawer out when they heard Mr. Ryan walking around upstaire, as its contents bore no signs of having been handled. In their hurried exit they left the window they had entered open. The police are working on the case.

ADVISES SULTAN TO SEEK PEACE

Prince Reported to Have Said It Is Only Way to Save Turkey.

BRITISH TAKE TRENCH

Rheims Again Bombarded By Germans—Latter Report Heavy Losses to French In Hand to Hand Fights.

Athens, March 2—According to reports received from Constantinople today, Prince Sabah Ed Din has telegraphed the Sultan urging him to conclude peace with the allies quickly in order to prevent catastrophe in Turkey.

The Turkish Government has decided to remove the capital to Konia, states a despatch from Constantinople to the Tribuna.

London, March 2 (Central News Cable)—"A party of the Princess Patricia's regiment of Canadian infantry captured and blew up a trench on the left wing of the British front," states Field Marshal Sir John French's semi-weekly communique issued this afternoon. "Our losses were trifling," the communique continues; "we gained ground steadily near La Basse by skilful trench work completely mastering the snipers. As a consequence our casualities have been much reduced. Our artillery at several points has forced the enemy's batteries to change position."

"Between the sea and the Aisne, the day was very calm. The enemy made an attack to the soutneast of St. Eliot, which is south of Ypres. It was repulsed by the English forces. In Champagne there was a new bombardment of Rheims, about 50 shells were fired despite the storm. Our progress between Perthes and Beausejour continued throughout all of yesterday, notably northwest of Perthes. Northeast of Mesnil, and north of Beausejour. As a result of this movement we hold the chief points parallel to our front of attack.

"It is now known that the forces of Prussian guard made a counter attack against us during the night from Sunday to Monday, suffered extremely heavy losses in the Argonne. In the sector of Bagatelle and Marie Therese there were combats waged with mines and by infantry in an advance trench which we had reoccupied after having abandoned it for a brief time. In the region of Vauquois we have advanced and held the ground despite two counter attacks and taken some prisoners."

Berlin, March 2 (by wireless)—The German statement issued today, says:

"Renewed attacks by strong French forces in the Champagne region have already broken down in most instances. The enemy's losses were enormous under our fire. In a few places there were hand to hand fights yesterday. In all of them our troops being victorious. They hold their positions firmly.

"In the Argonne the Germans captured several trenches. Eighty prisoner and five mine throwers were taken. Advantages gained by the Germans in the Vosges during the last few days have been maintained in spite of violent counter attacks. The French losses were especially heavy in an attack yesterday evening east of Celles.

"In the eastern theatre of war, Russian advances from the southeast and south of Augustowo forest failed. Night attacks made by the Russians northeast of Lomza and east of Plock were repulsed."

Washington, March 2—Owing to the ambiguity of the British and French notes announcing the blockade of Germany this Government will not issue any notification to American shipping, aside from the fact that the blockade has been declared. American vessels attempting to reach Germany will do so at their own risk.

Stylish Reliable

PRESTIGE

Just as one affiliates with a certain church, or lodge, or school, so do they eventually pin their faith to some one clothing store, in which to do the bulk of their trading.

This is both right—and fair—for as they come to know the store better, their interest in it increases and develops—it becomes THEIR store, in more ways than one.

To gather about this business the number of people who enter its portals daily, and link to it their faith and trade means a Prestige we highly treasure and greatly revere.

It spurs us daily to greater effort—to make the service of the store all it possibly should be.

We move to our own building about April first. The same methods that builded for success "here" will follow us "there."

America's First Color Card

Inspired, primarily, by Patriotism, it has been produced in an effort to provide America with a Color Card as authoritative as those hitherto published in Paris.

The Card has developed normally—along the lines of the usual card brought out by the French silk weavers in co-operation with leading dyers and silk weavers in America, and by inspiration from our own original sources.

"Wanamaker Silk of Life"

Water-Spot Proof

More than 50 colors in this new silk, including white, ivory, black, etc.

"Wanamaker Silk of Life" gets its name from the French Soie de Vie, and is so called because it will wear longer than almost any other silk we know.

It is like the fluer de soie originally brought from France and now imitated by many American silk weavers and called "fleur de jeunesse," and other trade names.

"Wanamaker Silk of Life," however, is made in his American mills by the original creator of the French fleur de soie.

It may be used for gowns for every hour in the day or evening—from the simple tub morning dress to the frivolous little crinoline dance frock or dignified opera gown.

It is equally desirable for tub skirts, dress blouses, negligees, tea gowns, petticoats, lingerie—and men will want "Silk of Life" for shirts and pajamas.

Priced reasonably to meet all the needs of every-day life—$2 yard. 40 in. wide.

Another Wanamaker Origination

has already taken the great silk wearing public by storm.

Orders from other stores are coming in by telegram and cable.

"Independence Blue" is shown also in the "Wanamaker Silk of Life"—plain colors and in fashionable stripes and coin dots.

Samples of "Independence Blue" and any other color in America's First color card will be sent on request.

B. A. M. BANQUET

the back-bone of Plainfield. It does not represent the professional men, but the business men. There's not a single person in this community that understands me. It requires courage to keep one's word and when I took the oath of office to be your Mayor I promised to enforce the law. At my command the chief of police and other city officials carried out the law to its letter and the blame for a certain amount of dissatisfaction was placed on my shoulders. I stood it all. We did things that seemed disagreeable to you, but we were only living up to what we vowed to do when taking the oath of office.

"I congratulate you on your present Mayor. He has the courage of his convictions and he is looking into things further and doing them as he thinks they should be done. No man deserves credit for doing his duty, but he deserves censure if he doesn't. Each business man has a duty to his customers. He should take his employes into his confidence and systematize his work so that the employe may know how to approach the patron properly and courteously."

George W. Neff said: "There are several classes of commuters, such as the club car, ordinary car and smoking car commuter. Mixed with these are an occasional black sheep commuter, the one that gets on your charge account and gets out of town neglecting to leave a clean slate. These are the fellows in my opinion you business men have allowed to create a feeling against commuters in general. There is also another type, the bundle commuter, the fellow who leaves part of his coin with some New York merchant. He is called the rooster by some of you. With the first I have no remedy to offer; with the rooster I think you could rectify this to a great extent. First, get better acquainted with him, bring him into all of your town doings, and get him to join with you in both social and welfare propositions in this city.

"The trouble is that the commuter has been ostracized in so many matters of this kind that he has lost interest or separated himself into a clan of his own—I believe that you have not given enough attention to the fellows in the ordinary coaches ahead, that's where the big crowd is and you will find there the biggest hearted, liberal-minded set of men in the United States. I believe there are about 3,000 commutation tickets sold from Plainfield. You ought to have 2,500 commuter rooters for Plainfield. Get him to understand that you wan him to work with you that he is not an alien but a citizen.

"Let our slogan be 'Stand up for Plainfield and down with the knocker,' whether he be a local or a commuter.

"This is not a whistling station we have 90 passenger trains a day If thousands of persons in New York knew the services and advantages we have to offer and that a glad hand and neighborly feeling existed for all desirable citizens who will come to us, you would soon fill your vacant houses and increase the sales in your stores. All that is necessary is to show them, and the commuter is the fellow to do it. Let's all boost and work as one family for the Queen City of New Jersey.

"Why not have a Plainfield field day this spring when the commuter and the local citizens could get together, bury the hatchet, smoke the pipe of peace and get acquainted? Of course, in a proposition of this kind the several local organizations would have to work in unison. In fact a united family affair."

LIBRARY REPORT IN DUNELLEN COUNCIL

Busy Session of Council and Much Business Was Disposed Of.

The annual reports from the treasurer of the Public Library were read at the meeting of the Dunellen Council last night, showing the following status: Books added during the year, 261 volumes; total now in use, 1,398; there are 828 borrowers; receipts amounted to $1,182.53; disbursements, $1,103.73; balance, $79.60.

A petition was received requesting that an electric light be placed on Dunellen avenue at a point 250 feet west of Madison avenue. The petition was referred to the light committee, which was cautioned by the Mayor to be absolutely sure that the light was needed before ordering its being placed.

A petition was received from the S. B. Q. R. Realty Company, of Plainfield, asking that Chestnut street be improved from South avenue to Centre street, and also that sewer pipe be laid along the line of the street. The petitioners asserted that if this was done, that a number of houses would be erected there this year. The petition was received and Borough Engineer Churchill instructed to give grade.

A letter was received from the Board of Trade asking that the snow ordinance be enforced hereafter. A communication was received from Dr. Thos. J. Hogan, a member of the Board of Health, in which he stated that it was necessary for him to tender his resignation from the board. The resignation was accepted. This makes the second resignation from the board that has been tendered in the past fifteen days, Edward Pennock's having been received at the last meeting. To fill these vacancies the Mayor appointed Wilson S. Fredericks and W. A. Houghtling, and, in addition, reappointed Dr. Platt, whose term expires on March 16, and the Council affirmed the action of the Mayor.

Ordinances for the laying of storm or drainage sewers on Front street, between Washington and Madison avenues, and on North avenue, from Washington avenue to Bonegut brook, were passed on their second and third readings and ordered printed. It was also voted to advertise for bids for laying these systems, accoring to plans and specifications prepared by the engineering firm of George W. Fuller. The bids will be opened at a meeting of the Council to be held on April 5.

The matter of installing auxiliary engines in the sewerage pumping stations of the borough, so as to be able to furnish power for the working of the pumps in the advent of the power to be furnished by the Public Service Electric Company failing, was discussed at length, and it was the general opinion that such engines should be procured.

An average sized lot on Sixth street and Washington avenue was ordered purchased from Edward Maurer for the sum of $400. This lot is to be used as a site for a pumping station. As per a proposition made by Township Committeeman Abram G. Nelson, of Piscataway township, at a recent meeting of Council, giving the borough its choice of that half of Center street it would agree to keep in repair, Chairman Castner, of the street committee, recommended that the borough take care of that thoroughfare from New Market road to Fairview avenue. The recommendation of Mr. Castner was favorably acted upon. Mr. Castner also recommended that the proposed improvement to Second street, between Washington and Jackson avenues, be gone ahead with, and it was voted to advertise for bids for the work, the bids to be opened at an adjourned meeting of the Council to be held on March 18.

The action of the fire and water committee in granting Smalley Brothers, the local hardware dealers, permission to erect a one-story fireproof building in the rear of their store, was confirmed. The monthly report of Treasurer Isaac J. Stites was accepted and ordered filed. The report showed receipts of $2,265.86, and that warrants totaling $1,484.21 were honored during the month, leaving a balance of $781.65.

SUBSTITUTE FOR BREAD.

If bread prices continue to mount skyward, we can all eat potatoes in place of the "staff of life," if we follow the advice of the United States Department of Agriculture. According to a bulletin just issued, it is possible, with potatoes at sixty cents a bushel, to get a little more actual nourishment from ten cents' worth of potatoes (ten pounds) than would be secured from two sixteen-ounce loaves of bread at five cents each. The protein and fat are declared to be present in appreciably larger amounts in the bread, but the potatoes furnish more carbohydrates and more heat units.

Carbohydrates (starch) contribute greatly to the energy value of any diet and since potatoes are rich in these, families that wish to expend their money to the best advantage are recommended to consider whether they cannot make a more extended use of them. They are easy to cook and when prepared in different ways can be made to lend variety to the winter diet when green vegetables are hard to obtain. Like other foods relatively rich in carbohydrates, however, potatoes should be eaten with foods correspondingly rich in protein, such as milk, meat and eggs, and with foods like butter, cream and meat fat to supply the fat that the body needs.

Under normal conditions in Europe and America the potato ranks next to bread as a carbohydrate food. If prices change sufficiently to make it desirable from a financial point of view there is no scientific reason why potatoes should not be substituted to a great extent for bread. In addition the potato, like many fruits and vegetables, helps to neutralize an acid condition in the body. This is another reason for its being eaten in combination with meat, fish and other animal foods.

REDUCING SALARIES.

One of the first issues of the Republican State Committee Bulletin announced that a general reduction was to be made in official salaries. A bill to that effect was introduced, but nothing more has been heard of it, though seven weeks of the session have passed and the Bulletin under its new name continues to announce in bold-face type that "Republican pledges will always be kept—never doubt it."

Thus far the only salary bill to pass is the one by Senator Munson, providing that the salaries of surrogates shall not be reduced during the term for which the incumbents were elected; that has only passed the Senate, and was unnecessary for the Legislature has not been in the habit of reducing salaries during official terms. The tendency has been entirely the other way, as the Trenton Times says.

If the Republicans really undertake to chop salaries and lop off useless officials, the Munson act will not interfere with their plans. The Legislature is forbidden by the constitution to pass private, local or special bills "creating, increasing or decreasing the percentage or allowance of public officers during the term for which said officers were elected or appointed."

But the reductions can be made in most cases by a general act, and that is what the taxpayers have been led to understand the majority intends to pass. The stage of the session has been reached when some of the intentions and pledges should be carried out.

The Temperance Committee of the local Christian Endeavor Union, Gideon Fountain, Howard Parry, Robert B. Butler and Clarence B. LaRue, has asked the Daily Press whether it is for or against the liquor traffic. If the attitude of the Daily Press, when the question of more retail licenses has been up has not satisfied the men named, we certainly don't know how to answer them. From a general viewpoint we believe that the well-regulated license cities, such as Plainfield, are much better off than those where there is no license, until the manufacture of liquor is prohibited in the country. At the same time it is our sincere belief that the action in Russia, as described in two recent issues of the Saturday Evening Post, will eventually lead to nation-wide prohibition in this country. But until that is brought about we do not believe that the local option type of prohibition will better matters, at least in the city of Plainfield and in other well regulated communities.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The noval arrangement of the story coupled with its unique staging has made "On Trial" the most talked about play that has been produced in America for many years. "On Trial" is a Cohan and Harris production. It was written by Elmer L. Reizenstein, who, though new to the play-writing game, has made the wisest of the craft sit up and pay a lot of attention. Mr. Reizenstein's skill has not taken the form of extraordinary strength in dialogue, but is shown in the entirely original manner of developing his plot and story. In these particulars "On Trial" is nearly if not quite a flawless piece of work, if we are to entertain the opinion of some of the best critics who voice it. "On Trial" is still being presented at the Candler Theatre, New York, and the Geo. M. Cohan Grand Opera House in Chicago, but Cohan and Harris have organized a special company to present the play on tour, and it will be seen here at the Plainfield Theatre next Monday.

Crowded houses at the Plainfield Theatre, yesterday afternoon and last night, indicated the drawing powers of "Tillie's Punctured Romance," the great five-part comedy brought back for re-presentation. The two big audiences laughed themselves into hysterice at the antics of Miss Marie Dressler, without doubt the funniest women in picturedom; Charles Chaplin, her confrere, in ludicrist situations, and Mabel Normand, an able assistant. "Tillie's Punctured Romance" will be repeated this afternoon and tonight, and if you want to absorb enough humor to ward off the blues for the next ten years don't fail to see it, remembering to be on hand early to avoid the rush. The feature photo-play at the Plainfield Theatre, tomorrow, is announced as Charles Frohman's four-part production of "Aristocracy," from the story by Bronson Howard. The leading role has been posed by Tyrone Power, who became one of the most talked of actors in America through his portrayal of the drayman in "The Servant in the House." "Aristocracy" had a record breaking run when first produced in New York a few years ago and is drawing even larger houses as a silent drama. The Plainfield Theatre has two serial pictures which are shown each week, "The Master Key," every Tuesday, and "The Trey of Hearts," every Friday.

DELAY IN OFFICIAL TEST.

A further delay has been experienced in setting a new date for the official test of the Nott engine recently purchased by the city. The breaking of a cam caused a postponement after the first date had been announced and a few days ago one of the pumps was found defective. An entirely now one has been ordered from the factory at Minneapolis and it is expected within a day or two. The official test will take place when everything is found to be in perfect order.

NAMES OF PARTICIPANTS IN TOUR CONTEST ARE MADE KNOWN TODAY

Today is published on another page, for the first time, the names of those who have entered the Press Trans-Continental and Panama-Pacific Exposition Tour Contest, and the public will now have a chance to see who the vote-hunters are. Contestants can now learn their competitors and lay their plans for the future accordingly. No doubt there will be new names added in the next few weeks, for there are many who have been waiting to see the first publication of names of candidates to decide whether or not to enter.

A glance at the list of candidates will show that there is plenty of room in every district for more candidates, and no doubt the thinking ones to whom the Trans-Continental Tour appeals will waste no time in entering their names and picking up the many votes that are ready and waiting to be asked for.

The opportunity to enter the Press Trans-Continental and Panama-Pacific Exposition Tour Contest is now, and the hesitating ones should not forget to get their applications in so that a tour representative may call upon them and start them in the race from the scratch. This will give them an opportunity to interest others in their behalf before the field is covered and their friends have promised their support elsewhere. Do not be discouraged by any stories you may hear as to the great amount of votes so-and-so has already accumulated, for stories intended to discourage are already afloat.

You can win by getting in touch with the contest manager of the Press and by getting after the votes from this moment until the final balloting and the decision of the judges declare you the winner, selected by the readers of the Press to represent them and a splendid American newspaper on a tour of a great continent and at the most magnificent World's Fair America ever produced.

Here is a trip that appeals to every intelligent woman. Your friends have nominated you? If not, enroll your own name, it amounts to the same thing. Why wait and see this great trip, which can be secured with little effort, slipping farther and farther away from you each day, because of your lethargy and hesitation?

Easy to Secure Votes.

Candidates who are already working tell the contest manager that when they explain the object they have in view in securing subscriptions for the Press, their story is received with courteous interest by people to whom they are almost total strangers, and when the project is fully explained, they invariably are rewarded by being given a subscription, generally with a word of cheerful encouragement, to the Press, which has made possible the combination of efforts that will bring so much pleasure and be of such educational benefit to the winners.

Lest You Forget.

Candidates may secure subscriptions in any section or territory, and are not confined to their own district. If, for instance, you have a friend in South Africa or Van Dieman's Land, votes will be allowed upon this subscription should you secure it. But candidates must reside in the district from which they enter.

There are no conditions that do not apply to all alike. It is a fair field, where the ambitious candidates have an equal chance of winning.

Candidates are requested not to mark anything in the space reserved for the number of the subscription and the number of the ballot. This space is to be filled in when the subscriptions are brought or sent into the contest office.

About the Vote Schedule.

The schedule of votes issued upon paid-in-advance subscriptions will at no time during the contest be altered or deviated from. The value of votes at the commencement of the contest and the end will remain the same. There will be no periods where special amounts of votes will be issued. No bargain day; no increasing the first vote announcement.

Saturday will mark the first publication of the names of candidates and their vote standing. New names will be added to the list as applications may be received any time during the contest.

Votes received up to 6 p. m. Thursday, March 4, will be published on Saturday.

Everyone Wins.

The management of the Press has decided to be most liberal to the candidates who may enter this contest. In addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all those candidates who do not win trips, and remain active until the end of the contest, a commission of ten per cent. will be paid on new subscriptions, and a five per cent. commission will be paid on old subscriptions.

OPPONENT TO BE TRUST BUSTER

Philadelphia, Pa., Mar. 2—When Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer's term expires in Wasuington this week, he will return to Pennsylvania, where he will take up law practice. It is reported from Washington that he will be engaged as a special attorney by the Department of Justice to prosecute some of the anti-trust cases which the government has on its hands. Congressman Palmer made a hot contest for the Senatorship against Boise Penrose last fall, but was overwhelmingly defeated. The election may be investigated by a Senate committee this spring.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a helping occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

PLAN PERMANENT ST. PAVEMENT

City Council Decides to Improve West Third Street At Early Date.

BONDS TO BE ISSUED

Complaint Received Regarding Dumping of Ashes On Compton Avenue—Sewer Assessments Made In Error Are Cancelled.

Now that the condition of the bond market has greatly improved, Councilman Francis J. Blatz, at the March meeting of the Common Council, last night, through a resolution took steps looking to the permanent improvement of West Third street, as proposed last year when an ordinance was adopted. The resolution fixes Monday night, April 5, as the time bids will be received for paving the street. Mr. Blatz explained that the majority of the property-owners favor the improvement.

Postmaster A. E. Hoagland, as custodian of the Government's Watchung avenue property upon which a Federal building is to be erected, presented a communication from the postoffice authorities relative to the widening of East Second street, between Watchung avenue and Church street, and it was referred to the street committee.

A communication from Margaret Zeller regarding an assessment on her property on South Second street, was referred as was also a petition from John R. Cline, asking for permission to build a gasolene tank beneath the sidewalk in front of his auto repair shop on East Second street.

Herbert Langford, of Compton avenue, complained about the dumping of ashes near his home, and requested the Council to properly "post" the land to prevent any further dumping. This matter was referred.

Isaac Schwed and others, of Evergreen avenue, petitioned for a bridge over a gutter on that thoroughfare and also three additional lights. This was referred to the street and light committee.

A statement from the Joint Sewage Commission showed Plainfield's share of the expense to date to be $1,189.45. This was referred to the sewer committee.

Assemblyman Arthur N. Pierson acknowledged the receipt of a communication from the Council in reference to proposed legislation giving overseers of the poor tenure of office and said that he would look out for Plainfield's interest in the matter.

H. R. Conger, clerk of the Board of Education, presented several resolutions adopted by the Board in reference to the proposed public hearings on the school budget, and urging the attendance of the Council and others at Board meetings. These hearings will probably be held in April.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett reported the granting of five sewer permits during the past month, and Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that he had granted twelve permits during the same time. Overseer of the Poor Garret T. Dunham reported expenditures of $1,395.55 for the past month.

Mr. Claybrook offered a resolution which was adopted appropriating $53 for the purchase of a cabinet and locks for the District Court. Another resolution by the same member authorized the transfer of $2,500 from the general fund to the poor fund and $500 to the fire fund.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Claybrook and adopted, George B. Wean was authorized to act as city clerk in the absence of James T. MacMurray, giving him the right to receive moneys and perform other duties of the clerk. Councilman Hamilton alone voted against the resolution.

Several sewer assessments, which in the opinion of Councilman F. J. Blatz had been made in error, were ordered cancelled through a resolution offered by Mr. Blatz. One of these was for $24 assessed against Arthur C. Brisbane's property on Loraine avenue.

Councilman A. D. Edgar offered a resolution which was adopted, appointing Edw. Mosher, Jr., as a member of the fire department to succeed Harold Gloak. He will serve six months on probation, according to the new rules, and if satisfactory, will be made a regular.

Through a resolution offered by Councilman J. A. Babcock and adopted, $225.10 was appropriated to make necessary repairs to the police patrol system which suffered great damage a year ago during a blizzard.

RAILWAY PLEADS POVERTY.

Trenton, N. J., Mar. 2—To support its contention that its business was a losing one, the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad has presented an abundance of facts and figures to the Public Utility Commission of New Jersey, and today the final arguments of the railroad in support of its increased passenger fares will be heard. The argument of attorneys for the commuters who oppose the increases will also be heard.

Newspapers Voice Public Demand for Repeal of Full Crew Laws

Public sentiment, as expressed by the newspapers, overwhelmingly favors the repeal of the Full Crew—"excess man crew"—Laws.

On February 14th, the railroads of Pennsylvania and New Jersey frankly and fearlessly submitted to the Court of Public Opinion the reasons why these laws, which unnecessarily burden the people, should be repealed.

On this presentation of facts newspapers have taken position. Editorials to the number of 199 have so far come to the attention of the Railroads' Executive Committee. These group the newspapers on the proposition as follows:

For Repeal	162
Against Repeal	10
Neutral	27

Following are excerpts from various newspapers:

Honest Proposition
Here is a perfectly fair and honest proposition that ought to receive the attention of the Legislature, and no doubt the great majority of the legislators are perfectly willing to consider it.—Evening Times, Trenton.

Full Crew Law Useless
It compels the railroads to pay men whom they do not need, men who are worse than useless because their idleness is demoralizing to the whole working force.—National Stockman and Farmer, Pittsburgh.

Unnecessary Men
From no source does it seem to be successfully maintained that all of the men now employed on trains are necessary to safety in operation.—Leader, Johnstown.

People Favor Repeal
The railroads—not always right—are absolutely right in asking for the repeal of the Full Crew Law, and we believe the people of the State will favor the action taken by the railroads.—Independent, Collegeville, Pa.

Fifth Wheel Men
These men are of no more use than a fifth wheel to a coach. Their presence on the trains is in no way helpful. It is rather detrimental than otherwise to the efficiency of the service.—Sunday Dispatch, Philadelphia.

Economically Unsound
The Full Crew Law is economically unsound. It provides for employment and payment of men who perform no useful function. —Tribune, New York.

Sop to Labor Vote
The law was simply a sop to the labor vote. Common justice demands the repeal of the "Full Crew" Law of New Jersey.—Gazette, Spring Lake, N. J.

Justice in Repeal
When all sides shall have been heard, it is not too hazardous to predict that the Legislatures of both States will recognize the justice of the appeal and retrace a step which was taken improvidently and without full knowledge of the facts.—Public Ledger, Philadelphia.

Most Impressive
As for the appeal of the railroads against the extra or Full Crew Law, it must be said that it is presented with a force of facts and figures and a directness of reasoning that is most impressive.—Intelligencer, Lancaster, Pa.

Common Sense Action

Turn On the Light
The fact that the opponents of the repeal of the Full Crew Laws object to the light, that they do not want popular discussion, is very strong evidence in itself that they have a case that will not stand the light.—Morning Sun, Baltimore.

Objectionable Legislation
It follows that the Full Crew Laws are class legislation of a particularly objectionable kind. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

Evidence to Public
The public is simply to hear the evidence and it is up to the parties concerned, the railroads and the trainmen, to submit their briefs. This the railroads are doing and to their credit, be it said, in an open and above-board manner.—Daily Republican, Millville, N. J.

Get Laws Repealed
There should be comparatively little difficulty in getting the Full Crew Laws of this and neighboring States repealed by an appeal to public opinion.—Record, Philadelphia.

By repeal of the Full Crew Laws there is no purpose to lay off men whose services are necessary to adequately man trains. Let that be understood. The object is merely to eliminate men for whom there is no real work and for whom jobs exist only by edict of law.

The railroads believe that the people will join in the fight for repeal of laws which put unnecessary burdens upon the public. They ask all citizens to help by communicating in person, by letter or otherwise with their elected representatives at Harrisburg and Trenton. This should be done now.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

One of the best vaudeville bills Proctor's has produced in several weeks was presented in the change of bill for the first half of the week yesterday. The Asana troupe, composed of four women and two men, presents a delightful musical act that is easily worth the price of admission alone. The troupe has the subtitle of "The Concertina Students," but they not only play these instruments, the xylophones, cornets and many others. Their descriptive number, "A Hunt in the Black Forest," is a musical gem. Granville & Mack, a comedy duo, ran a close second in popularity and handed out a bunch of laughs with their variety singing act. Both are clever character comedians and their harmony singing is very catching. Mack, Albright & Mack, a comedy singing trio, received a big hand after all their numbers, and the Kinsners do some clever equilibrists feats. The fifth number on the bill was Hal Merritt, who pleased with a comedy cartoon offering. The feature picture yesterday was "Money," and it more than held up the silent part of the program. It is in five parts every one of which is replete with realism and thrills. "Money" will be repeated this afternoon and tonight. New war pictures are bing shown today, and "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery" will be another added feature tomorrow.

LOCAL ORGANIZATIONS MAY HAVE BALL TEAMS

Columbus Club and Y. M. C. A. Members Agitating National Pastime.

With the end of the basketball season in view, members of the Y. M. C. A. have begun discussing the question of having a baseball team to represent the association this year. The local organization has not had a team on the diamond for several years, and from the present sentiment for a nine one will undoubtedly be formed if the sanction of the officials can be obtained.

There are at present enough good baseball artists in the association for the formation of a team, and a meeting will probably be held in the near future.

Another local organization which is thinking of putting baseball on its athletic list is the Columbus Club, which started basketball this season, and has been very successful.

The "Canucks" will enter this game with a determination to win, as they want at least one game from the city boys this year. There will only be one official instead of two, as in the other two games.

P. H. S. BOYS ENGAGED IN SERIES OF WATER TESTS

Two tests were held in the Plainfield High School swimming pool yesterday afternoon. The first was for those who are striving to get the one point towards graduation. This test required a boy to swim four lengths of the pool or eighty yards. The second test was more severe, and those who passed it received two points towards graduation. This test required a boy to swim the length of the pool under water (twenty yards), swim the length of the pool with clothes on, undress in water, lift a five-pound weight from the bottom of pool (eight feet), do one dive, and swim fifteen times the length of pool (300 yards). Every boy who tried these tests passed them.

The following passed the first: Leon Weintrob, Wright McAneny, Harold Coudict, Russel Tomlinson, W. Johnson, E. Erickson, Harold Searles, J. Schwartz, W. Atlee, Harold Spicer, Samuel Semer, Martin Snyder, Max Fullerton, R. Cashin, George Wright, C. Cachin, Donald Henwood, J. Marder, G. Cartwright, H. Russell and H. Bower.

Those who passed the second test are: Irving Manley, Donald Grossett, Lorenzo Brower, Eustace Eggie, Alvah Brownlee, Warren Mumford, Harold Zeek and William Peacock.

MC GOORTY AND GIBBONS BOUT.

Hudson, Wis., Mar. 2—The Mike Gibbons-Eddie McGoorty match, which will be pulled off here tonight, has brought to town many prominent sportsmen, for it is expected that the decision will go a long way toward solving the middleweight championship claims. It is over two years since these boys have hooked up, and both are now going at top speed. They will go ten rounds. The winner will be matched with Jimmy Clabby, and it is probable that the match will be set at 20 rounds and slated for New Orleans. Then Jeff Smith will soon be claiming a match with the fast middleweights, on his return from Australia. Still a fifth contender is Jack Dillon, the Hoosier boxer, who wants to plank down a forfeit to meet the winner of tonight's bout.

P. H. S. vs. MORRISTOWN.

The Morristown High School basketball team is scheduled to meet the Plainfield High School team in the Ninth street gym, tomorrow afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock.

NEWARK JUNIOR "BILLS" CAPTURE SECOND PLACE

Newark and Paterson bowlers met last night on the alleys of the Jersey City Elks to decide the tie for second place, which had been established in the recently completed tournament of the Junior Elks' League. The Newarkers succeeded in capturing two straight games and annexed the honors. There was some clever pinning done. The Newark five was there for 965 as a starter, while the Silk City pin-knights came through for 912. In the next encounter there was some lively competition, the Newarkers, with 902, having an advantage of four pins. Van Ness rolled 213 and 212 for the Newarks, and Ayres was there for 220. The Patersonians failed to account for any double-century counts. The scores.

WOMEN'S LEAGUE PLANS A GIRLS' BASKETBALL FIVE

The Women's League of St. Joseph's church hald a largely attended business meeting in Debele's Hall, last night, which was followed by a short musical and literary program. Mrs. James E. Bailey, the president, was in charge, and eight new members were accepted. The business transacted was of a routine nature, with the exception of a decision to organize a basketball team among the younger women. Miss Rose Cooper was appointed chairman of the committee to arrange the details and proceed toward the formation of a representative five. This will be done during the coming week, after which a practice hall and permanent place for play will be secured.

The program rendered comprised the following numbers: Reading, "How Pat Got His Furniture Moved," Mrs. Martha Emmons; reading, "Washington—the Man We Honor," Miss Ella Mullin; paper on "Abraham Lincoln," Mrs. Andrew E. Kenney; paper on "Mexican Question," Miss Mame Burke, and piano selections by Miss McGere.

NIGHT GAME IN BOROUGH.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team will meet the West Orange five for the second time this season on Saengerbund Hall court, tonight, at 8 o'clock. In the first game, which was played at Orange, the locals played their best game of the season, and won by a large score. They expect an easy win on their home court tonight. Dancing will follow the contest.

The Robins had the advantage of twelve pins in the initial roll, the scores being 850 to 838. Pasch, of the Crow team, hit for a 210 in this game. ST. JSOEPH'S GAME.

The St. Joseph's Boys' Club will line up against the W. F. A. team, of Bound Brook, on Saengerbund court, Thursday night. The game was originally scheduled for T. A. B. Hall, but because of the renovations going on at that place, the Somerset street court was secured.

WILSON SAYS THERE WILL BE NO SPECIAL SESSION

Washington, March 2—There is to be no special session of the Senate, President Wilson told callers at the White House today. The President said he never had considered such a contingency, adding with a quizzical smile that "sufficient unto the day is exigencies thereof." He would not go so far, however, as to prophesy that he would not call an extra session of the full Congress later in the year, possibly in September or October. World conditions are such, it was pointed out, that Congress action may be necessary to meet emergencies that may arise as a result of the European war

BREAK DECLARED BY BOROUGH ATHLETES

Somerville High School Wiped From N. P. H. S. Athletic Schedules.

Members of the North Plainfield High School Boys' Athletic Association, at a meeting called by President Ralph Smalley, this morning, voted to eliminate Somerville High School from further competition on North Plainfield sport schedules. The recent mixup at Somerville, during the playing of a basketball game between the Somerset county seat five and the boroughites, is responsible for the break. At that time a number of Somerville "rowdies" assaulted not only some of the members of the borough team, but their constituents as well.

Heretofore Somerville has always been one of North Plainfield's strongest and most interesting opponents and while the break is regretted in the eyes of true lovers of sport, the move will probably do away with the possibility of exciting further trouble along the line experienced this season.

Dropping Somerville means that there will be no Somerset County Athletic League in the future and the annual field day in which North Plainfield and Somerville participated will probably become a thing of the past.

FRIENDLY MATCH.

The members of The Plainfield Trust Company had a friendly three-man bowling match on the Westfield alleys, last night, the Dunham-Egan and Steiner combination taking all of the eight games that were played. Their opponents were Davis, Martin and Haskew. Egan rolled the best scores of the match, getting two 211 marks.

PARK CLUB VS. ELKS.

The Elk and Park Club bowling teams will meet again on the Watchung avenue drives, Thursday night.

SAYS JOHN D., JR., IS TO BLAME FOR MINE TROUBLES

Washington, March 2—Charging John D. Rockefeller, Jr., with responsibility for the conditions existing in the Colorado mine field and declaring that although able to do so he made no effort to end the strike there, the majority report of the House Committee on Labor, as the result of its inquiry into the labor troubles there, was submitted to the House today, by Representative Foster, of Illinois, chairman of the committee. The report is a scathing denunciation of the coal operators, the militiamen, detectives and mine guards who participated in the disorders. The report recommends that such strikes be settled by arbitration and declares that in view of the importance of fuel to the industries of the country, that if such intolerable disorders occur frequently in the future the Federal Government will be compelled to adopt some method of regulating the mining business of the country.

WANT NEW SCHOOL FOR THE EAST END

A new school for the eastern part of Plainfield will be the subject for discussion at the meeting of the East End Civic Association, this evening at 8 o'clock, at the Netherwood Reformed church. All residents in the eastern and Netherwood sections of the city, men and women, are invited to come. The Mayor, the president of the Board of Education, the superintendent of schools and the president of the Netherwood Residents' Association are expected to be present and speak on the subject.

WILL DONATE LAND FOR STREET WIDENING

The Common Council at its March meeting, last night, granted a hearing to property-owners in the matter of widening East Second street, between Watchung avenue and Church street. There were only two property-owners that appeared, John Bornman and Joseph C. Allen. The former made a slight objection to the way his property would be affected, while Mr. Allen said that he would be willing to donate the required strip of his land toward the improvement.

The work of widening this street will be started at an early date, the purpose being to complete the same before the Government begins operations on the new Federal building.

CHAPTER XXI.

Complications.

BRENT turned away up again to the window seat crying, "Oh, this is unbearable!"

Ethel said quite calmly: "Is it? Your wife all over again, eh?"

He came back to her. "No. I place you far above her, far above all petty suspicions of carping narrowness. I value you as a woman of understanding."

"I am," she said frankly. "From what you've told me of your wife she must be too."

"Don't treat me like this!" he pleaded distractedly.

"What shall I do," asked Ethel with wide open eyes, "apologize? That's odd. I've been waiting for you to."

As Brent moved up toward the windows Alaric came in behind him through the door.

"Hello, Brent," he called out heartily. "H'are ye?"

"Very well, thank you, Alaric," he said, controlling his surprise.

"Good. The dear wife well too?"

"Very."

"And the sweet child?"

"Yes."

"You must bring 'em along some time. The mater would love to see them, and so would Ethel. Ethel loves babies, don't you, dear?" Without waiting for Ethel to reply he hurried on, "And, talking of babies, have you seen Margaret anywhere?"

Ethel nodded in the direction of the garden. "Out there!"

"Splendid. The mater wants her. We've got to have a family meeting about her and at once." Alaric hurried out through the windows into the garden.

Brent hurried over to Ethel.

"I'm at the hotel. I'll be there until morning. Send me a message, will you? I'll wait up all night for one." He paused. "Will you?"

"Perhaps," replied Ethel.

"I'm sorry if anything I've said or done has hurt you."

She checked him just as her mother appeared at the top of the stairs. At the same moment Bennett, the maid, came in through the door.

Mrs. Chichester greeted Brent courteously:

"How do you do, Mr. Brent? You will excuse me?" She turned to the maid.

"When did you see my niece last?"

"Not this hour, madam."

"Tell Jarvis to search the gardens, the stables, to look up and down the road."

"Goodby, Mrs. Chichester—and—Ethel," said Brent. He looked meaningly and significantly at Ethel as he stood in the doorway. The next moment he was gone.

Alaric hurried in through the windows from the garden.

"Not a sign of Margaret anywhere," he said furiously, throwing himself into a chair and fanning himself vigorously.

"This cannot go on!" cried Mrs. Chichester.

"I should think not, indeed—running about all over the place."

Mrs. Chichester held up an open telegram.

"Mr. Hawkes telegraphs he will call tomorrow for his first report. What can I tell him?"

"What will you?" asked Alaric.

"Am I to tell him that every tutor I've engaged for her resigned? Not one stays more than a week. Can I tell him that?"

"You could, mater, dear, but would it be wise?"

A moment later Peg entered with Michael cradled in her arms. She had a roguish look of triumph in her eyes. Down the front of her charming new dress were the marks of Michael's muddy paws. Peg was also breathing quickly and evidently more than a little excited.

"Let us be honest with each other, Ethel," said Peg.

"Take that animal out of the room!" cried Mrs. Chichester indignantly the moment Peg appeared.

Peg turned and walked straight out into the garden and began playing with Michael on the grass.

Mrs. Chichester waited for a few moments, then called out to her, "Margaret!" then more sharply: "Margaret, come here! Do you hear me?"

Peg went on playing with Michael and just answered, "I hear ye."

"Come here at once!"

"Can Michael come in, too?" came from the garden.

"You come in and leave that brute outside!"

"If Michael can't come in I don't want to," obstinately insisted Peg.

"Do as I tell you. Come here!" commanded her aunt.

Peg tied Michael to one of the French windows and then went slowly into the room and stood facing her aunt.

"Look at your dress!" suddenly cried Mrs. Chichester as she caught sight of the marks of Michael's playfulness.

"Michael did that. Sure they'll come off."

Mrs. Chichester looked at the flushed face of the young girl, at the mass of curly hair that had been carefully dressed by Bennett for dinner and was now hovering around her eyes untidily. The old lady straightened it.

"Can you not keep your hair out of your eyes? What do you think will become of you?"

"I hope to go to heaven, like all good people," said Peg.

Mrs. Chichester turned away with a gesture of despair.

"What is it?" continued the old lady. "I say what is it?"

"What is what?" asked Peg.

"Is it that you don't wish to improve? Is it that?"

"I'll tell you what I think it is," began Peg helpfully, as if anxious to reach some satisfactory explanation. "I think there's a little divil in me lyin' there, an' every now an' again he jumps out."

"A devil?" cried Mrs. Chichester, horrified.

"Yes, aunt," said Peg demurely.

"How dare you use such a word to me?"

"I didn't. I used it about meself. I don't know whether you have a divil in ye or not. I think I have."

Mrs. Chichester silenced her with a gesture:

"Tomorrow I am to give Mr. Hawkes my first report on you."

Peg laughed suddenly and then checked herself quickly.

"And why did you do that?" asked her aunt severely.

"Why do you constantly disobey me?" pursued the old lady.

"I suppose it is the original sin in me," replied Peg thoughtfully.

"What?" cried Mrs. Chichester, again taken completely aback.

"Oh, I say, you know! That's good! Ha!" And Alaric laughed heartily. Peg joined in and laughed heartily with him. Alaric immediately stopped.

Peg sat down beside her aunt and explained to her: "Whenever I did anything willful or disturbin' as a child me father always said it was the 'original sin' in me an' that I wasn't to be punished for it because I couldn't help it.

"Then he used to punish himself for my fault. An' when I saw it hurt him I usen't to do it again—for awhile at least. I think that was a grand way to bring up a daughter. I've been wonderin' since I've been here if an aunt could bring a niece up the same way." And she looked quizzically at Mrs. Chichester.

"Well?" asked the old lady.

"For Miss Chichester, madam." And he handed Ethel the letter. "By hand, miss."

Ethel took the letter quite unconsciously and opened it.

"Who is it from?" asked Mrs. Chichester.

"Mr. Brent," replied Ethel indifferently.

"Brent?" cried Alaric. "What on earth does he write to you for?"

"He wants me to do something for him." And she tore the letter up into the smallest pieces and placed them in a receptacle on the desk.

"Come, Alaric." And Mrs. Chichester left the room after admonishing Peg that an hour would be sufficient to sit up.

"Let us be honest with each other, Ethel," said Peg when the two girls were left alone. Peg went right over to her and looked at her compassionately.

"What do you mean?" said Ethel, with a sudden contraction of her breath.

"You like Mr. Brent, don't ye?"

So the moment had come. The little spy had been watching her. Well, she would fight this common little Irish nobody to the bitter end. All the anger in her nature surged uppermost as Ethel answered Peg, but she kept her voice under control.

"Certainly I like Mr. Brent. He is a very old friend of the family!"

"He's got a wife?"

"He has!"

"An' a baby?"

"Yes—and a baby." Ethel was not going to betray herself. She would just wait to see what course this creature was going to take with her.

Peg went on:

"Of course I've never seen the wife or the baby because he never seems to have them with him when he calls here. But I've often heard Alaric ask afther them."

"Well?" asked Ethel coldly.

"Is it usual for English husbands with babies to kiss other women's hands?" And Peg looked swiftly at her cousin.

Ethel checked an outburst and said quite calmly:

"It is a very old and a very respected custom."

"The divil doubt it but it's old. I'm not so sure about the respect. Why doesn't he kiss me aunt's hand as well?"

Ethel could not control herself much longer. It was becoming unbearable. As she crossed the room she said with as little heat as possible:

"You don't understand."

"Well, but I'm thryin' to," persisted Peg. "That's why I watch ye all the time."

Ethel turned. She was now at bay.

"You watch me?"

"Aren't ye me model?"

"It's contemptible!" cried Ethel.

"Sure I only saw the 'old an' respected custom' by accident—when I came in through there a month ago—an' once since when I came in again by accident—a few days aftherward. I couldn't help seein' it both times. An', as for bein' contemptible, I'm not so sure the custom doesn't deserve all the contempt."

Ethel was now thoroughly aroused.

"I suppose it is too much to expect that a child of the common people should understand the customs of decent people."

"Mebbe it is," replied Peg. "But I don't see why the common people should have all the decency an' the aristocracy none."

"It is impossible to talk to you. I was foolish to have stayed here. You don't understand. You never could understand"—

Peg interrupted: "Why, I never saw ye excited before—not a bit of color in yer cheeks till now—except twice! Ye look just as ye did when Mr. Brent followed that old an' respected custom on yer hand," cried Peg. The young girl's eyes were ablaze. How vividly she remembered the eventful scene that confronted her when she first arrived at the Chichester home days before!

Ethel answered this time, excitedly and indignantly, giving full and free vent to her just anger:

"Be good enough never to speak to me again as long as you're in this house. If I had my way you'd leave it this moment. As it is—as it is"—Her voice rose almost to a scream. Her rage was unbridled.

What more she might have said was checked by the door opening and Jarvis showing in Jerry.

Jerry walked cheerfully and smilingly into the room and was amazed to find the two young ladies glaring at each other and apparently in the midst of a conflict.

All power of speech left him as he stood looking in amazement at the combatants.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Goodby, dear little girl," whispered Harry Martin as he bent to kiss the slip of a girl on the bed. "You may be sure every minute will be an age till I can return to you."

"As soon as the doctor comes find out if he thinks it necessary to send for me," he said in a low tone to the maid on his way out.

A pale crescent hung in the clear, cold sky, attended only by the morning star. The snow sparkled even in the dim light and squeaked under his feet as he hurried along. Anxious as he was, he noticed the lovely shades of misty gray and purple that the trees took on outlined against the frosty sky. As he crossed the bridge over the gully in the park he saw a bird's nest filled with snow. That was a home once with a warm mother bird in it. "My home would be like that if—if anything should happen to Ada," he reflected.

He met a group of laborers carrying tin dinner pails. "I wonder if there is such another troubled heart as mine among the lot?" he thought. "Very likely in this city hundreds are carrying just such a burden."

No veritable time server ever watched the clock more anxiously for quitting time than did Martin on that never to be forgotten morning. At last the creeping hands reached twelve. He was half way down the stairs before the whistle had begun to blow.

He met the doctor as he entered his home, and to Martin's anxious inquiry he said, "Not yet. I shall be back in an hour. You had better not work this afternoon if you can get off."

"How is my little wife?" he asked as he sat down by the bed. "Oh, if only my strength counted for something, Ada, dear."

"Mothers have strength given to them, dear Harry. I hope it will be a boy; boys have a better chance to do something in the world, and there is so much to be done." She was smiling calmly up into his face.

He had been sent into the living room and had walked miles, pacing back and forth, it seemed to him, listening to the muffled sounds in the chamber where his destiny was being decided. He sank into a chair at last, weak and shaking, burying his face in his hands. He heard the door open and looked up expectantly The nurse was coming toward him with a smile on her face.

"She doesn't want me to tell you which it is," she said.

"What do I care which it is? How is she?" he asked, trembling with relief.

"You can see her in a few minutes," the nurse answered and passed on.

He dropped his face in his hands, this time to hide the tears of thankfulness that were in his eyes.

When he sat down by the bed, Ada said proudly, "Behold your son!" but he was looking at the tender mother face. "How is my little wife," he asked, bending over her.

"She is so happy she is afraid," whispered the little woman, holding the scrap of humanity to her heart, as she gazed steadfastly into his eyes.

"And there was a new heaven and a new earth," he repeated, kissing the eyes and mouth.

Household Hints

SEWING SUGGESTIONS

The position of the needlewoman is very important.

Place the small of the back to the back of the chair, the feet on the floor or foot rest and the arms free at the side. Hold the work up, getting the light over the left shoulder, if concentrated.

It is often puzzling to find out the lengthwise and crosswise of the material.

The warp threads run lengthwise and are the strongest. The woof threads run crosswise and form the selvage. They were originally the filling threads.

You can distinguish between them by pulling the material.

A lengthwise thread tears with difficulty and stands out more clearly and appears straighter than the crosswise or woof threads.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Meatless Vegetable Soup—Three medium-sized potatoes, three medium-sized carrots, one large onion, one bunch celery or half teaspoon celery salt, half cup well-washed rice. Cover vegetables with boiling water; when they are boiling hard add rice and cook until vegetables are tender. Season. When ready to serve add good-sized lump of butter.

Nut Parsnip Stew—Wash, scrape and slice thin two good-sized parsnips; cook until perfectly tender in two quarts water. When nearly done add one teaspoon salt and when thoroughly done add one tablespoon flour mixed smooth with a little cold water. Stir well and boil until flour is well cooked, then stir in one-half cup nut meat. Heat to boiling point and serve at once.

Egged Veal Hash—Chop fine remnants of cold roast veal. Moisten with gravy or water; when hot, break into it three or four eggs, according to quantity of veal. When eggs are cooked, stir into it a spoonful of butter and serve quickly. If to your taste, shake in a little parsley. This is fine as a change from beef hash.

Deviled Liver—Boil one pound liver until firm enough to cut easily, then grate it very fine, add one cup bacon cut fine, yolks of two eggs one teaspoon each of salt, pepper lemon juice and chopped parsley; add one cup stale bread crumbs and cream to moisten. Steam about an hour. Fine, and a very cheap, nourishing dish.

Liver Smothered in Onions — Fry liver and onions in separate frying pans. When done add a very little bit of vinegar to onions—just enough to give a tart taste. Then arrange pieces of liver on platter and cover with fried onions. Delicious and not expensive.

German Stewed Liver—Cut one pound liver in dice, add one small onion cut up, three or four bay leaves, one raw potato in cubes, salt and pepper to taste. Cover with water, set on stove to simmer slowly. When almost tender add vinegar to taste. While this is cooking put flour enough to thicken it into a frying pan and color it an even brown. Add this to the broth and stir quickly to make it smooth.

Vegetable Salad—One can wax beans, one can small red beets; slice beets and arrange in center of long shallow dish with beans around edge. Pour salad dressing over all and garnish with hard-boiled eggs sliced.

SODA HOMINY

One gallon shelled corn, one box soda, water. Place corn in kettle and soda over it; water to cover. Let boil until hulls and eyes loosen. Wash it a number of times to get hulls and eyes out. Use soft water as much as possible.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Can You Guess It?

I've thought of something, children, that perhaps will be some fun;
Suppose we play a little guessing game.
I'll tell you something of a little animal I know,
And then, when I am through, you guess his name.

The animal I'm thinking of is not so very large,
And has a funny little tail that's flat;
Its fur is very soft and fine, and used for several things;
You may have even worn it for a hat.

Its food consists of berries, of roots and things like that;
Its teeth are just as strong as they can be.
Perhaps you wont believe it, but it really is a fact,
It can gnaw down a great big grown-up tree!

Because the thing it really most enjoys
Is building dams across a stream, with wood, and stones, and mud;
It does it quite as well as any boy.

I'll give you just one little hint, its name begins with "B."
Now go to work and think with all your might,
And then when you have made your guess, just write it down some place,
And tomorrow I will tell you if you're right.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Conducted by

THE W. C. T. U.

"I say, if the saloon, with its train of diseases, crime and misery, is not wrong, then nothing on earth is wrong. If the fight is to be won we need men—men that will fight. The church—Protestant and Catholic—must fight or run away, and, thank God, she will not run away, but fight to the last ditch."

With such words as these, Billy Sunday, in his sermon on "Booze," on January 31, in the city of Philadelphia, denounced the liquor traffic, and aroused the people. It is said that at the two meetings on that day 36,000 men promised to vote against the liquor business. No wonder "the trade" has little use for "Billy."

If every professing Christian man and woman and child in the world today would take the Nazarite vow, and "drink not wine nor strong drink," vs. 4-14, it would mean deliverance to the nations addicted to intemperance. At an early stage of the temperance reform an old man of more than fourscore years, addicted with a bodily infirmity, for which he had been advised by a physician to use ardent spirits as a medicine, was presented with a constitution of the Temperance Society, on the plan of total abstinence. He read it and said: "That is the thing to save our country; I will join it." "No," said one, "you must not join it, because brandy is necessary for you as a medicine." "I know," said he, "that I have used it; but if something is not done our country will be ruined by intemperance, and I will not be necessary to the ruin of my country. I will join the society." "Then," said another, 'you will die." "Well," said the old man, in the true spirit of patriotism, "for my country I can die," and signed the pledge, gave up his toddy, and his disease fled away.

The first evening after the inauguration of prohibition in the town of Mitchell, Ga., some years ago, a colored man said to a reporter: "You notice that there are no drunken negroes in town today? I heard a little girl say: 'My papa couldn't spend his dollar for whisky this morning, and he bought me a dress.'"

More than two hundred years ago Sir Matthew Hale, then Chief Justice of England, said: "The places of Judicature I have long held in this kingdom have given me an opportunity to observe the original cause of most of the enormities that have been committed for the space of nearly twenty years; and by due observation I have found that if the murders and manslaughters, the burglaries and robberies, the riots and tumults, the adulteries, fornications, rapes and other enormities that have happened in that time were divided into five parts, four of them have been the issue and product of excessive drinking—of tavern and alehouse drinking." The late Chief Baron Kelly, then the oldest judge of the Queen's Bench, in writing to the archdeacon of Canterbury a few years before his death, stated that "two-thirds of the crimes which come before the courts of law of this country" (England) "are occasioned chiefly by intemperance." This statement was corroborated by a man who had been nearly thirty years a judge on the bench of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, who also added that only a "limited proportion of the actual crime of the country ever reaches the higher courts. It is disposed of by the police and other courts, not of record, held by justices of the peace and other inferior magistrates."

The City Council of Des Moines, Iowa, on February 11, refused to grant the saloonkeepers a renewal of their licenses. This means that the eighty saloons of the city of Des Moines permanently closed their doors on the evening of Monday, February 15. On December 31, 1914, the Council published an order that the saloons must be closed February 15. On February 11, the liquor men asked for an extension of time, pending the decision in the courts on a petition of consent.

Des Moines, March 1—The Wilson bill for constitutional prohibition, which came from the Senate, passed the House of the Iowa Legislature by a vote of 92 to 14. It provides for submission to the people of the question of a constitutional prohibition if it passes also the Legislature to convene two years hence.

Another constitutional amendment coming from the Senate and providing for equal suffrage was passed by the House, 84 to 14.

Weissisms No. 9

There may be some in Plainfield who do not fully understand what the word Rexall means and just how it is a protection—a guaranty of satisfaction — to customers of Weiss' Rexall store.

Generally the best druggist in town is a Rexall druggist—because all Rexall druggists are part of a national organization associated for the purpose of studying and creating the highest possible efficiency methods for retailing drugs and drug sundries.

When you come into Weiss' Rexall store you'll get what you ask for unless it happens to be out of stock—in our complete stocks a very rare occurrence.

You owe it to yourself and to your family to patronize a store which serves its customers with such care and such honest merchandise as does Weiss.

We issue Library votes with all purchases.

ALBANIANS ARE FAMINE-STRICKEN

Mrs. P. B. Kennedy Tells of Great Need of Supplies In "Hunger Zone."

APPEAL FOR RELIEF

Missionary Says That the Albanians Are As Badly Off As the Belgiums and Points Out the Responsibility of Americans In Coming to Rescue

Mrs. Phineas T. Kennedy aroused much interest yesterday, at the meeting of the Foreign Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian church, by her references to the famine-stricken population of what is known as the hunger zone of Albania. Mrs. Kennedy is one of the missionaries of the American Board of Foreign Missions, who were practically driven out of Albania on account of the scarcity of food in that stricken land.

"Don't hold back," she urged, "if you are called upon to help these people. They are in a terrible condition, and they have no one to whom they can look for help. Don't make any excuses.—Don't refuse. The Albanians are as badly off as the Belgians, who have your sympathies. If you could see the helpless look in their faces, I am sure you would devote all your energies into raising funds for their relief.

"Now and then I hear it said: 'Why should Americans help these foreign people when they have their own problems?' But why should we in America not have our part in this great struggle? Why should we not have our responsibilities in this general unrest and turmoil. America must do her part."

Mrs. Kennedy said that the relief of the unfortunate should be considered a part of missionary work. This did mean, however, she declared, that those interested in spreading the Gospel in foreign lands, should neglect to contribute through regular missionary channels.

Referring to the "Christian Work Relief Ship," which is to be sent to seaports in Albania this month by the Albania Relief Fund, the speaker said:

"The hunger cries of these Albania women and children go up to heaven, and this ship cannot get to them too soon. I wish it Godspeed."

Interesting talks on mission topics were the features of the all-day meeting of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the church. The morning session was devoted to the Home Society, and Miss Grace Switzer gave a talk on the Italian Mission, the home field of the church. The following officers of the Home Society were elected for the year: President, Mrs. George Karner; first vice-president, Mrs. T. C. Bodine; second vice-president, Mrs. H. A. Pope; secretary, Miss Jennie Abbott; treasurer, Mrs. P. C. Banghart. Mrs. David Boice was chosen superintendent of the Sewing Circle and Mrs. E. W. Poinier, secretary and treasurer.

At noon luncheon was served by a committee after which Mrs. Phineas B. Kennedy gave a talk about missions. The foreign officers for the year were elected as follows: President, Miss Julia J. Noll; first vice-president, Mrs. J. H. Manning; second vice-president, Mrs. F. L. Palmer; secretary, Miss Jennie Abbott; treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Spicer; secretary of literature, Miss Georgia Ricker.

CHARMING TEA GIVEN FOR MRS. E. W. HEDGES

Mrs. B. Van D. Hedges, of Watchung avenue, gave a charming tea at her home yesterday afternoon, from 4 to 6 o'clock, in honor of Mrs. Ellis W. Hedges, the affair being attended by about one hundred guests from this city and out of town. Sociability was a marked feature of the function, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The color scheme was pink, the arrangement in the dining-room being most attractive.

The receiving party included Mrs. B. Van D. Hedges, her sister, Mrs. J. B. Patton, Mrs. Ellis W. Hedges, Mrs. George P. Mellick, Mrs. J. S. Zelie, Mrs. William S. Tyler, Mrs. John Gray Foster, Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor, Mrs. J. M. Charles, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwait, Mrs. Frank C. Ard and Mrs. William H. Murray.

JOSEPH LUCREGIA'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Joseph D. Lucregia, of North avenue, was held this morning from his home, and later at St. Mary's church, where a high mass of requiem was offered by the Rev. Father McDonald. The funeral was largely attended by relatives and friends. The flowers were a pillow, wish the inscription "Joe," and two wreaths from the family. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

CONSOLIDATION BILLS HAVE BEEN PREPARED

W. L. Saunders Will Arrange to Have Them Presented to Legislature.

Bills drawn to overcome certain obstacles that have arisen against the consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield have been prepared by former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, and will be presented to the Legislature in the near future. This information was given to the members of the local Board of Trade at their meeting last night in Exempt Firemen's Hall. The bills are suitable to the needs of this city and borough and were drawn under the personal supervision of Mr. Saunders.

Some discussion was indulged in by the members on the subject of charging an extra ten per cent. for delinquent taxes. In the opinion of Hugh Tracey, who spoke on the proposition, the city has no legal right to fix this percentage, six per cent. being the legal rate. Inasmuch as the delinquent tax served only as a fine on those who fail to pay their tax bills before the date set for the settlement and in view of the fact that it was a transaction with individuals and not institutions the members finally decided to refer it to the organization's counsel for settlement.

A communication from the Mayor commenting on the matter of publishing the taxes in Plainfield was received. Mayor Calkins is entirely in accord with the idea, but expressed an opinion that time for consideration is needed in this matter. Referring to the matter of uneven sidewalks which the Board brought to his attention, Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett stated that his department was fully aware of the existing conditions but for obvious reasons property owners could not be compelled to do the work right away.

FOOLISH COIN "STUNT" ALMOST PROVES FATAL

Joseph Angerbauer, the sixteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Angerbauer, of East Second street, is today carrying a large copper coin around in his body as the result of a "stunt" performed in the Y. M. C. A., yesterday afternoon. The boy, together with a number of companions, was performing sleight-of-hand feats and endeavored to do something with a coin as big as a half-dollar. While holding the metal piece in his mouth the boy coughed slightly and it slipped down his throat.

He was siezed with a violent fit of coughing and for a time it was feared that he would strangle. Pending the arrival of Dr. H. H. Lowerie first aid remedies were administered and he was in a fairly comfortable condition when the physician reached the place. Although the coin was not extracted, Angerbauer was apparently none the worse for his experience, last night, and the physican stated that no harmful results would be recorded.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon experienced a severe attack of muscular neuralgia while at his desk in the Legislative Chamber yesterday afternoon. WILL ASK BOARD TO ERECT SCHOOL

CITY OFFICIALS SPEAK

Enthusiastic Meeting of the Organization Held Last Night—Crowded Condition of Present School Is Shown In Figures.

For the purpose of considering the need of a new school in the Netherwood section of the city, the East End Civic Association held a meeting in the Netherwood Reformed church last night, unanimously adopting a resolution requesting the Board of Education to secure at once land for a school in that section. It is suggested that a temporary building be erected to accommodate at least four grades, and to be ready for use at the opening of the September term. The board was also petitioned to provide, as soon as possible, a permanent building, suited to the needs and growth of that part of the city.

Besides members of the association, there were present Mayor Leighton Calkins, Archibald Cox, president of the Board of Education; Dr. H. M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, and Henry P. Stevens, president of the Netherwood Residents' Association, all of whom took part in the discussion. The committee on fire and police protection reported having interviewed the chief of police concerning better police protection, and having been told by the chief that east of Leland avenue there is no policeman on duty at night. The committee was instructed to take the matter up with the Council.

The street committee reported having presented the request of the association for sidewalks on Leland avenue and cross streets to the Council, and that the matter is now in the hands of the street committee of that body. An electric light has been installed at the request of the asso-

DECISION IS UPHELD BY COURT OF ERRORS

Second Affirmation of Decision Handed Down by Judge Hetfield.

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of the law firm of Reed & Hetfield, today received word from the clerk of the Court of Errors and Appeals, that the decision in the case of Louis G. VanNest against Simon Hirsch had been affirmed. Hetfield was counsel for VanNest.

The case involved an intricate question under the Mechanics Lien Law. It was proved at the hearing before Judge Walter L. Hetfield, in the Plainfield District Court, that Hirsch had paid Simon Roth, a local contractor, considerable money in advance of the terms of his contract for building the structure owned by Hirsch at East Fourth street and Watchung avenue, without the knowledge or consent of the sub-contractors. Mr. Hetfield maintained, on behalf of VanNest, who supplied lumber for the building, that the payments to Roth in advance of the terms of the contract made Hirsch legally responsible to material men and sub-contractors for the amount of their claims.

VanNest was granted a judgment by the District Court. William Newcorn, attorney for Hirsch, appealed to the Supreme Court where the judgment was affirmed. Application was then made to the Court of Errors and Appeals. There is about $3,500 due other sub-contractors whom Mr. Hetfield represents.

BOY THIEVES GOT VARIETY OF LOOT

Trio Apprehended By Local Police Committed Many Depredations Here.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Austin Brothers and Frank McCarthy Have Been Active Since Before Christmas—Loot Found Horded In Cottage Place House.

Arraigned before Judge DeMeza, in the city court, this morning, Stephen and Elmer Austin and Frank McCarthy, all boys in their 'teens, were held in $500 bail each to await the action of the grand jury on charges of breaking and entering preferred against them by the New Jersey Central authorities. More complaints are pending. The boys were arrested, following an investigation conducted by Sergeant Maurice Higgins, Roundsman Andrew Saffron and Patrolman John Fritts, and it is thought that their incarceration will bring to a close an era of juvenile depredation in this section.

Soon after their arrest the boys, according to the police, confessed to a number of local robberies under the "third degree," and admitted that they had been storing their loot in the Austin home in Cottage place. Patrolman Fritts was dispatched to the house to make a search, and when he got a glimpse of the quantity of stuff in the place he sent in a call for help.

Sergeant Higgins went to the place with the patrol wagon, and goods valued at several hundred dollars were brought back to headquarters by the officers. Clothing, foodstuffs, tools, bicycles, golfing materials, bicycle accessories, copper wire, telephone instruments, wire netting and various other things were included in the "prizes" which filled a room at the police station. The goods were hidden in mattresses, corners and closets, and nearly everything reported missing from petty robberies during the past three months was located in the Cottage place home.

In court the boys admitted breaking into four freight cars and three local stores, but are also said to have committed robberies at Zeisel and Mechanic's bicycle stores, at the Plainfield Country Club, and numerouus other places. The Country Club is located in Middlesex county, and the local authorities have no jurisdiction. Superintendent John Eke, of the Country Club, will go before Justice of the Peace Rene von Minden and swear out a complaint. McCarthy was only recently paroled from the State Home for Boys at Jamesburg.

Elmer Austin's police record dates back to November 5, 1908, when he was arrested for the larceny of bicycles by Captain John J. Flynn. His brother, Stephen, was arrested by Flynn four times for larceny as follows: November 20, 1908; August 23, 1912; December 17, 1913; February 8, 1914. McCarthy was arrested by Flynn for larceny, January 31, 1913, and February 8, 1914.

JUDGES MAKE SELECTION OF PRIZE DRAWING

Morris C. Van Arsdale, Charles A. Lee, William Taylor, Charles Eddy, Charles H. Frost and Corra Ryno, judges named to select the most attractive poster advertising the "Hall of Fame," to be given in the North Plainfield High School, under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association, March 12, met in the school last night.

Miss Sydenham displayed the posters on the wall, and the judges made their decision by number, which was placed in an envelope. The envelope will be opened the night of the play. The names of the pupils making the posters were placed in another envelope, and they were not made known to the judges.

The Parent-Teacher Association offered a prize of $3 to the pupil making the most appropriate drawing as a poster for the play. The judges found it difficult to select one from so many fine drawings, and found it necessary to take a second vote to get a majority for the winning poster.

MRS. VANDERHOEF SUES FOR $5,000

Charges Mrs. Florence Roundey With Alienating Husband's Affections.

STORY OF DEFENDANT

Says She Hired Harold Vanderhoef, the Husband In the Case, to Do Private Work On Her Own Divorce and Alienation Suit.

Papers were served on Mrs. Florence Roundey, of Truell Court, yesterday afternoon, in a lawsuit for $5,000, brought against her by Mrs. Lillian Vanderhoef, alleging that Mrs. Roundey alienated the affections of Harold Vanderhoef, her husband. This makes Mrs. Roundey the central figure in two alienation suits now in the New Jersey courts, the previous one for $25,000 being filed by her against Mrs. Elmer W. Poinier, alleging that the latter had been intimate with her husband, John K. Roundey, president of the Endress Company.

When interviewed by a Plainfield Daily Press reporter yesterday afternoon, shortly after she had been handed the summons to make answer to the charges, Mrs. Roundey declared that the accusations were "framed up" in return for her action in starting the previous suit. Robert Newton Crane, attorney for Mrs. Vanderhoef, when interviewed, was equally emphatic in stating that the two litigations had no conenction, and that the second one had in no way been prompted by the first.

Mr. Crane admitted that such litigation was under way, but added that he "did not try his cases in the newspapers, and that the entire matter would be placed before the May term of the Supreme Court in Elizabeth."

In answer to a series of questions, Mrs. Roundey admitted that she knew Vanderhoef, and further declared that she had employed him since October 1, 1914, as a private "detective" to watch Mr. Roundey and Mrs. Poinier, with a view to

TINWARE SHOWER FOR MR. O'KEEFE

Plainfielder's New York Office Piled High In Honor of Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. O'Keefe, of West Seventh street, returned home last night after a week's stay at Atlantic City in celebration of the tenth anniversary of their wedding. This morning Mr. O'Keefe bustled into his New York office with the Delaware and Hudson Coal Company, where he is assistant treasurer, and started back in consternation, believing he had lost track of things while away, and had gotten into a five and ten-cent store by mistake.

Everywhere he looked his gaze was greeted by articles of tinware. They were piled high on his desk, on the chairs, hung up on pegs and were even tucked away in the safe. The implements and utensils represented everything that human ingenuity could manufacture out of the convenient metal. There were wash boilers, wash basins, pots and pans, pattycake turners, saucepan covers, egg beaters, pie pans, trays, roasters, and even a regiment of tin soldiers to stand guard over the lot. When Mr. O'Keefe recovered from the surprise, he was greeted with shouts of congratulations from the big office staff, and he realized what it all meant. They wanted to help him observe the anniversary and took this means of doing it. When Mr. O'Keefe asked if any arrangement had been made to give him a hand in getting all the presents to Plainfield, one of the committee remarked, "Niver moind, Mr. O'Kafe, we'll attin' to that. We gave a feller tin cents, and he says he'll very tin-derly carry it to the foive-tin train."

Mr. and Mrs. O'Keefe were married in Brooklyn ten years ago last week, Mrs. O'Keefe beeing a native of that city. Previous to her marriage she was Miss Mary McGinness. Mr. O'Keefe has a wide acquaintance througnout the city, and has been prominent as a vocalist and in amateur dramatics. He is a member of Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, and Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E.

Fenner, a director in the Dunellen banking institution. The shares brought $179 each. The stock was placed with the Plainfield Trust Company as collateral by Pierce, who has been missing from his home in New Market, under mysterious circumstances, since February 6, to secure the payment of two promissory notes.

One of the notes, dated November 19, 1913, was payable on demand in the sum of $1,500, and the other, dated November 13, 1914, was payable three months after date in the sum of $2,500. FRENCH IN VOSGES DEFEAT GERMANS

AUSTRIANS RETIRING

Russians Said to Have Forced Them Out of Czernowitz, Which They Now Partially Occupy—Cholera Reported at Przemysl.

Lausanne, March 3—The German offensive in the southern part of the Vosges district has been repulsed at all points except in the Muenster Valley, where it has made a slight advance. The pass through the Vosges Mountains at Schlucht which is considered the vital point for both forces in that district, is still in the hands of the French, whose position there is deemed impregnable.

Rome, March 3—The Austrians are beginning to evacuate Czernowitz which the Russians have already partially re-occupied, according to a despatch to the Messagero, from Bucharest. The Russians have re-occupied the Dolomia district. Austrian prisoners state that cholera has reduced the garrison at Przemysl by 40 per cent.

Paris, March 3—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"There is nothing of importance to add to the communique of yesterday. In Champagne we hold the whole first line of German trenches from the northwest of Perthes as far to the north of Beausejour, and at several points we have advanced beyond this. Further progress noted yesterday is confirmed today. In the Argonne there has been cannonades. On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

A despatch from Geneva, believed to have originated from German sources, declares that Great Britain has bought the entire wheat harvest of Argentine for 1916.

Berlin, March 3 (by wireless)—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"Near St. Eloi, south of Ypres in West Flanders, the attack of two English companies was repulsed after violent hand to hand fighting. Near Perronne, about 25 miles south of Arras, a French air craft landed on account of motor trouble. The occupants of the craft were made prisoners by us.

"French attacks in Champagne were made without the slightest success, the attacking forces being repulsed and forced back into the old positions with heavy loss. Northwest of Ville Sur Touree, in the western part of the Argonne forest, the Germans conquered 350 metres of French trenches. French attacks in the forest of Consenvoye, north of Verdun, and near Ailly and Apremont, south and east of St. Mihiel, were easily repulsed.

"Eastern theatre—Near Grodno the situation is unchanged. Southeast of Augustowo the Russians tried to cross the Bobr River, but were repulsed, suffering heavy losses. Fifteen hundred Russians were taken prisoners. Other Russian attacks in the district northeast of Augustowo broke down.

"Southwest of Kolno the Germans advanced. Northwest of Frzasnysz the Russians tried to feel their way forward. Night attacks by the Russians east of Plock were all repulsed."

The Hague, March 3—The German legation at The Hague today announced that a steam yacht fitted with wireless apparatus, but bearing no war flag fired on the German submarine U-21 in St. George's Channel.

Athens, March 3—The Ottoman Bank and the Deutsche and Wiener Banks of Constantinople have transferred their funds and books to Konia.

Washington, March 3—Watchful waiting is to be adopted by the administration in dealing with the blockade policies of Germany and the Allies. This was made known today at the White House where it was said President Wilson would take his time in framing replies to the notes of Great Britain and France announcing their intention to put a stop to all German commerce. The President's decision, it was said, was due to the announced willingness of Germany to end its blockade by withdrawing its submarines.

FREIGHT AGENT SEALS PROVES HE'S SOME JUMPER

Freight Agent S. C. Seals is said to be some jumper. If you would like to know how much of a jumper he is ask Cashier Hamley or Teller Starker of the local bank, who are very enthusiastic over Mr. Seals' athletic propensities. They put in a pleasant five minutes during the noon hour the other day watching Mr. Seals outjump a young man named Vail, who thought he could jump. The match and exhibition, because, while it was not intended to be an exhibition, it most certainly was as Messrs. Hamley and Starker will attest, took place in the freight yard directly opposite the bank, affording Messrs. Hamley and Starker a clear and unobstructed view.

Mr. Seals is of a corpulent build and that he is a young man no longer is attested by the fact that he has gray hair. He is furthermore handicapped by gold-rimmed spectacles, and that thus handicapped he defeated that arrogant fellow named Vail, especially tickles Messrs. Hamley and Starker, and they are airing the exhibition as they saw it all about town.

When seen last evening, Mr. Seals disclaimed all knowledge of having been one of the parties to any such match. "Me jump,' said Mr. Seals, "why I couldn't even jump a freight."

GOT WRONG DOG.

Gustav Winter, proprietor of the Park Hotel, and Contractor J. S. Hawkyard motored to Metuchen, yesterday, returning with a valuable hunting dog. It was said that they kidnapped the dog, but this was not so. Mr. Winter saw the dog, which happened to look like one he owns, running along the roadside and he merely induced it to get in his machine and brought it home. Of course, when he got home and found his dog safe and sound it was up to him to return the animal. This necessitated a return trip which he lost no time in taking. Thus the dog had two automobile rides. Lucky dog.

Knights of Pythias all over the world have hailed with delight the coming presentation of the Universal's dramatic spectacle "Damon and Pythias." Never before has the great story of friendship of these two noblemen, upon which the order and its far-reaching influences are founded, been so elaborately presented and so thoroughly done. It will be shown in six parts of surpassing beauty depicting Greece in the days of her glory, with great battle scenes on land and sea, the classic dances and gorgeous groupings of the time when earth was young; the games, the chariot races, the drama and the love of life out of the crucible of which came the friendship of Damon and Pythias as pure gold. The picture will be shown at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow afternoon and night, under the auspices of Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias.

Last August, New York experienced one of those thrills for which it lives and it was happy. A new play by a new author was acted for the first time and the audience was thrilled and entranced by the swiftly moving scenes of a drama that weaved back and forth with the realism and relentlessness of life. The play was a melodrama called "On Trial," by Elmer L. Reizenstein, and presented by that famous firm of theatrical producers, Cohan and Harris. Little had been heard of the author and the surprise was complete when it proved to be the most original and best constructed play seen in years. In the originality and skill displayed in its construction only Geo. M. Cohan's "Seven Keys to Baldpate," compares with it in the recent annals of the stage. "On Trial" tells the story of a crime, the compelling forces which shaped the lives of the principals and the trial which solves the mystery. It grips with the tenacity of a well spun detective yarn, while the swiftness with which it moves and the manner of its unfolding suggest the cinema. A cast of unusual excellence has been selected for the presentation of the play which requires an acting company of over thirty-five people. Among them being Charles Darrah, Harry Conley, W. B. Clarke, Clyde North, Charles Gilbert, Charles Riegel, Harry West, Beulah Watson, Florence Moore, May McCabe. "On Trial" will be presented at the Plainfield Theatre next Monday.

In preparing her acting version of "Lady Windermere's Fan," in which Margaret Anglin will be seen in the notorious Mrs. Erlynne, at the Plainfield Theatre, on Wednesday, March 10, the actress took the liberty of obliterating several of the soliliquies and "asides," and reduced some of the more rhetorical passages of the text. The New York critics agreed that the changes were well advised, in deference to the alteration in dramatic construction which has been adopted in the last twenty years. ("Lady Windermere's Fan" was first produced twenty-two years ago.) By the few slight excisions, Miss Anglin has rendered the text as if it might have been written yesterday. In rehearsing the play, Miss Anglin insisted on the action of the scenes as if they were the new work of a playwright of today. Its New York success and the popular acclaim with which the performance was received is the strongest endorsement of Miss Anglin's judgment. That the phenomenal vogue which the play attained in New York and other cities, will be duplicated here goes without saying. Miss Anglin is surrounded by an exceptionally good company, and the play will be presented here exactly as shown in New York for upwards of one hundred performances last season.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Beginning with tomorrow afternoon, Proctor's Theatre will offer the following change of vaudeville for the last half of the week: The highly entertaining comedy sketch, "Behind the Footlights," an excellent playlet depicting life on the other side of the stage; Ali Rajah and Company, comedy mind readers, Warren & Brockway, in "The Musical Janitor;" Bernard & Scarth, singers and dancers, and Schrode & Mulvey, in a side-splitting comedy variety skit. The picture portion of the program at Proctor's has gotten to be an important proposition and new features are being added almost every week. Some of the announcements have been made as follows: This afternoon and tonight, the absorbing serial, "The $20,000,000 Mystery;" Tomorrow, "Runaway June;" Friday, "The Exploits of Elaine;" Saturday, Charles Chaplin, the man who makes millions mirthful, in a new two-reel comedy. In addition to these the only authentic European war pictures are shown in a bi-weekly service, the changes being made every Monday and Thursday. These reproductions of the scenes that are really occurring in Northern France and Belgium are the last word in moving picture daring, and in presenting them to Plainfield audiences, Proctor's has shown itself strictly up-to-the-minute in giving the people what they want. Every Monday and Tuesday the screen portion of Proctor's program includes a five-part photo-play based on stage successes of the past decade. This feature has also caught the popular fancy as is plainly evidenced by the large attendances on the days of showing.

ALFRED NOYES WILL GIVE LECTURE HERE

The Monday Afternoon Club has offered to Plainfield many opportunities to hear for a nominal charge lectures given by the best of speakers. But never has greater interest been felt in the coming of any lecturer than in that of Alfred Noyes, the poet, who is to speak here under the auspices of the club on the afternoon of Thursday, March 18. So many people have expressed a desire to hear Mr. Noyes that the club, feeling that its quarters in the Congregational church may be inadequate, has arranged to give the lecture at the High School. The hour is 3:45 o'clock.

When through a desire for empire the fate of empires is at stake, it seems a peculiarly fitting time to hear Mr. Noyes, who has taken for the subjects of some of his best and his best-known poems the great and picturesque would-be empire builders of Queen Elizabeth's reign, Gilbert and Raleigh and Drake.

England's traditions, England's glory, England's dreams are all a part of Mr. Noyes' poems. "The Island Hawk," his song for the first launching of his Majesty's Aerial Navy, closes with the verse:

Ships have swept with my conquering name....
Over the world and beyond,
Hark! Bellerophon, Marlborough, Thunderer,
Condor, respond!
On the blistered decks of their dread renown,
In the rush of my storm-beat wings,
Hawkins and Hawke went sailing down
To the glory of deep-sea kings!
By the storm-beat wings of the hawk, the hawk,
Bent beak and pitiless breast,
They clove their way through the red sea-fray!
Who wakens me now to the quest?

Perhaps Mr. Noyes will tell something of his own feelings for the England of today, the England whom, if newspaper stories be true, he served as a member of the home guard when the Southern part of the island was watching day and night for the coming of the aerial navy of Germany.

RECREATION NOTES

A public dance will be held this evening at Franklin School. Especially good music has been provided and in consideration of the good floor and small fee it is thought that the hall will be crowded.

The public speaking class which was to have met this evening at the Stillman School, will meet tomorrow night instead. At this time a special study is to be made of one of Wendel Philips' great speeches. Exercises and aids will be given for securing natural intonations, perfect poise, and a clear and masterful manner of speech. The class is unlimited. There is a fee of five cents for each lesson.

The Girls' Athletic Club meets at the High School tonight. The swimming pool will be open to women at this time. Regulation suits are required and a small fee charged. Those who wish to make use of the pool during the warm weather should join now as it may be necessary to limit the membership later.

This afternoon the Bryant dancing class met as usual at Bryant School. A long felt want has been satisfied by the formation of this class. For a very moderate fee parents may send their children to a splendid instructor who gives them not only the standard dances, but also the more vigorous and health-giving folk dances.

PRESTIGE

Just as one affiliates with a certain church, or lodge, or school, so do they eventually pin their faith to some one clothing store, in which to do the bulk of their trading.

This is both right—and fair—for as they come to know the store better, their interest in it increases and develops—it becomes THEIR store, in more ways than one.

To gather about this business the number of people who enter its portals daily, and link to it their faith and trade means a Prestige we highly treasure and greatly revere.

It spurs us daily to greater effort—to make the service of the store all it possibly should be.

We move to our own building about April first. The same methods that builded for success "here" will follow us "there."

SUES FOR $5,000

gaining evidence for her $25,000 suit. She says that Vanderhoef and several Newark detectives were engaged in this work. Mrs. Roundey says that she has been acquainted with Vanderhoef and his family since he wore knickerbockers, and had regarded him as nothing more than a boy. Mrs. Roundey is a woman of about forty-five years, while Vanderhoef is about twenty-one.

Vanderhoef is a butcher by trade, and at one time was employed by Mr. Roundey at the West Front street store. When he was laid off Mrs. Roundey said that she felt sorry for him, and had on several occasions furnished him with money to get his meals. She told of having paid his rent several times to keep him from being dispossessed. Mrs. Roundey says that Vanderhoef, in accordance with the agreement she had with him, reported to her every night at Truell Court. These meetings were held in the hall, according to the woman, and there was nothing indiscreet about them.

Last Saturday night Mrs. Vanderhoef became suspicions that her husband was going to desert her, and had a warrant sworn out for his arrest. He was picked up by the police and lodged in a cell to await trial Monday morning. When arraigned before Judge DeMeza for a hearing, the young man's counsel, V. W. Nash, Jr., explained to the court that he had succeeded in effecting a a reconciliation between Vanderhoef and his wife, and that they were willing to live together again, the woman having been convinced that her suspicions were false.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., was unable to be in court Monday morning, and asked for a postponement of the hearing until next Saturday. There was nothing left for Judge DeMeza to do in that case but hold the defendant under bonds until that time. Vanderhoef is now at liberty, under bail of $200 furnished by Lester B. Harris, to appear for a hearing on his wife's complaint next Saturday morning. Whether or not the couple are living together will probably be brought out at that time. Monday morning they left the courtroom arm in arm.

Information has been advanced to the effect that Mrs. Roundey was a visitor at the jail while Vanderhoef was incarcerated there. Mrs. Roundey personally alleges that certain individuals, including her husband, are making every effort to prove her insane. In view of what might develop, she declares, she has submitted to mental examinations by two of the State alienists, and has been found to be in full possession of all her mental faculties. Answer in the suit brought by Mrs. Roundey against Mrs. Poinier is returnable March 12.

"Mrs. Roundey's enemies must be in dire distress when they resort to a cheap frame-up like this. This young man, Vanderhoef, was used by Mrs. Roundey to collect evidence in her divorce and alienation suits. If in collecting this evidence he stayed away from his young wife some evenings we canot help that. This is being financed by the same crowd which recently tried to prove Mrs. Roundey feeble-minded."

WILL ASK BOARD FOR SCHOOL

ciation on North avenue, at the approach to the Netherwood Station. Captain Peterson reported regarding the streams, which in time of rain flood North avenue, that he had brought the matter to the attention of the freeholders, who are considering a remedy for the nuisance.

In the kindergarten and first grade, now held in the Netherwood Reformed church building, there are eighty pupils. The first grade will be promoted at the beginning of next school year, and must take the long journey to the already overcrowded Lincoln School. Meanwhile, this section is growing with remarkable rapidity. During the past year about twenty-five houses have been built. Twelve are now in course of construction on Leland avenue, between Second and Front streets, and ten more on Columbia avenue. The use of the church this year has been a help, but it has its disadvantages. Some will not send their children because it is a church building. Also, the church expects to replace the present building with a new one during this summer, and it may not be possible for the board to use that building.

Mayor Calkins made very plain his views concerning the administration of civic affairs. On the school question, he said, in part. "I have been misunderstood regarding my attitude towards the public schools. I am a public school man, and grew up in them. We ought to be proud of our Plainfield schools. They stand high among the schools of our State. What I want is that the people shall so clearly understand their administration that they shall be satisfied with expenditures and management. I do not believe that the Council understands the position in this part of the city, and the importance of the erection of a new building here. It is a vital necessary, and something must be done. There should be everywhere in Plainfield adequate school accommodation for every child. The laws require it, and we must see that this requirement is fulfilled. This question of the need for a new school is not debateable. I want it clearly understood that the Board of Education and myself are not antagonistic. I am in harmony with it regarding its aims for the improvement of our schools."

Archibald Cox said in part: "There are two important things to remember, first, we are all of one mind as to the need for a school in this section; second, we must find out how to get it. It is necessary to bear in mind the attitude of those who need a school, and also of those who provide the money. The tax rate is apt to look disturbing to some. We have to consider those who do not appreciate the need of new buildings. The problem is to convince people that this is the time to build a new school, and to find out when we can best ask for it. If we ask now it might be refused."

Dr. Maxson said, in part: "I believe that nothing is too good for Plainfield boys and girls, but the question is the paying the bills. We recognize that there is absolute need for a school here. But the board is for the whole city, and must so act as to benefit the largest number. It was on that principle that we built the new High School. The need was imperative and immediate. In the same way the Evergreen Avenue School is an immediate necessity to relieve the need in the center of the city. Your ultimate need here is such a building as the Evergreen Avenue School, one that may be a community center for everything of interest to all the people.

INDICT TWO MEN FOR CATHEDRAL BOMB PLOT

New York, March 3—The Grand Jury, this afternoon, found a joint indictment against Frank Avarno and Charles Carbone, under section No. 1895 of the Penal Code, for attempting to dynamite St. Patrick's Cathedral, yesterday morning. Amedes Polignant, the policeman who consorted with the two young Reds and thus learned their plans was the principal witness, only two other police officers being examined. The men will be arraigned this afternoon.

ASKS FOR SEPARATION.

Mrs. Elizabeth Burton, formerly of this city, but now of Scottville, Va., against whom proceedings for divorce were instituted by her husband, Thomas Burton, several months ago, is being served with legal notice through publication on an order from the Court of Chancery. She has been given until April 29 in which to file her answer. The petitioner through his counsel, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., alleges desertion as the basis for his suit, as Mrs. Burton has lived apart from him for the past two years. The Burtons were married in 1897 and have two sons, one sixteen years old and the other fourteen. They formerly resided at 216 West Third street.

APPROVES OF DISMISSAL OF COURT ATTENDANTS

Trenton, March 3.—The Civil Service Commission today approved the dismissal by Sheriff George C. Otto of Edward H. Sherwood and John C. Blore as court attendants of Union county. They appealed from their dismissal, claiming their removal was for political reasons.

The commission conducted a hearing and decided that the testimony did not support the allegations, that the sheriff has the right to demand the services of employes who are fully competent, holding that the testimony showed that the dismissals were for the reason that the complainants were unable to perform all the duties of their position.

REV. JOHN BALTZLY GIVES SECOND ADDRESS IN SERIES

The Woman's Alliance of All Souls' Unitarian church held the bi-monthly meeting at the residence of Rev. John Baltzly, Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon. The attendance was quite large, and included several from outside the organization who are interested in the work.

Mr. Baltzly gave the second of his series of talks on periods in religious history, his subject being "Erasmus." A number of interesting thoughts were brought out, and the address as a whole was thoroughly enjoyed. The next meeting will be held on March 16 at the home of Mrs. J. O. Osgood, Myrtle avenue.

UNPROTECTED BONFIRE THREATENS BUILDINGS

What might have been a large fire, was prevented by the prompt response of the fire department to a call given by J. W. Gaveti, of West Front street, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A large bonfire had been left unprotected in the lot back of the Coddington and Clark buildings, and fanned by the high wind, was gaining rapidly, threatening the buildings near by.

As a fire resulted from just such a thing once before, the city authorities are now taking the matter up and trying to enact a law preventing such fires.

EDWARD HARDING, JR., TO SING AT THE PLAINFIELD

Edward Harding, Jr., of this city, who made an instantaneous hit by his rendition of "The Land of My Best Girl" at the Plainfield Theatre, Washington's Birthday, has been retained by Messrs. Counihan and Shannon to appear at the playhouse again next Saturday afternoon and night. He will sing the latest popular ballad, "Let Bygones be Bygones" in connection with the singing moving pictures, New York's most recent movie feature. The picture will show the composers preparing the song, it- first trials and then its presentation.

Mr. Harding is one of Plainfield's best known vocalists and sprang into instant favor when he sang "The Songs My Mother Used to Sing," at the Elks minstrels last May.

LARGE GATHERING ATTENDS FUNERAL OF MISS KING

The funeral of Miss Gertrude W. King, whose death occurred Sunday afternoon after a long illness, was held at the home of her mother on Craig place at 2:30 this afternoon. It was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends, which included many of the young woman's former classmates in the North Plainfield High School and other close associates. Rev. Dr. Philip Strong, of the First Baptist church, was the officiating clergyman and during the service two of Miss King's favorite selections were sung by Miss Helen Besler. The floral tributes included many handsome pieces from the girls' fraternity of the borough school, and friends of the family.

Burial was made in the family plot in the Bound Brook cemetery, the pall bearers being six young men who had been members of the social circle in which Miss King was prominent. These were Newton Spencer, Russell Lee, Ashley Burner, Addison Newkirk, Frank Dunning and Malcolm Marsh.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO BUILD, HAVE AN ALL-GAS KITCHEN

In the modern home no provision is made for coal ranges in the kitchen. Instead, gas is depended upon as a fuel for cooking and water-heating service.

Architects and sanitarians realize that gas is a more cleanly fuel and that the fumes and dirt and dust created by a coal stove are not conducive to health.

If you are planning a new home or if you figure on moving, see to it that you get a house with an All-Gas-Kitchen. There are many reasons why you should. A few of them are:

COSTS LESS TO USE
With an All-Gas-Kitchen meals can be cooked and water can be heated more quickly and more cheaply than with a coal range kitchen.

LESS WEAR AND TEAR
With an All-Gas-Kitchen there is no coal or ashes to be carried through the house and no soiling furnishings with smoke, soot or dust.

VERY LITTLE LABOR
An ALL-GAS-KITCHEN calls for no preliminary labor in the building of fires. The fire is lighted and put out by the pressure of a finger. It is ready in an instant. There is no wasted fuel.

ACCURATE COOKING ASSURED
With the range of an All-Gas-Kitchen under the complete control of the operator, the heat can be regulated and directed just where it is needed.

COMFORT AND CLEANLINESS
The All-Gas-Kitchen affords both. Coal stove kitchen comfort is impossible at times and cleanliness is maintained only by unceasing labor.

EQUIPMENT NECESSARY
For average homes—Cabinet Gas Range and Circulating or Boiler Water Heater. For larger homes—Cabinet Gas Ranges, Instantaneous Type of Water Heater and Refuse Destroyer.

These installations are not expensive at first cost and the saving they effect in time, labor and worry make them a very desirable investment.

Thousands of others are using All-Gas-Kitchens, why not you? Let us give you the details.

REAL SUFFERING.

"I know what suffering is, but I have never seen conditions that for misery, desolation, and, as it sometimes seemed, hopelessness, can approach the conditions that prevail, at this very moment, from one end to the other of brave little Belgium," said Captain J. F. Lucey, a former officer in the United States army who has just returned from directing relief work. The interview, given to the New York Times describes in a way that it has not been described before, the need of King Albert's unhappy country. "Never before has the great American heart shown up in such splendid fashion, and in Belgium if you are an American you are not only an angel but a king as well. Our flag they love as their own; our people to them are the very last word in brotherly love and kindness."

We wish that it were possible to reproduce all the things that Captain Lucey says about the splendid work done by the American Relief Commission. One thing that the quotation above emphasizes is the fact that when giving to this worthy cause you are aiding a people that appreciate it. The Plainfield committee is especially devoting itself to the raising of funds to buy condensed milk for the Belgian babies. It has been said that tens of thousands of the little tots are suffering even more than their elders, for they must have milk, and that is an even scarcer commodity than food of other kinds. Several thousand cans of condensed milk have already been sent to Belgium through the generosity of Plainfielders, and it has been our privilege to record the subscriptions of several hundred dollars that have been used exclusively for this purpose. Any persons who wish to add to the Plainfield fund may do so, by sending their checks direct to the Daily Press, which will acknowledge receipt and forward the funds to the local committee.

Probably never before since he entered local politics has Mayor Calkins made more friends than was the case at the dinner of the Business Men's Association on Monday night. There was not a man in the crowd that heard him tell what he hopes to accomplish that was not impressed by his sincerity and his desire to be of service to the whole people. His explanation of the plan of the Taxpayers' Association to raise the money for a thorough survey of conditions was received with interest, and with the hearty endorsement of everyone there. The Mayor realizes that while Plainfield has undobutedly been honestly governed, and all the officers are above reproach, there are many places where more rigid economy can be practiced. That the survey will be welcomed by all deparments, as indicated by the Mayor, testifies to the fact that the men who are running the city are ready and willing to co-operate in any movement which may result in a reduction of the tax rate and increased efficiency.

The current issue of the Municipal Journal describes how the municipal garbage reduction plant at Columbus, Ohio, earned a net profit of $26,501.57 during the last year. A total of 21,629 tons of garbage, or an average of 211 pounds for every person in the city, was collected. This produced 1,186,985 pounds of grease, which brought $52,672.21. The tankage produced amounted to 1,753 tons and it brought $12,987.84 for fertilizer purposes. There were 183 horse and cowhides sold, for which $1,062.30 was received. The total receipts were $66,722.36, and the operating expense, $40,220.78. September was the heaviest month for garbage collection, the total for the month being 2,615 tons. If all this can be done in Columbus, why could not Plainfield do proportionately as well with a municipal system of collecting its garbage and ashes? Certainly some improvement is needed over the present unsatisfactory method.

It is said that railroad employes have stated that were they to raise a fund to advertise their side on the full crew law, the newspapers would refuse to accept the advertising. The story has it that the newspapers have been subsidized and the trainmen's side will be kept out of their columns. The contention is ridiculous. No self respecting newspaper would refuse to give both sides exactly the same privileges, as the trainmen would soon find out, were they to send their advertising copy to the newspapers. In fact we are inclined to believe that many newspapers would print their case as news were a request made to do so. They are giving space in their news columns to the arguments of the railroads, and most of them would do the same thing for the other side, if those who favor continuing the law are not afraid to make themselves known.

It may be true, as a well known Plainfield architect said, that Plainfield has no real fine architecture, but there are hundreds of property owners in the city who are as proud of their modest homes as if they were the finest palaces in the world.

It looks suspiciously as if New Market residents will never see one of their distinguished citizens again, unless he happens to return in care of the police.

Evidently the financial reputation of Plainfield as a city is great. To get a premium of $4.43 on school bonds these days is remarkable.

Soon be time for the Easter bonnets.

POSTPONE EMBASSY BUILDINGS.

Washington, March 3—From present indications, the Italians are the only foreign envoys who seem to have a chance to obtain their desire to have a new embassy home in Washington. For the war in Europe has indefinitely postponed the building of the French, the German and the Austro-Hungarian embassies, which were to have been begun this year. The German embassy had all been planned and the designs had been approved. When Baron Speck von Sternburg left for home he had the plans all drawn up to show the Kaiser his ideas of a beautiful embassy at Washington.

TRAVEL HELPS WITH EDUCATION

Contestants In Press Contest Have Opportunity to Learn About Country.

FOUR SPLENDID TRIPS

Interest Has Increased With Announcement of Names of Contestants and Struggle For Votes Is Now Under Way With a Vim.

The interest in the free tours contest being conducted by the Plainfield Daily Press grows livelier every day, and the first vote exhibit next Saturday will further increase this interest.

Publication of the standing of the candidates will be made at such regular intervals as will be announced later. Those who have considered enrolling their names, and who have not done so, should act promptly, for an early start may decide the victory at the close. By enrolling at this time a candidate is enabled to gather in subscription ballots in greater number with the least expenditure of effort and it gives the candidate's campaign a prestige and rouses her friends to immediate activity in her behalf.

Telephone inquiries as to how to proceed when nominated have been coming into the contest manager. As soon as you receive a letter notifying you of your nomination, you should call on the contest manager at the Press office. In this way you will have the advantage of a personal interview, during which you will receive full information as to how to proceed with your campaign and how to secure votes.

Should it be inconvenient for you to call, telephone and ask to have a representative see you and explain the details and furnish you with the necessary letters and forms, which will be supplied you.

Do Not Be Bashful.

An interview at the office will, however, be found more satisfactory. Do not be timid or bashful. This is a refined effort among women of splendid standing, to secure the advantage of an educational and a vacation tour, and it may surprise you to find "Miss or Mrs. So-and-So" having a pleasant little chat with the contest manager preparatory to enrolling her name.

The ballots now appearing in the Press are valid for nine days after the date of the paper in which each appears. The ballot box is ready to receive them, and many are being sent in through the mails or brought in person to the tour department at the Press office. Perhaps your friends are sending them in for you, assuming that, of course, you have enrolled your name after they took the trouble to nominate you.

It will prove rather disappointing to them to find that you have not taken advantage of their confidence in you and made no efforts in your own behalf to accumulate these votes. Don't forget, the voting is only beginning. Now is the time to enroll.

Education of women is not complete without travel. Women are at a decided disadvantage with men, owing to the facilities the latter have of seeing the world. Hampered by sex and conventionality, women lack opportunities for broadening.

One of the nominees in the Tour Contest, a candidate, by the way, who is hesitating about beginning her campaign because she does not realize the splendid backing and support she can procure when once enrolled, gave as a reason that she did not care much for travel.

A good many years ago when the discomforts connected with travel were many, a noted college professor said: "No one's education is quite complete unless he has seen something of the world." What was true then in the case of a man is just as true today in the case of a woman, since little difference is made now between man and woman's education.

No matter how many books you may read, how many magazines you can devour, nor how many traveling friends there are who write to you glowing letters of their journeys, if you never go beyond the home neighborhood, or even the home city and environments, your conception of the world must be narrow, your opinions stilted, your education unfinished.

Even New Yorkers.

Even the New Yorker, upon whom we are to look as the most cosmopolitan of cosmopolitans, becomes provincial when he knows nothing outside of New York. He runs around his own little circle, on his own little track, and believes there is nothing worth considering outside of his own little outlook. And so with the natives of most other large cities. They are given to believe that the sun rises in the eastern boundary of the city and sets at the western limits.

And so one should seek every opportunity to see something of the world; even make personal sacrifices to gain knowledge at first hand; to become quite human by knowing a great diversity of human beings in their own natural surroundings; and to preserve in one's own mind for the rest of one's life a vision of the wonders of the world viewed with one's own eyes. Men have more opportunity to see the world than have women. They could rough it and bluff it, and somehow make their way about, often under circumstances impossible to woman. A man may ship as a sailor, or go across in the steerage, work at various occupations in the countries he chooses to visit. Moneyless, he can find a way, if he has but the will. But a woman is hampered by her sex and the conventionalities upon which society throughout the civilized world insists. And it is a daring woman, indeed, who will set out alone to visit distant parts of the country—especially if there is not plenty of money in her purse to see her through. So a great many women know nothing or little beyond the narrow surroundings in which their lot has cast them. Even the college graduate, who knows nothing beyond the college walls and the journeys to and from home, has not gained a real higher education which allows a man with less book learning to forge ahead of her in the practical workings of life. Therefore, when an opportunity arises like that given by the Press, it seems that every wide-awake woman in the districts specified should do her utmost to take advantage of it.

Event of a Lifetime.

This trip will be the event of the lifetime for each fortunate individual—not only because of the travel, but because the trip will be prima facie evidence of the multitude of real friends possessed by each member of the party. That alone, with the story of the tour should be something worth treasuring and handing down to one's descendants.

Look over the list of nominees carefully and make sure that your name is in the district in which you reside and not your place of business. If you find that your nome is not in the proper district, telephone the contest manager and mention the fact to him. Be sure that you are in the right district.

Everyone Wins.

The management of the Press has decided to be most liberal to the candidates who may enter this contest. In addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all those candidates who do not win trips, and remain active until the end of the contest, a commission of ten per cent. will be paid on new subscriptions, and a five per cent. commission will be paid on old subscriptions.

REV. C. C. CAIN TO LEAVE GRACE CHURCH

According to the present plans there will be only one change in the local Methodist pastorates for the coming year. Rev. C. C. Cain, who has been pastor of Grace M. E. church for the past four years, has been called to the church at Verona, and has accepted.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, and Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of the Monroe Avenue church, are scheduled to remain in their respective charges another year. According to rumors, the coming session of the conference will be one of the most interesting in its history.

TELLS OF GREAT WORK IN CHINA

Mrs. Sherwood Eddy Speaks Before the Federation of Missionary Societies.

INCREASING INTEREST

Speaker Says That the Chinese Have a Great Love For America—The Women Have a Remarkable Character.

A large and interested audience listened to Mrs. Sherwood Eddy, who spoke at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Plainfield Federation of Women's Missionary Societies. After a short devotional service led by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Mrs. Eddy spoke on "Miracles in Modern China." She has just returned from China where she accompanied Mr. Eddy on his Y. M. C. A. and student tour, which was highly successful. Mrs. Eddy spoke of the splendid co-operation of the missions in China, which was kept up by the work and unity of the members and the large corps of trained and efficient Bible workers. No convert was considered a capable teacher until he was baptized.

Mrs. Eddy's address was divided between the work done in Hangchow and Nanking.

"At the former city the Board of Education had allowed the students three half holidays to attend the Christian meetings," said Mrs. Eddy. "In China the non-Christian governmental students are considered the ruling element. In order to stimulate interest we talk on the theme that interest them first and the principal one is the great interest they take in the education of the women in America. They feel a great love for America, saying she is their only friend. I earnestly hope that the American Republic will always be a friend to her sister Republic, China.

"So we tell them of the Christian education of the women and on the second day we take up Bible study, telling them what it did for the millions of the world and how it uplifted the women. We tell them the rise so many other foreign products so why not take something that really is great. We tell them it is the religion of Asia and not of the West. We are giving them what belongs to them. All we ask is that they put the Bible to the test by studying the four books of the 'Life of Jesus,' and they are not bound by so doing to become Christians. At our meeting in Hangchow we talked to them in this fashion and after the meeting 283 signed Bible study cards and just as soon as they did teachers were provided and 80 classes began work.

"The women of China have a remarkable character. They are exceedingly capable and have power of taking hold of a thing and pushing it through. Their very strength will be their ruin unless they are rightly directed. These active, energetic and capable women need the light of Jesus. Their worship is so pitiful. One leading Chinese woman said to me, 'We women live as in the bottom of a well and see only a streak of light, while you Western women live as on a hill and see clearly all around.'

"In Nonking the Government allowed the meeting to be held in a large theatre, three miles outside the city, providing carfare to all who presented tickets, and who really came to go. When we got to the meeting it was almost impossible to get in. All you could see was this seething mass of people. There were two thousand inside the theatre and a thousand outside waiting patiently for their turn to come in and hear about Jesus. The Government had sent a band to entertain the people outside of the meeting-place while they waited. It was an opportunity of a lifetime for me, one I shall never forget, to be facing 2,000 non-Christian women and speaking the word of God to them and God held that audience and stirred their hearts to come under the influence of the Gospel of Christianity.

"'Everyone of you women can be a mission to China,' concluded the speaker. "First by reading missionary magazines, one of your own denomination and an inter-denominational one. Second, you can pray for those women in that far off country, for prayer is the power that moves the world. Third, and by far the greatest mission you can accomplish is by giving yourself. China needs teachers who are a success in this country, to go over there and preach the Gospel. I urge upon you mothers, if your daughter or son feels the calling to go to China, do not restrain him or her for they will be doing a noble work. The women of Europe are preaching a great lesson to us. Mothers are sending husbands and sons, sisters are sending brothers, and girls are sending their fiances. Through tears they make these sacrifices for king and country. Should not we be willing to sacrifice something in this spiritual warfare where God is our King?"

Swimming News and Notes

The 500-yard metropolitan swimming championship, which took place in the natatorium of the New York Athletic Club on February 24, proved to be a dismal failure to the followers of aquatic sports. Although the race was close throughout between Wheatley, Reilly and Vollmer, the time was very slow—6:32 3-5—as everyone expected to see the national record of 6:20 3-5 go by the boards. Wheatley was credited with doing 6:17 in time trials, and so were Reilly and Vollmer.

Wheatley and Reilly kept in the van for about 400 yards, when Vollmer began to creep up on them, and the last fifty yards proved to be a struggle between Vollmer and Wheatley, the former winning out by inches. Several of the contestants kept swimming out of their course and kept running into one another, which is the cause for the slow time made.

Arthur McAleenan won the metropolitan fancy diving championship, far outclassing his team-mates, Downes and Dunn, the former taking second place and the latter third. McAleenan showed better form than he has at any time this season, and if he can keep it should have no trouble in landing the national title.

The new natatorium at Rutgers College will be thrown open on March 10, when an open water carnival will be held. The events to be held are the 500-metre swim, 200-yard relay, 100-yard junior championship, 50-yard handicap and fancy diving.

Wheatley is going to try to break his own American record for the 500-meter swim, and the New York A. C. relay team will go after their own 200-yard record of 1:43 2-5 made in January.

It is quite likely that Rutgers will join the intercollegiate swimming association in another year. They should now be in position to develop strong swimming and water polo teams with the advent of the new natatorium.

The Montclair A. C. has entered the swimming field, and is now booking dates with the various colleges in the East, and intends to enter the field of open competition in the very near future.

Tom Whitaker has received a hurry call to coach the Annapolis (Naval Academy) swimmers. Annapolis took the measure of the Columbia swimmers on Saturday, and it is quite evident that Whitaker's good coaching is beginning to tell already.

Whitaker has also taken a hold of Dippy and Tomlinson, the two phenomenal schoolboy swimmers of Philadelphia, and under Whitaker's clever tutelage, they should fast regain their former speed and form, which are the two main factors in swimming.

The individual championships of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association will be decided in the Yale pool on Friday, and hope runs high that more than one of the present records will be shattered.

The season so far has been almost bare of standard performances. Hoadley, of Yale, lowered the 50-yard figures to 25 1-5 seconds in December, and that ended the smashing process. This has been due chiefly to the custom of using fast swimmers in several events at each meet, and the consequent inclination to slow up when sure of victory.

Herbert Vollmer, of Columbia, and James Shryock, of Pennsylvania, have beaten the 100 and 220 intercollegiate marks in open competition, but never in a league contest. On Friday these two and others will have their chance.

A number of out-of-town entries have been received for the interscholastic championships to be held on Saturday at the New York Athletic Club, and many of the local stars will start, so that the meet promises to be quite as big a success as did the brilliant one run off recently by Princeton University.

The Brookline High School team, of Boston, is coming to defend its several titles, and Leo Handy, the crack all-around performer, may be counted upon to shatter his own century and furlong records, for he travelled well under them in the Brookline township championships, in a 75-foot pool, the same length as the Mercury Foot bath.

Duke Kanamaoku, the speedy Hawaiian, who gave Australians a surprise last month by creating a 100-yard world's swimming record of 53 3-5 seconds in defeating William Barry, their champion, will head for Southern California as soon as he has completed his present engagements and take quarters at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, of which he is a member, to train for the outdoor championships.

He will be prepared for the San Francisco races by George Freeth, the club coach, and the man who brought out Ludy Langer, the 440-yard international record holder.

Meanwhile Freeth is devoting his energies to the development of a soccer water polo team, which will be entered in the national tournament next July. The players likely to be finally selected are: George Barton, F. C. Wood, Clyde Svendsen, C. Vulter, J. Dougherty, Robert Stahl, Gale Farquhar and Charles Haydock.

SPORTING NOTES

Kentucky horsemen are getting ready for the derby for 3-year-olds to be run May 8.

First reports from the south show the importance of Red Cross corps in baseball.

Philadelphia horsemen are to meet Saturday night to promote racing, breeding and steeplechasing.

Jack Johnson's adventures trying to get into Mexico would make more interesting reading than the fight dope.

It is said that Mike Mitchell, released by Washington to Richmond, will quit baseball to follow the ponies.

The American Henley will be rowed on the Schuylkill River, Philadelphia, on May 22, the course being 1 mile and 550 yards.

The next athletic meet at the Frisco Fair is the gymnastic championships on March 26 and 27. Wrestling will begin April 16.

The International League troubles will be adjusted on March 15, when each club will put up $10,000, as a guarantee, and the schedule will be announced.

Chicago will have a 25-mile bike roadrace on March 14, over the boulevards of the Northeast Side. Newark opens its bike season on the 28th.

New Orleans is looking forward to a corking bout on March 21, when Joe Mandot, the baker boy, meets Joe Shughrue, the New York bearcat who made it tough for Welsh.

Santa Barbara opens a new golf course today with an amateur event. Goodly prizes have been offered to tempt the professionals to make the trip to the coast.

The Far Eastern Olympic will be held at Shanghai on May 15 to 22. Dr. Wu Ting-fang, former minister to Washington, is the organizer of the meet. Filipinos, Japs and Siamese will compete with the Chinese for honors.

"Should Jack Johnson succeed in defeating Jess Willard, he will have accomplished a feat that has not been equalled in ring history," says a prominent sport writer. "The nearest approach to it was when Bob Fitzsimmons, at the age of 35, conquered Jim Corbett at Carson City.

"Whatever may be said against Willard, it is a fact that he is the best white heavyweight that has come to the front during the past 10 years. Yet a supposedly dissipated negro at the age of 37 is picked to beat him. On the face of it there must be something wrong with such a conclusion."

"In order to win Johnson must perform what past pugilistic history shows is the nature of a miracle. With the exception of Fitz, who was considered a freak, no ring champion since the time of Sullivan has been able to defend his title at the age of 37, and even Fitz met defeat at that age. Today there is not a first-class man in any division as old as Johnson, or even near his age."

GETTING AFTER BALL PLAYERS

Washington, March 3.—Walter Johnson, who is said to draw $12,000 a year; Ty Cobb, who receives a beggarly $15,000, and Tris Speaker, whose compensation was jumped to $18,000 at the beginning of the baseball war, will have to do business with the income tax collectors this year. The income tax bureau of the Treasury Department has notified managers of all baseball clubs to withhold tax on salaries. All married men will have to pay 1 per cent. on all salary in excess of $4,000, and single men will be mulcted of 1 per cent. on all in excess of $3,000.

SURVEY OF BASEBALL TALENT IN BOROUGH

Plenty of Material Ready For Shaping Process in N. P. H. S.

With the first scheduled game of the season just one month off, the members of the North Plainfield High School baseball team, and those who expect to try for places this year, are beginning to look around for their togs and gloves and commence the warming up work. But one more game remains to be played on the basketball schedule, and after next Saturday all interest will undoubtedly be turned from the court to the diamond.

Although the school athletes failed to retain the basketball title that was won in 1913-14, the baseball prospects are exceedingly bright, and the team has fine chances of accomplishing something that no other borough team has ever done, that of annexing two championships from Plainfield in successive years. With practically the same material as he had last year, Captain Smalley is lucky in having a squad largely made up of experienced players, although, as in all the past seasons, he and the coaches will have one or two drawbacks to contend with.

At the beginning of the school year the first base position was the only one that bothered the leader, and although it does yet, there is one of more importance that has come up. When "Dan" Denny left school it put "Ernie" Stahl in line, for all the moundwork, and although "Germany" can and will undoubtedly do a large share of the work this year, he cannot be expected to bear the full burden of pitching.

The filling of Burner's and Denny's places on the team will be the hardest work. Harold Meade, a senior, may be the man for the place, but Edson Day and Pete VanMater will also be candidates for the position.

Leaving these two positions still unsettled, the boroughites should have one of the best teams in years. Smalley will, of course, do the bulk of the backstop work, with Marsh as a "sub." "Ronnie" Conroy will have no difficulty in taking care of the second station, as his worth last year could not be disputed, and "Wren" Townley will hold down the difficult corner. With one year of experience to his credit, Oscar Dilts should be one of the strong points in the infield, as his work all last season as a "rooky" was creditable. He is also a consistent hitter. In the outfield three good and tried men will be placed, that trio being: Hebert in left, Abrams in right and VanMater behind second base.

From the present interest shown there will probably be a record-breaking number of candidates when the first call is issued for the tossing of the horsehide. The first game is scheduled for April 3, with Clinton at Hyde Oval.

KNOCKS AND BOOSTS ON "LASSIE" CIRCUIT

A little bird told us that that challenge of the Y. W. C. A. to the winner of the local feminine scholastic championship, would probably fall through, as the association lassies have no court to play on. Enter, "Plainfield Five." They say they will issue a challenge to the local schoolgirls just as soon as the championship games are over. 'Nuff sed!

Perhaps some of you have heard of the "Chi Gamma Chi?" No. Well, they are a group of Plainfield maidens who are practicing private basketball just at present, and expect to spring a winning quintet on the local basketball court next season. (Editor's note — Whaddayamean, "private basketball?")

Rumor has it that the "Plainfield Five" is going to furnish the "eats" for the basketball players on Thursday night, at the Columbus Club court. If you don't believe the girls are just as good in the cuisine line as they are on the court, ask some of the male members how they liked the "feed" (if they are alive, afterwards). We'll tell you later what they had.

A member of the Columbus Club now tells us that there will be a female tennis team representing that institution this summer. You certainly have got to "hand it to 'em" for the progressive spirit. "Bless the ladies, we never could get along without them." It all goes to show that these members of the gentle sex do not need the "vote" to move forward.

To top the direful calamity, one of the Y. W. C. A. girls, who was injured in the recent Trenton game, received a polite bill for services rendered by the capitol lassies. The Trentonian girls have a reputation for being very businesslike in their dealings with others.

As a wind-up of the basketball season, a game between an all-star first team quintet, composed of Plainfield and North Plainfield High School girls, and a second team would be appropriate. A popular basketball follower should be appointed to pick the two aggregations.

The latest club to enter the basketball field is the Women's League, of St. Joseph's church. This organization expects to put a team on the local field within the next week. Miss Rose Cooper is leading the borough aggregation.

Watch these columns, something novel is going to be sprung by a local quintet in the near future. We know, but cannot tell as yet.

WEST ORANGE EASY PREY FOR N. P. H. S.

Boroughites Walk Away With Decision In Last Home Game of the Season.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team defeated the West Orange High School quintet in the last night game of the season, last evening, in Saengerbund Hall. The final score was 40 to 21. The team work of the borough five was good in both periods, but in the first half they could not seem to make their shots good and they missed many from right under the basket. The first period ended 20 to 13 in favor of N. P. H. S.

In the second half, the home team got back more to its old form and had doubled its opponents' score within the first few minutes of play. After the first five minutes, Townley, VanMater and Hebert left the game, and Day, Lunger and French took their respective places. This is the first game that Lunger has played with High School and he promises to be a fine addition to next year's squad.

The score:

LOCAL B. P. O. E. DRIVES OFFERED FOR ROLL-OFF

A meeting of the executive committee of the B. P. O. E. Senior Bowling League has been called for next Sunday afternoon by President George Hirtzel. The meeting will be held in the Jersey City clubhouse at 3 o'clock. The purpose of the meeting is to select officials and alleys for the roll-off match between the Newark and Elizabeth teams to decide who shall hold fourth place.

Chauncey F. Stout, of the local lodge, is a member of the committee and he has offered the use of the Watchung avenue drives for the match.

N. P. H. S. GAME PENDING.

Miss Lillian Spencer, manager of the North Plainfield High School basketball team, is trying to arrange a game with Rutherford High School to be played in Saengerbund Hall, Friday afternoon. The cancellation by Westfield for today's game left the boroughites without a contest this week. The Rutherford manager had a game pending, but if it does not materialize will bring her team here Friday.

Elizabeth, March 3—Saturday, May 1, is the date set for the baseball game between Pingry School and Plainfield High School and the contest will take place at Pingry Oval, Manager Mraviag announces.

LEAL STARS RESIGN, THINGS LOOK DARK

Something Else to Worry About In Private School Camp.

The Leal School baseball team's chances for copping the interscholastic championship this season have been given a big setback right at the start with the announcement that Captain Chauncey Stewart and Fred Dickerson, two of the mainstays and leaders of Leal athletics, will not play with the team. Stewart has already resigned his captaincy, which was one-half of a double honor bestowed upon him this year, and as yet his place has not yet been filled. There are several candidates for the position, and the election will probably take place in the near future.

The reasons given for the resignation of both players is lack of time from their studies. Both graduate this year, and are carrying heavy schedules, which require more time than in past years to obtain creditable and passing marks.

These two vacant places, both in the infield, will be hard to fill. Stewart being one of the best shortstops the private school has ever put out. Dickerson has played third base, in the field and behind the bat, and was good in each of these positions. Both were fairly good hitters, and their strength in that department will also be greatly missed. The squad will probably start practice on Crescent Oval soon.

SECOND GAME FOR MARCH 10,-MAYBE-

New Official Named For Tentative Date Set at Meeting.

At a meeting of the coaches and managers of the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School girls' basketball teams, held yesterday afternoon, Wednesday, March 10, was decided upon as the date for the second game of the interscholastic series for the city championship. The contest will be staged on Saengerbund Hall court and will start promptly at 3:30 o'clock. A condition was agreed upon by which the game could be postponed if necessary, provided that postponement took place this week.

Owing to the dissatisfaction prevalent among the players over the decisions in the former game, which resulted in a defeat of the boroughites, an out of town referee was urged and the teams have secured the services of Edward Thorpe, of New York, a representative from the A. G. Spaulding Company. As the first game was played with but one official there was much wrangling as to whether or not there should be an umpire in the second game. No conclusion was reached in this however.

If the North Plainfield lassies win the second game, a third will necessarily have to be played on a neutral court, to decide the winner of the series. Odds favor North Plainfield in this, as the Plainfield girls have been putting up a poor article of basketball lately. The third game will probably be played at the Y. M. C. A. or the Columbus Club.

HARD WINTER AHEAD, "LIDDY" QUITS GAME

Fanwood Catcher Will Stick to the Weekly Salary Check.

Because of the unsettled condition of organized baseball, which has been upset by lawsuits and "jumps" since last season, Eugene Lidgate, of Fanwood, who played last year with the Lancaster team of the Tri-State League until he became an outlaw, has decided to give the game up for this year at least. "Liddy" has a good position in New York and he figures that if he should decide to return to the diamond one year's rest would not do any harm.

The Fanwood player predicts that this is going to be the hardest year organized baseball has ever seen and the minor leagues will suffer greatly. Lidgate had some trouble last season because he refused to play one day with the Lancaster team without pay and he was suspended. From that time till the close of the season he played independent ball. He was recently declared a "free agent." He intends to play week-end ball in this vicinity.

PEG O' MY HEART

By J. Hartley Manners

Copyright, 1913, by Dodd, Mead & Company

CHAPTER XXII.

The Temple of Friendship.

"I CAME over to ask Mrs. Chichester's permission for you two young ladies to go to a dance tonight. It's just across from here at the Assembly rooms," said Jerry.

Peg beamed joyfully. It was just what she wanted to do. Ethel viewed the suggestion differently.

"It's very kind of you," she said, "but it's quite impossible."

"Oh!" ejaculated Peg.

"Impossible?" ejaculated Jerry.

"I'm sorry," and Ethel went to the door.

"So am I," replied Jerry regretfully. "I would have given you longer notice only it was made up on the spur of the moment. Don't you think you could?"

"I don't care for dancing. Besides, my head aches."

"What a pity!" exclaimed the disappointed young man. Then he said eagerly, "Do you suppose your mother would allow Miss Margaret to go?"

"I'll ask her," and Ethel left the room.

Peg ran across, stopped the door from closing and called after Ethel:

"I didn't mean to hurt ye—indade I didn't. I wanted to talk to ye—that was all—an' ye made me angry!" Ethel disappeared without even turning her head.

Peg came into the room ruefully and sat down on the sofa. She was thoroughly unhappy.

Jerry looked at her a moment, walked over to her and asked her, "What's the matter?"

"One of us girls has been brought up all wrong. I tried to make friends with her just now an' only made her angry, as I do every one in this house whenever I open my mouth."

"Aren't you friends?"

"Indade—indade—indade—we're not. None of them are with me."

"What a shame!"

"Wait until you hear what me aunt says when ye ask her about the dance!"

"Don't you think she'll let you go?"

"No, I do not." She looked at him quizzically for a moment. Then she burst out laughing.

"Misther Jerry, will ye take me all the same if me aunt doesn't consent?"

"Why, Peg"— he began astonishedly.

"But I haven't got an evenin' dress. Does it matter?"

"Not in the least, but"—

"Will this one do?"

"It's very charming; still"—

"Stains and all?"

"My dear Peg"—

"Perhaps they'll rub out. It's the prettiest one me aunt gave me, an' I put it on tonight—because—I thought you—that is, some one might come here tonight. At least I hoped he would, an' ye've come!" Suddenly she broke out passionately: "Oh, ye must take me! Ye must! I haven't had a bit of pleasure since I've been here. It will be wondherful. Besides, I would not rest all night with you dancin' over there an' me a prisoner over here."

"Now, Peg"— he tried to begin.

"It's no use, I tell ye. Ye've got to take me. Are you ashamed of me because I'm ignorant? Are ye?"

"Not a bit," replied Jerry heartily. "I was just the same at your age. I used to scamp at school and shirk at college until I found myself so far behind fellows I despised that I was ashamed. Then I went after them tooth and nail until I caught them up and passed them."

"Did ye?" cried Peg eagerly. "I will, too," she said.

"Will you?"

She nodded vigorously.

"I will—indade I will. From now on I'll do everything they tell me an' learn everything they teach me if it kills me!"

"I wish you would," he said seriously.

"An' when I pass everybody else an' know more than any one ever knew—will ye be very proud of me?"

"Yes, Peg. Even more than I am now."

"Are ye now?"

"I am proud to think you are my friend."

"Ye'd ha' won yer wager. We are friends, aren't we?"

"I am yours."

"Sure I'm yours all right."

She looked at him, laughed shyly and pressed her cheeks. He was watching her closely.

"What are you laughing at?" he asked.

"Do ye know what Tom Moore wrote about friendship?"

"No. Tell me."

Peg sat at the piano and played very softly the prelude to an old Irish song.

Jerry said surprisedly, "Oh, so you play?"

"Afther a fashion. Me father taught me. Me aunt can't hear it. An' the teacher in the house said it was dhreadful an' that I must play scales for two years more before I thry a tune. She said I had no ear."

Jerry laughed as he replied, "I think they're very pretty."

"Do ye? Well, watch them an' mebbe ye won't mind me singin' so much. An', afther all, ye're only a farmer, aren't ye?"

"Hardly that." And Jerry laughed again.

"This is called 'A Temple to Friendship,'" she explained.

"Indeed?"

"An' it's about a girl who built a shrine an' she thought she wanted to put Friendship into it. She thought she wanted Friendship. Afther awhile she found out her mistake. Listen." And Peg sang, in a pure, tremulous little voice that vibrated with feeling, the following:

"'A temple to Friendship,' said Laura enchanted,
'I'll build in this garden—the thought is divine!'
Her temple was built, and she now only wanted
An image of Friendship to place on the shrine.

She flew to a sculptor, who set down before her
A Friendship, the fairest his art could invent!
But so cold and so dull that the youthful adorer
Saw plainly this was not the idol she meant.

"'Oh, never,' she cried, 'could I think of enshrining
An image whose looks are so joyless and dim.
But yon little god (Cupid) upon roses reclining,
We'll make, if you please, sir, a Friendship of him.'

"So the bargain was struck; with the little god laden
She joyfully flew to her shrine in the grove.
'Farewell,' said the sculptor; 'you're not the first maiden
Who came but for Friendship and took away—Love.'"

She played the refrain softly after she had finished the song. Gradually the last note died away.

Jerry looked at her in amazement.

"Where in the world did you learn that?"

"Me father taught it to me," replied

"Don't say that," Jerry interrupted.

Jerry repeated as though to himself:

"'Who came but for Friendship and took away Love.'"

"Isn't that beautiful?" And Peg's face had a rapt expression as she looked up at Jerry.

"Do you believe it?" he asked.

"Didn't Tom Moore write it?" she answered.

"Is there anything better than friendship between man and woman?"

She nodded:

"Indade there is. Me father felt it for me mother or I wouldn't be here now. Me father loved me mother with all his strength an' all his soul."

"Could you ever feel it?" he asked, and there was an anxious look in his eyes as he waited for her to answer.

She nodded.

"Have you ever felt it?" he went on.

"All me life," answered Peg in a whisper.

"As a child, perhaps," remarked Jerry. "Some day it will come to you as a woman, and then the whole world will change for you."

"I know," replied Peg softly. "I've felt it comin'."

"Since when?" and once again suspense was in his voice.

"Ever since—ever since"— Suddenly she broke off breathlessly, and, throwing her arms above her head as though in appeal, she cried:

"Oh, I do want to improve meself. Now I wish I had been born a lady. I'd be more worthy of"—

"What? Whom?" asked Jerry urgently and waiting anxiously for her answer.

Peg regained control of herself, and, cowering down again on to the piano stool, she went on hurriedly:

"I want knowledge now. I know what you mean by bein' at a disadvantage. I used to despise learnin'. I've laughed at it. I never will again. I'm no one's equal. I'm just a little Irish nothin'"—

"Don't say that," Jerry interrupted.

"Thank ye for promisin' to help me, Misther Jerry. But would ye mind very much if the bad little somethin' had one more spurt before I killed it altogether? Would ye?"

"Why, how do you mean?"

"Take me to that dance tonight—even without me aunt's permission. Will ye? I'll never forget ye for it if ye will. An' it'll be the last wrong thing I'll ever do. I'm just burnin' all over at the thought of it. My heart's burstin' for it." She suddenly hummed a waltz refrain and whirled around the room, the incarnation of childish abandonment.

Mrs. Chichester came slowly down the stairs, gazing in horror at the little bouncing figure. As Peg whirled past the newel post she caught sight of her aunt. She stopped dead.

"What does this mean?" asked Mrs. Chichester angrily.

Peg sank into a chair.

Jerry shook hands with Mrs. Chichester and said:

"I want you to do something that will make the child very happy. Will you allow her to go to a dance at the Assembly rooms tonight?"

"Certainly not," replied Mrs. Chichester severely.

"I could have told ye what she'd say wurrd for wurrd," muttered Peg.

"I beg your pardon," said Jerry, straightening up, hurt at the old lady's tone. "The invitation was also extended to your daughter, but she declined. I thought you might be pleased to give your niece a little pleasure."

"Go to a dance—unchaperoned?"

"My mother and sisters will be there."

"A child of her age?" said Mrs. Chichester.

"Child is it?" cried Peg vehemently.

"Margaret!" and the old lady attempted to silence Peg with a gesture.

"Plaze let me go. I'll study me head off tomorrow if ye'll only let me dance me feet off a bit tonight. Plaze let me!"

The old lady raised her hand commanding Peg to stop.

"It was most kind of you to trouble to come over, Jerry, but it is quite out of the question."

Peg sprang up.

Jerry looked at her as if imploring her not to anger her aunt any further. He shook Mrs. Chichester's hand and said:

"I'm sorry. Good night."

He turned and saw Peg deliberately pointing to the pathway and indicating that he was to meet her there.

Peg, left alone, hurried over to the windows and looked out into the night. The moonlight was streaming full down the path through the trees. In a few moments Peg went to the foot of the stairs and listened. Not hearing anything, she crept upstairs into her own little mauve room, found a cloak and some slippers and a hat and just as quietly crept down again into the living room.

She just had time to hide the cloak and hat and slippers on the immense window seat when the door opened and Ethel came into the room. She walked straight to the staircase without looking at Peg and began to mount the stairs.

"Hello, Ethel!" called out Peg, all remembrance of the violent discussion gone in the excitement of the present. "I'm studyin' for an hour. Are ye still angry with me? Won't ye say 'Good night?' Well, then, I will. Good night, Ethel, an' God bless you."

Peg's little heart beat excitedly.

The one thought that beat through her quick brain was:

"Will Jerry come back for me?"

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

By Mrs. Eva Leonard

Dick sat looking at the biscuits. They certainly were not much for size and they were hard and dark.

"Are you supplying ammunition for the belligerents?" he asked at last, a quizzical smile on his face.

Nell flushed angrily. "These are for the enemy at home," she replied with a toss of the head. Dick laughed.

"What happened to them?" he asked.

"I don't know; I pawed around just as usual." She was looking ruefully at the broken one in her hand.

"Flour is so high, I thought you had been driven to using other ingredients." Dick was laughing at her.

"My biscuits are usually good. I don't know why so much need be said about it when I have a failure," snapped Nell.

"Oh, I didn't think there were explosives in them." Dick threw up his hands in mock alarm.

"It isn't funny," she persisted. "Yesterday it was the bacon, and today it is the biscuits. I have brilliant successes day after day and you never seem to be aware of what you are eating; but just let a little something go wrong and you talk half an hour about it."

"Now, Nell, that isn't fair," said Dick, sobering up; "and even if it were true it would go to show how good a cook you are when any deviation from the usual success attracts my attention."

"It ought to be the other way around," objected the little cook. "failures should not be noticed and the successes praised."

"I surely praise your cooking in a very practical way, by stowing away sizable portions of it—but—the secretary of the interior would be sure to file a protest if I ate these. I love you, dear, but I can't eat these biscuits."

Dick looked pleasant, but she felt the tears coming in spite of her and got up to get some bread, saying, "I know they are not fit to eat."

Nell dashed cold water in her eyes, dried them, and taking the bread plate returned to the table. Dick praised the roast and the dessert and tried valiantly to clear the atmosphere, but it was evident all Nell's gaiety was forced. When dinner was over he said:

"I tell you what, little girl, stack the dishes and we'll go to a show tonight. You stick around home too much and it isn't good for you. What do you say?"

"That will be fine!" Nell brightened at once and flew around to get ready to go.

On their way home Dick said: "Are you all cheered up? You have no idea what a beast you make me feel when you are hurt as you were tonight. You surely know I never would say anything intentionally to give you pain."

"It isn't that, dear; it's a sense of failure. The trouble is women stay at home and think of trifles. They really have to magnify them to make them fill their lives." Nell tucked her hand farther into his arm.

"Women as a rule do not have a wide enough range of interests," said Dick, squeezing her hand.

Household Hints

WORTH KNOWING

Paper Dishcloths—Everyone knows what a disagreeable task it is to wash dishcloths after having used them on greasy cooking utensils. This can be eliminated by using instead the heavy wrapping paper which comes on meat; when it begins to break it can be rolled into a ball and thrown into the garbage can. It can be used in the same way in washing the sink. A little salt on a damp paper is effective in removing soot from the tea kettle or any cooking utensil, particularly the graniteware now so much in use. This does away with washing greasy dishcloths.

Safe Way to Cook Tomatoes With Milk—Put sugar, salt, pepper and butter in tomatoes, and a pinch of soda. When they have boiled up well, commence adding the milk. Put what thickening is needed in the milk; put only a part of milk in at a time and let boil up each time before adding more; put in just a small portion the first two times, add what is left the next time. Keep stirring while adding the milk.

To Clean Gold Thread—Tarnished gold embroidery may be cleaned by dipping a brush in pulverized burnt alum, then brushing the embroidery thoroughly.

To Clean Brussels Carpets and Rugs—Get five cents' worth cornmeal, four cents' worth gasoline; mix; sprinkle thick on carpets, let stand one hour; sweep with a good broom. Looks like new; wont hurt the color.

For Sugar Curing Pork—For 100 pounds of pork, take two quarts salt, three ounces saltpeter, one-half pound dark brown sugar, two ounces black pepper. Mix well and rub well the flesh sides and ends with this mixture. Let meat lie ten days, then hang up and smoke to taste.

SOME TESTED RECIPES

Cannon Rice Balls—Wash and boil one cup rice as usual; drain, but do not blanch; season with salt and pepper to taste, a little grated nutmeg, if desired; then roll into balls and serve with cheese sauce. Sauce: Put one tablespoon butter into saucepan over fire, remove from fire, add one tablespoon flour, mix until smooth, then add one cup cold milk slowly; add three tablespoons grated cheese, salt and pepper to taste and serve with rice balls. You can add one tablespoon caramel to sauce if desired.

Cherry Beet Salad—Wash and boil beets; with French cutter cut into small balls; then add one-half cup vinegar, one tablespoon sugar, one teaspoon salt, dash white pepper and set aside until ready to use. Serve on bed of lettuce.

Cherry Dumplings—One cup flour, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon lard, one tablespoon milk, two teaspoons butter, twenty-four cherries. Sift flour, baking powder and salt into bowl, add lard and rub in very lightly; add enough cold water to hold together; roll out on floured board, one-eighth inch thick; cut into four parts. Put six cherries on each piece of dough; add sugar to taste; wet edges with cold water, shape in hands and press edges together. Put into buttered bakedish; brush tops with milk; sprinkle with sugar and put remainder of butter in small pieces over top. Cover and bake twenty minutes; uncover and bake twenty minutes more. When uncovering the dumplings, you can add one cup milk instead of making sauce.

MILE-A-MINUTE LACE

Make a chain of seven stitches; join in ring.

First row—Chair four double in ring, chain two double in ring three times, making four double with two chain between each double. Chain four, turn.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

By Alice Crew Gall

Can You Guess It?

How many guessed the animal I told of yesterday?
Really quite a number I expect.
Perhaps you've never seen one, but have read of them in books,
So if you guessed the [illegible], you're correct.

The animal I'll tell you of today is very queer,
It's something like a mouse, but it has wings,
And then again, one might say, it is something like a bird.
Except this little creature never sings.

It does not like the sunlight, but hides away all day,
In hollow trees, and in dark old church towers,
And then when evening comes along, this funny little thing
Comes out and flies around for hours and hours.

Its food is insects (I suppose you know what insects are),
And here's another most peculiar thing,
When winter comes this creature finds a cozy hollow tree
And hangs head down, inside it, until spring!

This seems to me right difficult—I really don't believe
A boy or girl could do a thing like that;
At any rate, don't try it, or perhaps you'd come to grief,
For you are not constructed like a B - -.

Oh, mercy me! I nearly told the little creature's name;
I guess I'd better stop before I do.
You think right hard about it, and tomorrow I will try
To have another animal for you.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Facts Versus Fancy.

If a speaker mis-states facts, either through ignorance, lack of memory or with intent to deceive, the conclusions drawn from such statements are not worthy of serious consideration.

The second speaker at the debate on woman suffrage at the High School last Thursday evening made many such mis-statements. He said, "No Suffragist today, that is no Suffragist of any note, will say that voting is right." On January 25, this speaker sat not fifteen feet from Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, the most noted Suffragist in this or any other country, when she said at the legislative hearing on suffrage, "We claim that the qualifications for citizenship in the State shall apply equally to all the citizens of the State, and if there is any qualification for citizenship which is applied to men which cannot be applied to women, then that qualification is unjust and contrary to every fundamental principle of a democratic government. We do not claim that a qualification for citizenship and the right to vote are identical, because we believe, we Suffragists, that every citizen has the right to vote, that the right inheres in citizenship." She then talked for half an hour on voting as a right.

This anti speaker also said that only ten per cent. of the women of the country are Suffragists. Putting aside the thousands of women who are voting for full citizenship in thirty-six States of the country, 3,675,845 women, or 17 per cent. of the women of the country are already voters. Some of these women, those who live in Illinois, cannot vote for the Governor of the State or the members of their Legislature, but 2,108,000 women are enfranchised on exactly the same terms as men, and over four million women will be entitled to vote for the next President of the United States.

This speaker said that the suffrage map showing 49½ per cent. of the country as having equal suffrage represented area and not voters. There are 200,000 more women voters in California than there will be in New Jersey, just as many women voters in Kansas as there will be in our State and 200,000 apiece in Colorado, Washington and Kansas. Woodrow Wilson was only elected by 6,500,000 votes, so that four million voters, voting for ninety-two members of the Electoral College are not to be sneezed at.

The same speaker referred to the "women of his own city of Newark" as being in their homes and not caring about votes. The census shows that there are about 30,000 women in Newark over sixteen years of age, and that of these 34,869 are working for their living. Only 5,295 are in domestic service and the other 29,576 work in Newark's stores, factories, sweatshops and offices, for ten hours a day and at an average wage of less than six dollars a week. The only States in the country having an eight-hour law for working women are three equal suffrage States, Washington, California and Colorado, and Idaho has a nine-hour law.

The woman anti-suffrage speaker at the hearing claimed that women could accomplish more as non-voters than they could as partisan voters. A concrete instance of the sort of influence women have without the vote occurred in Paterson three weeks ago. An ordinance was introduced in the City Council to separate the dance halls from the saloons. All of the women's organizations of the city were back of it. The Y. W. C. A. held a mass meeting which was attended by three thousand women, at which speakers assured their hearers that if they would "deluge the City Hall" the next night when the ordinance was to be voted upon, the Council would not dare to defeat the measure. The City Hall was jammed to the doors by thousands of women, representing chiefly the Y. W. C. A. and various church organizations, and the slogan was, "Give the Girls of Paterson a Chance." One speaker went so far as to assure the Council that they did not stand for votes for women, they would rather trust to the protection of the men of their city. The ordinance was defeated by a good majority, and one member of the Council explained his vote. He said he came from a ward where many people earned their living through the saloons; that the saloons would be ruined if this ordinance was passed; that his "constituents, the men who put me here," desired him to vote against the measure, and he was therefore going to do so, as he believed he was there to represent his constituents. Commenting on this on February 17, the Paterson "Guardian" said editorially, "There is one sure bet that if the vote is given to the women of the State, and that right is exercised in this city—and there is no reason to feel that it will not be—there will be a dance ordinance passed that will regulate those places properly for the safe-guarding of the young people, and it will not require days and days of labor to bring that about. The women will be in a position to stand up for a better law, and demand that the aldermen give it to them. The vote is a mighty powerful weapon and it counts. The vote for the woman will put the army of school teachers of the State in the same class with the firemen and policemen and other men of the cities who receive salaries that are in the control of the municipal government."

A good deal was said about Colorado at the debate, although no reference was made to labor troubles in Arkansas, Michigan, West Virginia and Roosevelt, New Jersey. Colorado has been so generally misrepresented by the Anti-Suffragists of the country during the last year that the people of the State have been roused to great indignation. The following proclamation passed unanimously by the Colorado Senate on January 22, 1915, expresses Colorado's opinion of women suffrage:

"Whereas, the question of woman suffrage has become an important issue in many States of the Union, and

"Whereas, woman suffrage was made a part of the organic law of the State of Colorado more than twenty-two years ago, and

"Whereas, the operation and effect of woman suffrage in this State is being made the subject of misrepresentation in other States where the question is an issue.

"Therefore, we deem it to be our duty to say that experience has demonstrated that woman suffrage is not only a just recognition of the rights of all before the law, but has proven in all respects materially helpful to good government among the people, and to a noticeable degree has inculcated a higher respect for the majesty and supremacy of the law."

HIGH WAISTED TAILLEURS ARE YOUTHFUL.

The high waistline always suggests youth, and new spring tailleurs, short of waist and of skirt, are fetchingly girlish. This model is of gabardine in a new and fashionable shade of green with a white Tipperary sailor trimmed with green grapes and black velvet. While really fastening at the front, the frock suggests a back-fastening. This is a tailored trotteur costume, not a coat and skirt model.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Philadelphia—Miss Olive May Wilson, known as the "Santa Claus Girl," who at 18 is at the head of the most extensive Christmas giving philanthropy in the country, has announced her engagement to Birchell Hammer, a wealthy lumberman. Miss Wilson for the past two years has been the Santa Claus to thousands of poor children, and once went to Washington to plead with President Wilson for Franking privilege on her enormous Christmas shipping of gifts to poverty-stricken rural districts all over the country. The President and several members of the Cabinet heartily endorsed her remarkable work, but were unable to grant the unprecedented privilege.

Williamstown, Mass.—Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, President Wilson's daughter, who has been staying at the White House since shortly before the birth of her son, Francis, there, is expected home this week.

Detroit, Mich.—Out of a total prison population of about 2,500 in the penal institutions at Jackson, Ionia, Marquette and Detroit, there are only 54 women, all of whom are undergoing imprisonment in the Detroit institution, which is the only one receiving female prisoners. This startling disparity in figures, however, is not due wholly to moral feminine superiority, but in part to the fact that Michigan has no special reformatory for the sex, and many women are turned away from the courts because the State has no particular institution equipped for them.

New York—The eighth annual tournament for the indoor lawn tennis championship of the United States in women's singles and doubles will be started on the courts here on March 15.

Miss Mary Clementine Smedley gave a reception last week to 1,000 guests, persons who had contributed funds enabling her to fight for and secure a $500,000 fortune, left her in the will of Hiram H. Lamport, Bloomington, Ill.—Miss Ann Branes, of this city, recently gave an interesting address on "Have you a smile in your voice?" before the convention of telephone operators of Illinois. Miss Branes declared that the first requirement in a capable operator was a "smile in her voice" to pacify grouchy customers.

Berlin—Raoul Davidot, a French prisoner of war, who pledged his word of honor to the Kaiser early in February to be back on March 1, is here today, a prisoner, after a parole granted from the Kaiser to visit his dying mother in France. Davidot sailed directly to the German Embassy for permission to visit his mother and after her death returned to a detention camp as he had pledged.

Louisville, Ky.—Miss Pauline Kaspoon, of this city, the only one among the 30 social workers from all parts of the country applying for the position, was the successful candidate in the recent examination held by the Recreation Commission of Cleveland, O., for commissioner of recreation of that city at a salary of $3,000 a year.

Orleans, La.—Mrs. Nella Madd, who until last year was "rising cows" on her husband's ranch in Montana, is now operating a "gay-bus" for ladies only in the shopping district. She is clearing a day at it. There are about 1000 girls employed in New Orleans and these are her special patrons.

Paris, March 3.—According to M. Broshi, a teacher of languages, his wife deserted him fifteen minutes after the wedding ceremony. He told his story in Municipal Court last week, but Judge Sabath was puzzled when his wife testified that her hubby was all to blame and she had obtained a warrant for his arrest because he deserted her. And so Judge Sabath scratched his ear and held the case over until today. Broshi said he fitted up a flat but his wife would not live with him. The Court of Domestic Relations is trying to bring about a reconciliation.

$10,000 FIRE IN HEART OF TOWN

Bound Brook's Business Cenret Threatened By Early Morning Flames.

THREE STORES RUINED

Stock Destroyed—National Bank Also Suffers Damage In Adjoining Building—Good Work of Firemen Saved Other Structures from Blaze

Fire, discovered in the heart of Bound Brook's business section, did damage amounting to $10,0000 at an early hour this morning to a building owned by William Johnston, of Plainfield, and the Bound Brook National Bank. The blaze was discovered at 1:30 o'clock and during the hour it raged it completely destroyed a one story frame building in which were located the haberdashery store of R. M. Shied; a millinery store owned by two women, and a flower store owned by Henry Winoski, who formerly conducted a branch in this city. The damage to the bank was caused largely by water.

It is the opinion of the fire authorities of Bound Brook that the flames had their origin in the flower store and by the time they were discovered they had assumed great headway. The three stores resembled a raging furnace when the Bound Brook fire fighters arrived on the scene and the place was literally gutted. The complete stock in the three stores was ruined and the frame construction of the building caused it to burn readily.

A stiff wind fanned the blaze and this added to the seriousness of the conflagration. It was with difficulty that the firemen saved another frame structure directly across the street, at Maiden lane and Main street, and a stream of water had to be played on the brick building in which the bank is located, steadily.

The intense heat caused the skylight in the roof of the bank to break and tons of water were poured into this institution, the damage amounting to $1,000.

The situation of the fire caused a sensation in Bound Brook during the early morning hours, rumors being afloat to the effect that the entire town was burning. Good work on the part of the firemen, however checked the flames and kept them from spreading to adjoining premises. The frame construction of the buildings in that vicinity would make the spreading of the flames an easy matter.

The complete set of library books which was to be given away in a library contest was completely destroyed. The books were in the care of Scheid & Scheid. It is understood the books will be replaced as they were covered by insurance.

THE LARGER USE OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS

C. L. Riley Addresses Parent-Teacher Association of Bryant-Lincoln Schools.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Bryant-Lincoln School was pleasantly entertained yesterday afternoon, in the Lincoln School, by Miss Gladys Chase, who sang two charming songs, accompanied by Miss Sargent. Mrs. S. H. Voorhees read an excellent report on the State Congress of Mothers' meeting held in Atlantic City, which gave all the good ideas to be carried through the work for the year, and added a pleasing touch by including a charming little poem on "Growing."

C. L. Riley, a member of the Public Recreation Committee, spoke on "The Larger Use of School Buildings." He said: "If any audience should be interested in the newer use of the schools it is an audience of mothers, because they know the difficulties of teaching their sons and daughters to use their spare time profitably, and that it is not when they are working either in school or shop or office that most of the temptations come to them.

"We all know, when we come to think about it, that the weak spot in the excellent education we are providing for our children is that we do not train them how to use their spare time. This is the problem the Public Recreation Committee has tackled. The first thing is to interest the young people by letting them do the things they do elsewhere, so the Washington School was opened for dancing on Saturday evenings. Out of the ten cents admission fees a good orchestra was hired, and the activity paid its way from the start. A dramatic club was soon organized, and gave an excellent play under the coaching of one of the members of the committee. Negro clubs for social purposes were formed, a needlework class for school girls, a civic class among some Italian young people, and many other groups were given an opportunity.

"During the past six months several larger groups were organized; a choral society and orchestra, which together gave Handel's oratorio of "The Messiah," and a pagent performed by school children drilled by one of the committee's supervisors. The cost of giving one person a wholesome good time is absurdly small, but it is the great value of the work that counts and not the low cost. A visit to any of the committee's activities will convince you of this, and you are cordially invited at all times."

BANK WITH $3,000,000 DEPOSITS FAILED TODAY

Pittsburgh, March 4.—The German National Bank, of this city, did not open its doors today. The bank was established in 1860 and had a paid-up capital of $500,000 and deposits of more than $3,000,000. According to its report to the Controller of the Currency the condition of the bank on December 31 last showed resources of $7,772,537, and the following liabilities: Capital, $500,000; surplus, $5,00,000; undivided profits, $94,364; notes, outstanding, $778,250; due other national banks, $674,639; due State and private banks, $325,802 due trust companies and savings banks, $601,147; due approved residuary agents, $1,565; dividends, unpaid, $15,150; individual departments, subject to check, $3,140,217.

The bank was a depository for city funds. It is understood that the closing was due to bad paper.

COULD NOT IDENTIFY LOOT FROM DUNELLEN

Authorities From That Place Fail to Connect Boys With Robbery.

Members of the Dunellen police force yesterday, examined the loot located by Patrolman John Fritts in the home of Stephen Austin, in Cottage place, Tuesday afternoon, with a view to ascertaining whether or not the three juvenile thieves, Frank McCarthy and Dominick and Stephen Austin, had anything to do with the robbery of the T. P. Stryker home in that place. Nothing taken from the Dunellen residence could be located in the varied array of "prizes" taken from the local house.

It is a well-known fact that the three youngsters, who are being held for the Grand Jury under a number of complaints filed by local victims, worked in the vicinity of Dunellen and an effort will be made to establish any connection they might have with depredations committed there recently.

Justice of the Peace Rene P. F von Minden, of Dunellen, had dispatched officers to Plainfield, yesterday morning, to bring the prisoners to that place to face trial on a charge of committing a robbery in Middlesex county, but upon their arrival it was learned that the boys had confessed to graver offenses in this city and the Union county complaints were given preference.

MOUNTED TROOP TO BE ORGANIZED HERE

Well-known Society Men Take Steps to Form State Militia Body.

Stirred by a patriotic desire to render real service to their country, if necessary, a number of prominent society men in this city have taken steps to organize a mounted troop, similar to the Essex Troop and the one at Red Bank. It is understood that already thirty-five young men have signified their willingness to join such an organization.

Just now those who have taken the initiative in the movement are in communication with the State military authorities for the purpose of learning the exact method of procedure, what will be required and how to form such a troop. It is the belief that there are a sufficient number of men in Plainfield to get together a strong company, one that will be a credit to the city, as well as the militia.

Daniel Runkle, of Hillside avenue, and J. Whitney Baker, of Stelle avenue, are among those who are at the hand of the movement and just as soon as all details are complete it is proposed to hold a meeting to formally organize and chose officers under the direction of the State military authorities. The fact that it is proposed to have a mounted troop no special indoor place for training would be required, as this could be done out-of-doors during the summer months.

The Essex Troop, which is one of the best known in this part of the State, has been very successful and today it is considered one of the strongest in the East. This, it is believed, would be possible with the local troop.

CHILDREN'S HOME MAKES AN APPEAL

Seldom Before Has Such Steps Been Necessary By Local Institution.

At the March meeting of the Children's Home Association, the managers were presented with statistics showing a comparison between the income and expenses of the Home, during a corresponding period of months of last year and this.

The balance is materially less than for many years, and gives cause for grave uneasiness.

The very large family of 38 children and the additional cost of operation have made heavy inroads upin the finances, and it is earnestly hoped that those who may read this plea for assistance, will feel that they can help this worthy cause, where so many children are cared for amid healthful and happy surroundings. Seldom in the history of the Home has the management made a public appeal for financial assistance, but the exigencies of the case seem to demand strenuous means.

Any contributions, however small or large, will be gratefully received and asknowledged by the treasurer, Miss Ella Serrell, 931 Union street, or by any of the managers.

PLANS TO REORGANIZE SONS OF VETERANS' CAMP

Steps have been taken looking toward the re-organization of John Hand Camp, Sons of Veterans, which disbanded several years ago. G. K. Pimley, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., who has been appointed organizer for New Jersey, was in Plainfield yesterday looking up data and other details for the purpose of arranging for an organization meeting in the near future.

John Hand Camp, during its existence, was quite active and had a large membership. Several of the officers and members removed from the city and interest waned with the result that the camp was allowed to die a natural death. It is estimated that a camp of at least one hundred members is now a possibility and Mr. Pimley has already secured a number of names to the charter list.

If an organization is effected no doubt it will be along a little different lines than in the past and those who are interested in the movement are hopeful of establishing a strong camp in Plainfield. The Sons of Veterans will have the support of the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., in their efforts to re-organize and the veterans will doubtless aid in every way possible to keep alive the spirit of patriotism in the young men who must succeed them eventually.

SISTERHOOD WHIST IS HIGHLY ENJOYED BY 200

The whist and dance, given under the auspices of the Sisterhood of Temple Sholem, in the Columbus Club Auditorium, last night, was highly enjoyed by two hundred young people from Plainfield, New York, Metuchen, Newark, Somerville and Brooklyn.

The play was continued until 11 o'clock, after which dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, music being furnished by members of the Sisterhood. There were twenty-seven tables and two prizes were awarded at each table. The members donated all the prizes. At a late hour refreshments were served by the committee.

The funeral will be held in Washington, Saturday at 2 p. m.

ALLEGED SWINDLER TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

George Primrose Arrested In Elizabeth For Plainfield Police.

George Primrose, colored, suspected of having swindled Plainfielders, was apprehended yesterday by Captain Murphy, of the Elizabeth police department, and will be brought to this city, this afternoon, for examination. Among those expected to swear out complaints against the negro are John Hogan, stage manager of Proctor's Theatre, and a Mrs. Van Winkle, of North Plainfield. He was taken into custody at a livery stable owned by George B. Prindle and located at 50 Jefferson avenue.

The prisoner is alleged to have secured $5 from Hogan under false pretenses. According to the information given out by Hogan the negro represented himself as the member of a troup that was to have appeared at Proctor's about two weeks ago, and asked Hogan for a loan of $5. He accommodated him as he has several other bona-fide actors on previous occasions but the negro made himself scarce and has not been heard from since.

In accordance with their usual custom the managers of the local playhouse notified managers in surrounding towns and his application at the Elizabeth theatre under a similar alibi to the one worked here, led to his downfall, it is said.

BOYS NOT DISTURBED BY BEING LOCKED UP

Self-confessed Robbers Cheerful While Awaiting Court's Action.

Apparently not the least disturbed by the fact that they are being held for the Grand Jury under $500 bail each, as a result of half a dozen or more robberies, three boys in their 'teens are making the best of things in a cell at police headquarters. They are Frank McCarthy and Stephen and Elmer Austin. In addition to the charges recorded against them, Leo Zeisel and Philip Mechanick appeared before Judge DeMeza, this morning, and respectively charged them with taking $37.25 and $43.60 worth of bicycle acessories from their stores.

The boys frankly admitted that they had entered both places when arraigned before the judge this morning, although McCarthy was sure that they did not get five revolvers which were included in the list of stuff stolen from Zeisel's Front street store.

No one has been found to go their bail and the youths are whiling away the time in a cell at headquarters by singing and playing on a harmonica. They do not seem to care what happens to them, and are as cheerful as the others about the police station who are not behind bars.

POLICE BOARD RAKES PATROLMEN OVER COALS

Nearly two hours was occupied by the Police Board, last night, hearing explanations by various coppers as to why they failed to turn in calls during the preceding month. It was one of the longest sessions of the kind that has been held for some time, and certain men were given lectures that they will not forget for some time.

It had been expected to take up a number of matters regarding the conduct of the department, but because of the late hour at which the meeting concluded there was only an informal discussion, and the Board will hold another meeting next week. Mayor Calkins and the councilmanic members of the Board, as well as Chief Kiely and Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., were present.

VISIT THE MARCONI WIRELESS STATION

Henry Brynairski and William Briggs Permitted to Inspect Wonderful Plant.

Acting as camera man for the Mutual Weekly Film Company, of which he is the local representative, Henry J. Bryniarski, of this city, was yesterday accorded the rare privilege of viewing the inner workings of the wonderful Marconi Transatlantic wireless plant at New Brunswick. The permit also included William Briggs, of Albert street, who acted as assistant in securing pictures that will be shown on the screens all over the world. H. E. Campbell, who is chief engineer and operator at the plant, extended every couresy to the Plainfielders, and what they don't know about wireless operations now isn't worth knowing.

The New Brunswick plant is one of the finest in the world, having been completed only a short time ago. It is located on the promontory just outside the city and comprises thirteen immense steel masts, each one of which weighs sixty tons. Their total height is 42 feet. Each mast rests upon a foundation weighing 125 tons. The thirteen masts are connected by a mesh of wires, having a total of thirty-two miles in length, and electrified to what is know as "a 3,000-kilowat power."

The New Brunswick plant was primarily intended to have direct communication with anoher Marconi plant, near Cardiff, Wales, but operations have been suspended owing to the fact that the English Government has taken over the Welsh station for war purposes. While the Plainfielders were on their tour of inspection yesterday, Mr. Campbell opened the receiver, and several messages were recorded. One was being dispatched from Nauen, Germany, to Sayville, Long Island, and another was an English communication being forwarded from the plant in Wales to a tower in London. Both were in cypher, and the text was not understood by the operator. Hundreds of people from this city have noticed the Marconi towers as they passed along the river road, near New Brunswick, but very few have been permitted to enter the grounds and see the apparatus at work, accordingly the visitors of yesterday feel especially honored and grateful for the freedom accorded them.

Mr. Bryniarski, who is chief operator at Proctor's Theatre, has become an expert at photographing moving objects, and several of his pictures are being shown throughout the country. In his tour of the Marconi plant he secured three particularly good views of the outside of the station, one looking up to the top of the masts, one of the foundations, showing the size of the insulators, and the other showing where the wires merge as they enter the station. All will be seen as a Mutual Weekly offering within the next few days.

PINE MOUNTAIN ASSOCIATION TO GIVE A THE DANSANT

One of the first after-Lenten affairs which will be given by local society will be The Dansant under the auspices of the Pine Mountain Association, on Saturday afternoon, April 10, from 3:30 to 7, at the Park Club. Elaborate preparations are being made for the affair and the afternoon promises to be a gay one. VanEps Brothers will furnish music for dancing and charming women will serve tea.

Tickets will be on sale within a few days for the event and can be secured at Randolph's, Armstrong's, Hall's and Hodge's drug stores, or from the following members of the committee: Miss Eva C. Browne, chairman; Miss Ethel Colton, Mrs. Allan Cowperthwaite, Miss Helen Harman, Miss Helen Hyde, Miss Helen Joy, Miss Lillian King, Miss Margaret Mead, Miss Elizabeth McGee, Mrs. H. C. McMillen and Mrs. Daniel Runkle.

ENTERTAINED HIS CLASSMATES

Leo Owens, son of Councilor and Mrs. John P. Owens, of East Second street, reached his sixth birthday today, and in observance of the event, his fifty classmates in the kindergarteen of the Lincoln School were given a treat in their classroom this morning. Under the supervision of the teachers the children enjoyed an informal program of phonograph music and folk dances, the latter being a part of their curriculum. At the conclusion bountiful refreshments were served. Master Owens received heary congratulations from his classmates, who thoroughly enjoyed the treat. The affair was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Owens.

Mrs. J. B. Groendyke, of Chicago, Ill., is visiting her sister-in-law, Mrs. F. O. Dunning, of Mountain avenue, the borough.

RUSSIANS PUSH INVADERS BACK

Entire German Line With Small Exception at Ossewetz Has Been Forced.

BOMBARD DARDANELLES

Ten British Warships Shelling Forts—Dead Germans and Turks Found In Heaps In Ruins—Mine Sweepers Clear Water For Battleships.

Petrograd, March 4—The entire German line paralleling the East Prussian frontier in northern Poland and in the region of Suwalki and the River Niemen, has been pushed back steadily with the exception of the vicinity of Ossowetz, where the German guns are still bombarding the Russian positions, but are in danger from the withdrawal of their supporting infantry. On the right bank of the Vistula attempts by the Germans to check the Russian advance by cavalry have been repulsed and one small force from Zorpetz was cut off and annihiliated.

Austrian division number 26 has been routed in the region of Stanislaus, it was officially announced today.

Athens, March 4—Ten British warships are bombarding the inside forts of the Dardanelles, while another ship is shelling them from the Gulf of Saros, according to a despatch received here today. The despatch stated that British landing parties found in the ruins of destroyed forts heaps of bodies of Turks and Germans.

London, March 4—A despatch from Athens says:

"The allied fleet today bombarded and reduced to silence the forts of Dardanus, Hamidieh and Tenemerlik, on the Asiatic side of the inside Dardanelles."

The Admiralty reports that the operations in the Dardanelles were resumed at 11 o'clock Monday morning, when the Triumph, Ocean and Albion entered the straits and attacked fort No. 8 and the batteries at White Cliff.

Monday night mine sweepers covered by destroyers swept within a mile and a half of Cape Kepnez, and their work, which was carried out under fire, is reported to have been excellent. Six men were wounded.

Tuesday the Canopus, Swiftsure, Cornwallis engaged Fort 8. A heavy fire was opened on them by Fort 9, together with field batteries and howitzers. Fort 9 was damaged and ceased firing at 5:30 in the afternoon and, although three shops were hit, the only casualty was one man badly wounded.

When the bombardment was resumed Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock fifty-two ships entered the straits. Four battleships bombarded the Turkish positions on the Gulf of Saros. At noon the shelling was redoubled in violence for two hours.

Berlin, March 4 (by wireless)—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"Western war theatre—On Lorette Hills, northwest of Arras, early yesterday morning, we took possession of the enemy's position over a width of 1,600 yards. We captured eight officers and 358 Frenchmen, and also took seven machine guns and six small cannon. All the enemy's counter attacks during the afternoon were repulsed as were those in the Champagne district.

"The French advance of St. Hubert in the Argonne failed. In a counter attack we took one of the French trenches. A French attack in the forest of Cheppy was repulsed.

"Eastern theatre of war—Russian attacks northwest of Grodno which came within range of our flanking artillery failed. Northeast of Lomza, Russian attacks were broken down with heavy losses to the enemy. In the district of Myszyniec and Chorlez and northwest of Przasnyz, the Russians have renewed their attacks. On the remainder of the front there has been no change."

Paris, March 4—The French war office issued the following statement at 3 o'clock today:

"In Belgium on the sand dunes, our artillery has demolished the enemy's trenches. North of Arras, near Lorette, the enemy has taken a trench recently constructed by us close to the German line.

"The bombardment of Rheims has been continued, shells dropping every three minutes continuously all day. It has been confirmed that the German counter attacks against that part of the ground taken by us to the north of Mesnil has been of great violence. Two regiments of Prus-

WILL CUT COST OF GRADUATION GOWNS

Dunellen Board of Education Decides to Co-operate With Parent-Teacher Ass'n.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Education held in the Lincoln School, last night, convened with President A. F. Todd presiding and the following members present: Hamley, Dayton, Carpenter, Neilor, Day, Wynkoop and Walters. A committee from the Parent-Teacher Association consisting of Mrs. George W. VanderVeer, Mrs. Edward Ayers, and Mrs. W. A. Houghtling appeared and asked the Board to take action towards restricting the cost of graduation dresses which they claimed has been carried to excess. The Board passed a resolution to co-operate with and endorse whatever action the Parent-Teacher Association might see fit to take. The association is considering awarding a prize to the girl making her own dress at the least cost.

The annual school meeting was arranged for Tuesday evening, March 16, at 8 o'clock, and is to be held in the Whittier School. The terms of Messrs. Cameron, Neilor and Walters having expired, an election will be in order at this meeting. It is said that the three have all consented to run again. The following budget will be presented to the citizens for their consideration: For current expenses, $11,500; manual training, $500; repairs, $500; total, $12,500. The amount of this budget is $100 less than last year.

A communication was received from County Superintendent H. Brewster Willis calling attention to the County School Board Association meeting and banquet to be held on March 20, at New Brunswick.

The $4,000 of the insurance on the Whittier School was ordered replaced with Miss Ella H. Boice. The superintendent's report showed that the percentage of attendance at the Lincoln School had fallen down 71 per cent. during the past month owing to the epidemic of measles in the school. The Whittier School was not so much affected, its percentage of attendance standing at 89% as against 92 per cent. for the previous month. A total of 1,276½ days was lost by the pupils of both schools as a result of the epidemic. Five teachers were absent one time and another during the month because of illness. Miss Brokaw and Miss Ward are out at the present time.

As a result of the mid-year tests the superintendent reported that about 84 per cent. of the pupils in the grammar grades appeared to be progressing satisfactorily. This percentage will be raised by giving individual attention to the backward.

The art exhibition provided a fund of $28.50 for the purchase of new pictures for the Lincoln School and the peanut sale a fund of $18.50 for the purchase of Victrola records.

The night school sessions in the Lincoln School will be discontinued on March 11.

The superintendent in concluding his report said that he would attend a meeting of the supervising principals at New Brunswick, Saturday.

There are 54 borough pupils attending Plainfield High School and the bill of tuition for the quarter at $14 for a scholar a quarter amounts to $756.

SALE OF BANK STOCK AROUSES MUCH INTEREST

Considerable interest was manifested prior to the sale in the Borough Hall, yesterday afternoon, in which ten shares of the capital stock of the First National Bank, of Dunellen, were sold by The Plainfield Trust Company, which had discounted two notes of the New Market Roller Mills aggregating $4,000, bearing the endorsement of H. L. Pierce, as to what the stock would bring. These were the first shares of the bank that had been placed on the market for a long time and spirited bidding was anticipated. When the sale started at 2 o'clock it was noted that the audience was composed largely of directors of the local bank. Of the bank's directorate Alvah Gray, Paul Reusch, John P. Fenner, Joseph Kuldoshes and A. J. Hamley were present.

In response to Judge von Minden's "what am I offered for this stock?" J. Henry Crane, of Plainfield, after a minute's silence, bid $100 a share for ten shares. Gustav Winter, proprietor of the Park Hotel, then bid $110; Joseph Kuldoshes, $125; Paul Reusch, $130; Joseph Kuldoshes, $150; Gustav Winter, $155; Joseph Kuldoshes, $165; John P. Fenner, $166; Joseph Kuldoshes, $175.

By this time it had become evident that John P. Fenner and Joseph Kuldoshes were the only persons present who were willing to go any higher for the stock. After Mr. Kuldoshes had bid $175, Mr. Fenner bid $176, Mr. Kuldoshes $178, and Mr. Fenner $179, at which bid the stock was finally knocked down. The book value of the shares is said to be in the neighborhood of $200 a share.

CHARLES WRAGE'S AUTO CRASHES INTO A TREE

The touring car of Contractor Charles Wrage ran into a tree opposite St. John's church, Tuesday afternoon, smashing its radiator. In the machine at the time were Contractor Wrage, who was driving, and Frank McSorley. They had been down to the house which Contractor Wrage is erecting on Second street and were proceeding back to town at a rate of about 10 miles an hour.

The accident happened as a result of Mr. Wrage losing control of the car when he turned his head to speak to Mr. McSorley, who was sitting on the rear seat. The damage was confined to the radiator, the only thing that saved the car from being further damaged or either occupant from being injured was the slow rate at which the car was proceeding. As it was neither Mr. Wrage or Mr. McSorley received a scratch.

Constable C. Wesley Blaine attended the funeral of Theodore Hodge, aged 78, at Bound Brook, yesterday afternoon. The deceased and Mr. Blaine were old friends, having known each other for over 10 years.

The lad was doing the receiving back of the bat at the time and was set to receive the ball which had been delivered by Archie Munn.

The optic quickly closed and the lad partially stunned was assisted to his feet by his playmates, who had rushed to his side, and taken to the residence of Edward Conklin nearby, where Miss Laura Conklin applied soothing lotions. Watchung.

A quick response was made by the Watchung Chemical Company auto apparatus yesterday, when a call was sent in from the Greenbrook district, saying there was a wood fire burning near Washington Rock, and which was steadily gaining momentum under the heavy wind which was blowing. A call was also sent to the North Plainfield department, which responded, and helped fight the fire for a while. After several hours of hard fighting the firemen returned only to learn shortly after that another fire had started in the woods back of Champlain Riley's home, on the Washington Rock road. The fire was quickly gotten under control with the use of chemicals.

WARDROBE COMPLETED BY Y. W. C. A. GIRLS

Elaborate Exhibition Will Be Sent to the Panama Exposition.

The wardrobe which the local Y. W. C. A. girls have about completed will be on exhibition at the association next week, and anyone wishing to see the work is cordially invited. The date will be announced later. The wardrobe is one such as a business girl needs and the local workers have put their best thoughts with regard to appropriateness, attractiveness and economy into the work. The wardrobe was planned with reference to the income, work and daily life, environment, social life and recreation of the girl for whom it is planned, and covers all the garments which are necessary for one season (summer and winter). The basis for judging entries will be attractiveness and suitability, economy, workmanship, and an itemized statement showing the additional cloths needed with complete list of cost of each, total cost and the elements that have entered into the planning. The local association will send the wardrobe to the New York held committee where the best articles made by the different associations will be sent to Panama. The local girls have tried their hand in the writing contests and many manuscripts will be sent to the national board for entry, also a set of photographs.

The dressmaking department was divided into four groups with the following members, Tuesday evening class, leader, Mrs. William O'Donnell; secretary, Miss Emily Coriell, planned color and scheme, Miss Myrtle Fedderman; workers, the Misses Ethel Colton, Edith Beers, Gertrude Butler, Ethel Blazier, Clara Karner, Ella Coddington, Mrs. Ida Hawkins and Mrs. F. M. Masker. Wednesday evening, leader, Miss Ella Coddington; workers, the Misses Mary Heidt and Bertha Sedleacek. Thursday afternoon, leader, Miss Edith Wickett; workers, Miss Emma H. Dickson and Mrs. William O'Donnell. Thursday evening, leader, Mrs. Ida Hawkins; workers, the Misses Edith Wickett, Bertha Sedleacek and Mary Heidt. Miss Helen Hummel is the local business girl who has helped by posing as a model.

At the request of the Exposition officials, the national board has erected a women's building on the grounds. It is built on a site effectively located between the main entrance gate and the Court of the Sun Moon and Stars. It is the largest that the board has had at any exhibit and contains all facilities for a splendid exhibit. It will contain an auditorium, where the stereopticon exhibit will show association work and where lectures and other features of the great plan can be carried out; a writing room, where tired sightseers may drop in and send that postcard home; rest rooms, to be remembered and recommended to their friends on the grounds; a quick lunch service in a comfortable, restful place and other features which may suggest themselves as being practical and of service to women. The purpose of the exhibit is to place before the public convincing proof of the value of the association.

WILSON SIGNS MEASURE WHICH AIDS NEUTRALITY

Washington, March 4.—By his own signature of the neutrality resolution passed by Congress early this morning, President Wilson today enlarged his power to prevent violation of American neutrality by vessels leaving United States ports with men or supplies for belligerent warships.

The resolution, a substitute for one previously passed by the House, was unanimously adopted by the Senate at 2 o'clock this morning, following a conference at the White House between President Wilson and the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate and House. It was later agreed to by the House, and only awaited President Wilson's signature to make it a law.

As finally passed, the resolution differs in some essential particulars from the original House measure. It has the hearty support of State department officials, who pointed out the immediate need of its passage because of the "critical situation" resulting from the European war.

Attention was called by these officials to the fact that the American Government had been hindered by inadequate legislation to prevent vessels from leaving the United States with supplies for belligerent warships in contravention of American neutrality. The legislation is a direct result of information obtained by the Government in the recent grand jury inquiry in New York into alleged shipments of supplies to belligerents at sea.

WAR NEWS

sian guards participated in a great onslaught. This repulse has been completed.

"In the Argonne there has been cannonading with new progress on our part. In the region of Vauquois there has been an aero engagement in which one of our aviators, Captain Happe, bombarded the German powder works at Rottweil, fourteen miles north of Denauescinger. Our success has been complete. Ten minutes after our aviators dropped the bombs the powder works caught fire and the flames rose to a height of 400 yards. Our aviators made a raid of about 186 miles back and forth. During the same time a German aviator was dropping bombs on a hospital of Gerardmer, but there was no one killed and no damage done."

Last evening 'phone calls were received for grass fires in the rear of Potter Press Works and on Central street near South avenue. Another one occurred at noon today near the Darrow avenue school.

RECREATION NOTES

The class in public speaking meets this evening at Stillman School. Alfred Ayres says: "The maner in which one speaks his mother-tongue is looked upon as showing more clearly than any other one thing what his culture is and what his associations have been." The aim of this course in public speaking is to secure clear and distinct style in delivery, naturalness in dramatic expression, power and magnetism.

Exercises for the development of vocal purity, as well as vocal energy, will be presented, and practical suggestions made on emphasis, inflection and cadence. The auditorium of Stillman School is to be used, and it is hoped that a large number will take advantage of the opportunity.

The Dramatic Club will meet under the direction of H. C. White tomorrow evening. Application for membership in this club may be made through Mr. White or at Washington School any Friday evening.

The Dunbar Club holds its regular weekly social tomorrow night at Washington School.

The Italian Club at Lincoln School is to have a special business meeting tomorrow evening to discuss plans for a public entertainment on March 19.

Plainfield, N. J., March 4, 1915.

PROGRESS OF MANAGER PLAN.

Mayor Calkins told the members of the Business Men's Association and their guests on Monday night that he thought that Plainfield would gain but little, if anything by adopting Commission government, but that we will soon want a City Manager. That the idea is more and more attracting the attention of the people of the country is shown by the fact that it has already been adopted by a score or more cities, and is being considered in others widely removed. The Municipal Journal says that Statesville, N. C.; Benton Harbor, Mich., and Elizabeth City, N. C., are contemplating the change.

In Springfield, Mass., a committee of one hundred, drafting a new charter, has reported in favor of the city manager plan, while in Tucson, Arizona, the Republican ticket at the last election pledged itself, before being successfully elected, to follow so far as possible the general plan which goes with that office. After election C. K. Clark, a non-resident of the city and State, was appointed, and although the Mayor and Council retain the legal right to make appointments, they have pledged themselves not to exercise it except upon the recommendations of the city manager.

Ypsilanti, Mich., voted on Tuesday in favor of a new charter which makes provision for a board or council of three members, elected at large, and a city manager having the usual powers, and Miami, Fla., is considering a similar plan.

Santa Barbara, Cal., and Newburgh, N. Y., are also discussing it, while in Jackson, Michigan, so badly was a manager needed, that after offering the place to the holders of the office at Dayton and Springfield, Ohio, the people finally secured the services of Claude E. Chappell, who had been the manager of Big Rapids.

All of this information may perhaps not directly affect the situation in Plainfield, but it shows that Mayor Calkins' ideas for a better governed Plainfield are in line with the more progressive thought of the day, and that he sees something ahead which may not occur during his term of office, but will surely come in Plainfield. The survey soon to be started will undoubtedly be an eye-opener for our residents, and it would not surprise us to see it result in an immediate demand for modernizing city methods by the adoption of commission government.

Just to add to the gayety of the present situation in the Legislature, Speaker Godfrey, of the House of Assembly, and Governor Fielder have begun to say things about each other. Godfrey says that Fielder is merely "an attorney of very little legal or business experience," and the Governor returns the compliment by declaring that Godfrey "has an extensive and lucrative practice, with the Lehigh Valley Railroad as one of his clients." The sting in the latter statement comes from the fact that Godfrey is pushing a bill for the abandonment of the Morris canal which has the backing of the railroad in question. In the latest move, Godfrey, who apparently is thin-skinned, has demanded an apology from the Governor under threat that otherwise "further action will be taken." We suppose that Mr. Godfrey means that he will try to impeach the Governor, for there is nothing else he can do. It certainly looks like a tempest in a tea-pot

After two efforts, which resulted in failure, New Brunswick has at last adopted the commission form of government, and the commissioners will be elected early next month. Instead of being "three strikes and out," New Brunswick has made a home run on the third ball pitched. As the list grows throughout the State, the time when Plainfield will join the crowd comes nearer and nearer.

Senator Hennessy, of Bergen county, has declared that he favors the Home Rule amendment to the Constitution, which has been introduced in the Legislature at Trenton, and will take up the fight for it. If he doesn't put up a better fight than he did an argument in the Suffrage debate held in the Plainfield High School Auditorium, last week, he will not help the bill much.

Each Friday, beginning tomorrow, a new column will appear in the Daily Press under the head of Library Notes. It will be prepared by former Councilman Frank L. Holt, an active member of the Library Board, and will keep Plainfielders posted on what is going on at this splendid public institution.

Saturday's contributed editorial will discuss a topic about which much has been said in Plainfield recently.

Educator Pictures, Advantages and Delights That Four Women Will Enjoy As Press' Guests On Trans-Continental Trip to Pacific Coast.

One of the most prominent educators of Plainfield, who is much interested in the Press' plan of sending a party of four women on a tour of the continent, expressed himself interestingly on the subject yesterday.

"A trip to the World's Fair for four women! How delightful and enterprising! The newspaper management that plans such an educational treat for deserving women is indeed doing much, not only for individual recipients of the free tours across the continent, but for all their friends and acquaintances, who will profit by these women coming in contact with glorious scenes and peoples of other parts of the United States.

"The Press is indeed to be complimented upon its plan to give opportunity to women living in this part of our big country to see so much of it, and thereby better appreciate its grandeur and glory. Women of this part of New Jersey I have always found to be most appreciative of opportunities. Perhaps this is because our splendid educational advantages have made them quick to see an opportunity when it presents itself.

Eager to Learn.

"The American woman in general—ah, how eager she is to learn! In this new country, where we have not had the centuries of culture and learning back of us, it is surprising to me to see how greedily the women want to learn.

"The delight of watching those four women guests of the Press who will, perhaps, for the first time in their lives visit other parts of this great continent, would be a treat I myself would like to enjoy.

"Think of seeing the Grand Canyon of Arizona and its great variety of Nature's wonders, the rugged Rocky Mountains, the delightful sunny beaches of California, and the splendid Expositions at San Francisco and San Diego.

"I know every American girl, from the time she is able to think, looks forward to a tour of the United States. It has aroused her interest, and she is eager to see with her own eyes. How much greater is the realization than the anticipation in the case of travel!

Prepare for Excursion.

"If I were an American girl planning such a trip I would read, read, read books—the best books descriptive of the splendors of the American continent. Many people laugh at systematized sightseeing, but it is the best way one can see such large extent of country, when a limited time is set. I marvel at the way Americans, always on the alert, can really see as much as they do.

"I am glad for the women that the Plainfield Press will send on this fine tour, and I am glad for the Press which will endear itself not only to the people who receive the prizes of those trips, but for every lover of the beautiful, who will appreciate the newspaper's enterprise in affording those four women a chance to see so much of the continent."

About Application and Nomination Blanks.

In regard to application and nomination blanks. It is necessary to have only one of each sent in. Many candidates appear to think that the more they have sent in the more it helps their case. One is just as good as a thousand.

The list of names of candidates and their vote standing will be published Saturday, March 6. Votes received up to 6 p. m. today will be published Saturday. All votes that come in after this time will appear in the following count to be announced later. The ballot box has been placed in the Press office, and is ready to receive votes. The single vote coupon will be found on page two every day.

Lest You Forget.

Candidates may secure subscriptions in any section or territory, and are not confined to their own district. If, for instance, you have a friend in South Africa or Van Dieman's Land, votes will be allowed upon this subscription should you secure it. But candidates must reside in the district from which they enter.

There are no conditions that do not apply to all alike. It is a fair field, where the ambitious candidates have an equal chance of winning.

Candidates are requested not to mark anything in the space reserved for the number of the subscription and the number of the ballot. This space is to be filled in when the subscriptions are brought or sent into the contest office.

About the Vote Schedule.

The schedule of votes issued upon paid-in-advance subscriptions will at no time during the contest be altered or deviated from. The value of votes at the commencement of the contest and the end will remain the same. There will be no periods where special amounts of votes will be issued. No bargain day; no increasing the first vote announcement.

Saturday will mark the first publication of the names of candidates and their vote standing. New names will be added to the list as applications may be received any time during the contest.

Everyone Wins.

The management of the Press has decided to be most liberal to the candidates who may enter this contest. In addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all those candidates who do not win trips, and remain active until the end of the contest, a commission of ten per cent. will be paid on new subscriptions, and a five per cent. commission will be paid on old subscriptions.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday until further notice.

WHAT A BOY NEEDS.
By Mary Pierson Allen.

I'm just as hungry as a bear.
If I should starve would someone care?
P'r'aps Mary would—she's good to me.
The kitchen's just the place to be
When a boy is hungry'

And now I'm thirsty as a fish:
But I'm so little—how I wish
Someone would tip the bucket up!
It takes so long to use a cup
When a boy is thirsty!

I'm tired of playing ball with Joe.
My eyes stay shut; my feet won't go.
I think I hear my mother call.
Her lap's the best place, after all,
When a boy is tired!

The North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association reports the following as accomplished last year:

"We have added to our unrivaled school spirit among the boys and girls a community spirit among the mothers. Children played and worked together day after day, whose mothers were entire strangers. Now that condition is overcome by our association meetings.

"We are bringing about a better understanding of school laws and the perplexing questions that the Board of Education and faculty are called upon to solve, with the result that sympathy and help is taking the place of criticism.

"Through our chaperone committee, working with the faculty, we are interesting the people of our borough in the boys' and girls' play, as well as work. Parents feel their children are upheld and properly chaperoned while attending basketball games and school dances, and it is very encouraging to the chaperone committee to know the boys and girls appreciate our help. In this work the association feels especially well repaid."

Community use of school buildings in Plainfield has attracted widespread attention, and Dr. Maxson has been requested by the State Department of Public Instruction to furnish a description of the work, which is printed in the February Education Bulletin. It makes a very creditable showing, and every parent in Plainfield should see that they are making the best use of the advantages at their disposal.

MOTHER'S ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the Plainfield Mother's Association will be held tomorrow at Mrs. Sandford's home. This association now stands for three specific activities—mid-day lunches in the schools, extension work throughout the surrounding counties and the column in the Daily Press. It has a large membership, with an annual due of one dollar. Meetings are called by the executive committee, and are held in the homes of members. A large attendance is looked for tomorrow.

"CRADLE SONG OF MANY NATIONS" TO BE GIVEN

Arrangements are being completed for the "Cradle Songs of Many Nations," in tableau, which will be given under the auspices of the Woman's Association, at the Congregational parish house, tomorrow afternoon and night. The sittings will represent sixteen mothers of the various countries crooning their babies to sleep with the national lullabys. Every one, every day, is forced to listen to war cries of nations, and this will afford an opportunity for all to hear the "Cradle Songs of Many Nations." The proceeds of the affair will be used for the church. The complete program is as follows: No. 1, Norwegian, Miss Lillian Engstrand; Scotch, Miss Ruth Elliott; Dutch, Mrs. Arthur C. VanArsdale; Japanese, Miss Margaret Rice; Italian, Mrs. R. D. Rice; Spanish, Miss Hazel Lockwood; Russian, Miss Helen Westman; Irish, Miss Kathleen Philips; Rock-a-bye: French, Miss Martine Weeks, Miss Emily Maclay; American group: (a) American mother, Mrs. Frank C. Clauson, (b) colored mammy, Miss Mary E. Decker; (c) Indian, Miss Ruth Fuller; German, Miss Thelma Curtis; English, Mrs. Edward C. Suffern; Belgian, Miss Evelyn Fisher, Belgian children, Helen Rice, Harriet Hubbard and Lillian Rice; the Madonna, Miss Abbie Hague; Gounod-Dach's Ave Marie acompaniment. Mrs. D. P. Barnes will preside at the piano and James Tanham will accompany on the violin. The finale will be the full ensemble around the Madonna.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Scattered Sport Gleanings

That Plainfield High School should insist on a coin flip to decide the court on which to play the third game with North Plainfield is indeed surprising. This action is entirely at discord with all previous Plainfield High School sentiment and sets a precedent which we hope will not be followed up. After winning two games from the boroughites and at the same time capturing the Interscholastic League championship Plainfield puts herself on record as being greedy enough to attempt to gulp down every little advantage for the third struggle. To the outsider it looks as though the red and blue players had developed a severe case of "cold feet" and no satisfying reason can be singled out for the procedure followed. The boroughites were sports enough to submit to the coin flip, when by right of every rule of etiquette they must have expected being given their choice. Plainfield has the title safely tucked away, the third game receipts will be evenly divided no matter where the game is played, and in view of these facts we see no reason for the local athletes' insistence on having a say where the contest should be played. We're open to reasoning, however, and if any Plainfield constitutent can enlighten us on the proposition we'd be only too glad to hear from him.

Right in line with championships we might take occasion to stir up a little cloud of dust in this feminine league affair between the local and borough girls. As far as the championship goes it belongs to North Plainfield. In fact there's nothing to it but North Plainfield, although the locals have one tucked under their belts and there are two more to play. This statement may seem rash but to one on the "inside" it is the unadulterated truth. The Plainfield team is literally "shot to pieces" and in the next two games they will hand the title to North Plainfield on a silver platter. The playing of the two contests is a mere formality and we're willing to stake what's left of last week's pay against a plugged nickel that the boroughites will carry off the bacon. North Plainfield couldn't single out a weaker force to pick on for the title than Plainfield, and we're inclined to believe that the remaining two combats will never be staged. So North Plainfield better get ready to accept the title and Plainfield might as well get ready to relinquish it.

Without regular practise you can't expect to have a good basketball team. Little snatches of drilling under the best coaches in the world wouldn't make a championship basketball sextet. Miss Sminck has turned wonders at Plainfield High School in feminine basketball, but when the lassies flatly refuse to come out to practises she cannot produce a champion team. The dissension that has been lurking in the red and blue girls' camp has become more pronounced during the past month and the result has been one defeat after another. Miss Sminck is naturally discouraged. When a team goes under a coach is subjected to criticism, but when it brings home a championship the coach's name is forgotten in the cheering for individual heroes. This is too often the case and if Plainfield High School girls want to prove that this condition does not exist in the Ninth street institution it is up to them to come to their coach's rescue and aid in resurrecting what appears to be a hopeless conglomeration of nothing good in basketball.

North Plainfield's action in wiping Somerville High School from its "calling list" is a commendable move. There are too many teams of schoolboys governed by rules of good sportsmanship to waste time in catering to a gang of thoroughbred rowdies. Somerville has been guilty of some of the most disgraceful tactics ever attributed to a Central New Jersey school in athletics and she will repent for her wrong-doing in the future.

"Hot stove league" dope is beginning to cloud the baseball atmosphere in these parts. Present indications point to a whirlwind season hereabouts.

Perth Amboy "News" sport scribe says that in case "Nibs" Hand can be signed to play with the Perth Amboy "Pacers" this year he will be given a show to make good in right field. He will, eh? Imagine our friend "Nibs" taking tips from the Amboy moguls.

RUTGERS BASEBALL TEAM LOSES ONE FROM LAST YEAR

The first practice of the Rutgers baseball team was held in the gymnasium, Monday afternoon, with about fifty candidates present. Coach Walter S. Bridie, formerly of the old Baltimore champions, had charge of the men. He expresses himself as very pleased with the material on hand and phophesied a successful season.

Only one regular was lost by graduation, Captain Albert Leeds, shortstop. Among the freshmen is Blanchard Durand, captain of last year's Rahway High School team, who is conceded to be the man to fill the vacant position. Durand is an excellent player and should have little difficulty in making the Rutgers team. The regulars on hand were Jennings, pitcher; Capt. Twing, first base; Seiler, second base; Howlett third base, and Giliam, Searle and Harker, outfielders. Indoor practice will be held every afternoon until the weather permits work out of doors. Harry Jennings is well-known to Plainfield fans, having frequently appeared on local diamonds.

SPARROWS VS. HAWKS.

The Sparrows and Hawks will be the contestants in the Columbus Club Five-Man Tournament tomorrow night. The Sparrows, who rank second in the team standing, are four games behind the leading Robins and cannot catch them.

MASONIC BOWLING.

DEFEAT MORRISTOWN 2ND TIME THIS YEAR

P. H. S. Outplayed Opponents From Morris County Seat In First Half.

For the second time this season the Plainfield High School boys' basketball team defeated the team of Morristown High School, at the local gymnasium yesterday afternoon, by the score of 43 to 27. The local team was without the services of McNamee at forward and Chamberlain at center, on account of illness. The team worked together in great fashion, however, and their passing had the Morristown boys bewildered.

Plainfield took the lead soon after the whistle blew when "Ted" Ryder caged the ball for two points. Baskets in quick succession by Coudray and Rosenson ran the score up to ten points before Reeves caged the ball for Morristown's first score.

Morristown played a much better game in the second half. Each team scored seventeen points. Frazier starred for Morristown, caging six goals. In the latter part Hirsch and Dunham replaced Rosenson and Peacock.

DELTA BETA OF WESTFIELD VICTIMS OF P. H. S. FRESHMEN

The Freshmen class team of the Plainfield High School defeated a team from Westfield High School, playing under the name of Delta Beta, yesterday afternoon, in the High School gymnasium by the score of 21 to 13. The game was close and fast with Plainfield leading all the way. In the first half a field goal by Cooper was the only point scored by the Delta Beta while the Freshmen scored seven points. In the second half the local team scored fourteen points and Westfield eleven.

ENGAGE FINE REFEREE FOR THIRD CONTEST

East Orange Man Will Handle North Plainfield-Plainfield Athletes.

Johnny Byrnes, one of the best-known athletes in and about the Oranges, has been engaged to officiate at the third Plainfield-North Plainfield High School basketball game to be played on the local court Saturday afternoon. He will do the refereeing, and there will be no umpire. Plainfield won the toss for the choice of courts, and naturally elected to stage the encounter on the West Ninth street rendezvous.

In view of the dissatisfaction prevalent among the "outside" constituents of North Plainfield High School, it was deemed advisable to diverge from the old custom and engage an out-of-town official for the third encounter, which, by the way, will have no effect on the title, already won by Plainfield. Allegations against the fairneess of the official who dealt out decisions in the first two games have been made in an indirect manner, and as a means of doing away with these "kicks," it was thought advisable to go elsewhere for a referee.

Byrnes is thoroughly competent to handle the contest, and should prove satisfactory to both teams. He makes his home in East Orange, and is considered one of the finest referees in that section. Only during the past year has he taken to the basketball court as a referee, and there his ability, integrity and fairness have gone unchallenged. He refereed a game in which North Plainfield participated recently and demonstrated his calibre on that occasion. With Byrnes on the court no umpire is needed, and therefore this extra expense has been eliminated.

ST. JOSEPH'S BOYS READY FOR BASEBALL

Strong Aggregation Will Be Turned Out By the Boroughites.

The members of the St. Joseph's Boys' Club, at a meeting held last night, decided to have a representative baseball team on the field this season and elected Packy" McDonough as manager. McDonough managed the Plainfield Sunday baseball team last year and can undoubtedly get together a good schedule.

The team will probably play its home games on the Cricket Field, Saturday afternoons, if that ground can be leased, and will travel on Sundays. New suits will be ordered and the colors will be white with purple trimmings. As soon as the weather permits practice will be started and a captain chosen.

Among the players who are available for the team are Dan Denny, Harry Moulton, Percy Bailey, Jim Nash, Harold Meade, Clarence Smith, Packy McDonough and Francis McDonough.

THIS LOOKS LIKE WESTFIELD SPORT!

Last Minute Cancellation Savors of Some "Spite-work."

Further substantiation of our charges against the method by which athletics are boomed at Westfield came to light last night, when the Mt. Ararat girls submitted an eleventh hour cancellation of their game with the Plainfield Five for the Columbus Court tonight. This action is only in accordance with the many previous unsportsmanlike steps taken by athletes from Westfield.

No good reason was advanced for the action, but the consensus of opinion seems to be that the Westfield girls developed a severe case of "cold feet" over night. Before the Plainfield Five the Westfielders have always fallen easy prey and indications point to a little "spite work" on their part in arranging a contest and then waiting until the last minute to cancel it, leaving the Plainfielders without an opponent.

In previous matches in Plainfield and elsewhere Westfield forces have gained some notoriety as habitual kickers and certain sport promoters in that place have been known to resort to the lowest means possible to get a rival's "goat."

The manager of the local team, being fortunate enough to have a big reserve list, did some hustling this morning and succeeded in pounding up an opponent for tonight.

ELKS AND PARK CLUB MEET IN SECOND MATCH

The Park Club and Elk Senior bowling teams are due to meet tonight on the Elks' lanes in the second match of the second home and home series between these two clubs. The Park Club has a slight advantage over their opponents, having taken two of the first three games rolled on the Washington avenue drives.

The Watchung avenue crew lost one game of the last match by a small margin and expect to annex two on their home alleys.

GIRLS VS. BOYS ON BASKETBALL COURT

Feminine Exponents of the Pastime May Challenge Rivals.

Elated over their successes recorded at the expense of every feminine team that has stuck its head above the horizon during the past season, the Plainfield Five, a feminine combination, is contemplating challenging the Columbus Club male quintet, a combination that shares the West Front street rendezvous once a week in a double exhibition with the maidens. A clash between male and female exponents of the popular indoor pastime would no doubt proving a pleasing novelty in this section and it is probable that it would draw a record sized crowd to the club. Not in recent years has a contest of this calibre been staged here and the sentiment for it at the present time is strong.

There are a number of individuals who think they know a thing or two about sizing up athletic factions who have an idea that the lassies could hang the Indian sign on their burly male rivals, who by the way, have also met with pronounced success during the season on the court.

The Plainfield Five is the speediest aggregation of feminine beauties sporting basketball togs in this section of Central New Jersey, and probably in the State, and the boys would have their hands full preventing them from hanging up double-deckers, providing of course, that the strangle-hold and other male demonstrations are prohibited. No date has been set for the match, but it is likely that it will be made a reality within the next fortnight and it will be staged on the Columbus Club court.

THREE MATCHES PLAYED IN BORO ONE-MAN EVENT

KARLBERG GETS PERMANENT HOLD OF Y. M. C. A. TROPHY

John S. Karlberg, of the senior class of the Y. M. C. A physical department, has become the permanent possessor of the all-around championship trophy, which was offered in 1911 to be won two years in succession by one man before it left the association. By annexing the championship honors this year, Karlberg accomplished this, and gets the trophy for good. It is of silver and stands fourteen inches in height.

The cup now bears three names, those of John R. Fritts, who won it in 1911; Cedric Ostrom, the winner in 1912, and John S. Karlberg, who took that honor last year.

GYM EXHIBITION.

A gymnastic exhibition will be given by the members of the boys' classes of the Y. M. C. A. at the association tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Exhibits of all the phases of the work of the department will be held. A silver offering will be taken during the evening for the benefit of the boys of this city who are not able to pay for memberships.

CHILD HYGIENE.

It is a remarkable fact that during the Franco-Russian War the death rate of infants decreased under circumstances which would have led one to believe that it would have been largely increased. The only explanation that could be given was that the mothers of Paris, who otherwise would have left their babies to the care of others and have gone to their daily employment, were obliged to stay at home, and were thus free to care for their children themselves.—From "Hygiene and the Child," January, 1915.

"QUESTION BOX" A FEATURE.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Franklin School will hold an interesting meeting in the auditorium of the Franklin School tonight at 8 o'clock. There will be a question box in charge of Dr. Henry Maxson. There will also be a musical program and refreshments will be served.

DR. ANDERSON TO SPEAK.

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, will have charge of the meeting of the Plainfield Graded Union to be held at the Y. W. C. A. at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. The subject will be "Synopsis of Exodus." The public is invited.

PEG O' MY HEART

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Dance and Its Sequel.

JERRY met Peg at the foot of the path when he saw all the lights disappear in the house.

They walked across the lawns and meadows on that beautiful July night, with the moon shining down on them.

Once at the great hall his mother put the gauche little Peg at her ease, introduced her to the most charming of partners and saw that everything was done to minister to her enjoyment.

It was a wonderful night for Peg.

She danced every dance, she had the supper one with Jerry, she laughed and sang and romped and was the center of all the attention. What might have appeared boldness in another with Peg was just her innocent, willful, childlike nature. She made a wonderful impression that night and became a general favorite. She wanted it to go on and on and never to stop. When the last waltz was played and encored and the ball was really ended Peg felt a pang of regret such as she had not felt for a long, long time.

"Oh, I am so happy, so happy!" she cried as Jerry led her back to her seat at the conclusion of the last dance.

"I wish I could make the world one great ballroom for you," said Jerry earnestly.

"Do ye?" asked Peg tremulously.

"I do."

"With you as me partner, dancin' ivery dance with me?"

"Every one."

"Wouldn't that be beautiful? An' no creepin' back afther it all like a thief in the night?"

"No," replied Jerry. "Your own mistress, free to do whatever you wished."

"Oh," she cried impulsively, "wouldn't that be wondherful!"

His mother had come across to say "Good night" to Peg. In a few moments his sisters joined them. They all pressed invitations on Peg to call on them at Noel's Folly and, with Mrs. Chichester's permission, to stay some days.

Back across the meadows and through the lanes, under that marvelous moon and with the wild beat of the "Continental Waltz" echoing from the ballroom, walked Peg and Jerry, side by side, in silence. After a little while Peg whispered:

"Jerry, what were you goin' to say to me when yer mother came up to us?"

"Something it would be better to say in the daylight, Peg."

"Sure, why the daylight? Look at the moon so high in the heavens."

"Wait until tomorrow."

"I'll not slape a wink thinkin' of all the wondherful things that happened this night. Tell me—Jerry—yer mother and yer sisters—they weren't ashamed o' me, were they?"

"Why, of course not. They were charmed with you."

"Shall I ever see them again?"

"I hope some day you'll see a great deal of them."

They reached the windows leading into the living room.

"Good night, Peg," he said.

"What a hurry ye are in to get rid o' me! An' a night like this may never come again."

Suddenly a quick flash of jealousy startled through her.

"Are ye goin' back to the dance? Are ye goin' to dance the extra ones ye wouldn't take me back for?"

"Not if you don't wish me to."

"Plaze don't," she pleaded earnestly. "I wouldn't rest aisy if I thought of ye with yer arm around one of those fine ladies' waists as it was around mine such a little while ago—an' me all alone here. Ye won't, will ye?"

"No, Peg, I will not."

He bent down and kissed her hand reverently.

At the same moment the sound of a high power automobile was heard in the near distance.

"Take care!" cried Jerry. "Go in. Some one is coming."

Peg hurried in and hid just inside the windows and heard every word that followed.

As Peg disappeared Jerry walked down the path to meet the visitor. He came face to face with Christian Brent.

"Hello, Brent," he said in surprise.

"Why, what in the world"— cried that astonished gentleman.

"The house is asleep," said Jerry explanatorily.

"So I see," and Brent glanced up at the darkened windows. Jerry remarked:

"Just coming from the dance? I didn't see you there."

"No," replied the uncomfortable Brent. "I was restless and just strolled here."

"Right," said the other man, and they walked on.

Before they had gone a few steps Jerry stopped abruptly. Right in front of him at the gate was a forty horsepower automobile.

"Strolled here? Why, you have your car!" said Jerry.

"Yes," replied Brent hurriedly. "It's a bright night for a spin."

The two men went on out of hearing.

Peg crept softly upstairs. Just as she reached the top Ethel appeared from behind the curtains on her way down to the room. She was fully dressed and carried a small traveling bag.

Peg looked at her in amazement.

"Ethel!" she said in a hoarse whisper.

"You!" cried Ethel under her breath and glaring at Peg furiously.

"Please don't tell any one you've seen me!" begged Peg.

"Go down into the room!" Ethel ordered.

Peg went down the stairs into the dark room. Ethel followed her.

"What are you doing here?"

"I've been to the dance. Oh, ye won't tell me aunt, will ye? She'd send me away, an' I don't want to go now, indade I don't."

"To the dance?" repeated Ethel incredulously. Try as she would she could not rid herself of the feeling that Peg was there to watch her.

"To the dance?" she asked again.

"Yes. Mr. Jerry took me."

"Jerry took you?"

"Yer mother wouldn't let me go. So Jerry came back for me when ye were all in bed, an' he took me himself. An' I enjoyed it so much. An' I don't want yer mother to know about it. Ye won't tell her, will ye?"

"I shall most certainly see that my mother knows of it."

"Ye will?" cried poor broken hearted Peg.

"I shall. You had no right to go."

"Why are ye so hard on me, Ethel?"

"Because I detest you."

"I'm sorry," said Peg simply. "Ye've spoiled all me pleasure now."

Poor Peg turned away from Ethel and began to climb the stairs. When she was about halfway up a thought flashed across her. She came back quickly into the room and went straight across to Ethel.

"An' what are you doin' here—at this time o' night? An' dressed like that? An' with that bag? What does it mane? Where are ye goin'?"

"Go to your room!" said Ethel, livid with anger and trying to keep her voice down and to hush Peg in case her family were awakened.

"Do ye mean to say ye were goin' with"—

Ethel covered Peg's mouth with her hand.

"Keep down your voice, you little fool!"

Peg freed herself. Her temper was up too. The thought of why Ethel was there was uppermost in her mind as she cried:

"He was here a minnit ago, an' Mr. Jerry took him away."

"He?" said Ethel frightenedly.

"Mr. Brent," answered Peg.

Ethel went quickly to the windows. Peg sprang in front of her and caught her by the wrists.

"Were ye goin' away with him? Answer me!" insisted Peg.

"Yes," replied Ethel vehemently. "And I am."

"No, ye're not," said the indomitable Peg, holding her firmly by the wrist.

"Let me go!" whispered Ethel, struggling to release herself.

"Ye're not goin' out o' this house tonight if I have to wake every one in it."

"Wake them!" cried Ethel. "Wake them. They couldn't stop me. Nothing can stop me now. I'm sick of this living on charity; sick of meeting you day by day, an implied insult in your every look and word, as much as to say, 'I'm giving you your daily bread; I'm keeping the roof over you!' I'm sick of it. And I end it tonight. Let me go, or I'll—I'll"— And she tried in vain to release herself from Peg's grip.

Peg held her resolutely:

"What d'ye mane by insult? An' yer daily breed? An' kapin' the roof over ye? What are ye ravin' about at all?"

"I'm going," said the distracted girl. "Ye'd take him from his wife an' her baby?"

"He hates them, and I hate this! I tell you I'm going"—

"So ye'd break yer mother's heart an' his wife's just to satisfy yer own selfish pleasure? You'll stay here an' he'll go back to his home if I have to tell every one an' disgrace ye both."

"No, no! You must not do that! You must not do that!" she cried, terror stricken. "My mother mustn't know. She mustn't know. Let me go. He is waiting, and it is past the time"—

"Let him wait!" replied Peg firmly. "He gave his name an' life to a woman, an' it's yer duty to protect her an' the child she brought him."

"I'd kill myself first!" answered Ethel through her clinched teeth.

"No, ye won't. Ye won't kill yerself at all. Ye might have if ye'd gone with him. Why, that's the kind of man that tires of ye in an hour an' laves ye to sorrow alone. Faith, he'd ha' made love to me if I'd let him."

"What? To you?" cried Ethel in astonishment.

"Yes, to me—here in this room today. If ye hadn't come in when ye did I'd ha' taught him a lesson he'd ha' carried to his grave, so I would!"

"He tried to make love to you?" repeated Ethel incredulously, though a chill came at her heart as she half realized the truth of Peg's accusation.

"Ever since I've been in this house," replied Peg. "An' today he comes toward me with his arms stretched out. 'Kiss an' be friends,' sez he, an' in you walked."

NEWEST MOURNING.

Crepe is being used most prodigally on the newest mourning gowns. One of the handsomest of recent models displayed is this walking suit of black trimmed with crepe bands. This coat is semi-fitted with blouse effect at the front gathered into a plain lower or hip portion. Bands of crepe, broad and narrow, trim the collar, cuffs and back of the coat. The coat is closed with crepe-covered buttons and these also trim the cuffs. The skirt has a fitted yoke and gored lower portion which has a broad band of the crepe as trimming. Black faille hat with self-trimming and dull jet beads.

COMMISSION PLANS A HOUSE-TO-HOUSE CANVASS

Elizabeth, March 4.—A house-to-house canvass of the county for mosquito breeding places was discussed Tuesday afternoon at a meeting of the Union County Mosquito Extermination Commission. The work of ditching will be commenced earlier this year than usual owing to the favorable weather conditions that have prevailed.

In co-operation with the Essex County Commission, it is planned to expend $1,500 for the construction of dikes in the North Elizabeth marshes, and also to build tide gates to shut out a large area of tidewater, which has handicapped the Commission in its work. Bids will be advertised for at once. The Commission finds itself better equipped to cope with the mosquito situation this year than ever before.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Now, begin all over again. I have told you times enough that when the water is running I can't hear a word you say."

Dick was pounding away on the typewriter in the bedroom.

"You could have heard all right if you had stopped the machine a minute," answered Nell through the closed door.

"If there's anything you want just step this way, please. I must get this letter off before I leave."

Nell put her head out of the kitchen door. "I only wanted to know how many slices of bacon you could eat. After this I use my discretion and save my lungs."

"Oh, two or three will be enough," said Dick, thumping at his letter.

The hissing of bacon was heard and the savory odor floated into the bedroom.

"Don't fry mine hard," called Dick in stentorian tones, intending to carry above the clatter of the machine, the noises in the kitchen and through the closed door.

When they were seated at the table Dick speared the bacon slices one after the other with a discontented expression on his face. "It's all hard. Didn't you hear me call and tell you I wanted mine soft?"

"No, I can't hear anything when meat is frying and the door is closed. I do think it is horrid to be calling from room to room anyway. The house is not so large that it would hurt for either of us to go where we can be heard, using an ordinary tone of voice." Nell was pouring the delicious coffee.

"As far as this morning is concerned, I was in a big rush and couldn't leave my work. You know how I like bacon and I can't understand why, because you like it fried hard, you must force it upon me the same way." Dick took the cup Nell handed him and laying his watch on the table by his plate began his breakfast.

"I took your slices out first, but the warming oven seemed to finish cooking them. I wouldn't be as fussy as you are for——"

"Oh, you wouldn't! Oh, no!" Dick laughed. "If there was ever a fussy person about her eating you are she."

"You know better, Dick Morton. You can't mention a single thing that I am fussy about," said Nell, bridling.

"I am keenly disappointed that the warning hands of my watch forbid my taking up the gauntlet you have thrown down." Dick pocketed the timepiece and swallowed the coffee at a rate of speed warranted to produce indegstion. "I would dearly love to stay here and scrap with you, citing innumerable instances of fussiness, and I feel so in the mood for it. It's a pity I must lope for the car." He pinched her cheek as he kissed her goodby and she smiled reluctantly and followed him to the door.

"Goodby!" he called. "I will write down the instances of fussiness as they occur to me today so I can present documentory evidence tonight. We can begin the war just where we left off."

"You needn't bother," replied Nell, shutting the door. She was glad he had to go. When he got one of his teasing moods it was all she could do to keep her temper. Why did men like to rub people the wrong way, she wondered.

She had begun washing the dishes when the door bell rang. She found a messenger boy with a note from Dick and a package. The note read: "Deary: Take a couple of these tablets every hour or two; they cure the fussiness that is caused by a torpid liver.—Dick."

Nell threw the package across the room and tore up the note. Would Dick never stop his fooling?

Household Hints

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Stuffed Celery—Take equal parts of finely chopped or ground English walnuts and fresh or moist cheese, mix thoroughly; put a little salt on the nuts; with this fill the groove in the celery. Very nice, especially in a course where celery is used.

Eliza's Onions—Use large Bermuda onions when in season. Place the onions in cold water, to remove outside skin, boil ten minutes in salted water, drain and return to fire. Cook until tender but not broken; drain and slightly cool. Remove part of center and prepare stuffing with onion which you have removed, chopped fine and mixed with bread crumbs, cold chopped chicken or lamb leftovers, one-half cup pecans moistened with cream, and two tablespoons butter. Mix well together and refill onions. Place in buttered baking dish and cook until well done.

Shredded Wheat Bread—Pour one pint of boiling water over two shredded wheat biscuits. Add one tablespoon lard, one-half cup molasses, one tablespoon sugar, two teaspoons salt. When lukewarm, add one-half cake compressed yeast dissolved in one-half pint warm water, and seven cups white flour. Mix thoroughly, set to rise. When double in size, mix down and put in well greased pans, set to rise; bake 45 minutes. Two loaves of excellent bread.

Raisin Pie With Meringue—Three-fourths cup seeded raisins stewed in 1¼ cups water (measuring cup) with one-half cup sugar. When hot add one tablespoon flour dissolved in a little cold water for thickening. When cool stir in yolk of one egg. Beat white of egg with one tablespoon sugar and spread over top. Pie shell should be previously baked. Whites of two eggs wil make a richer frosting.

Stewed Prunes—Wash prunes well, put in kettle, cover with cold water and let stand all night. In morning put on stove in same water. Boil until tender. Do not stir or mash. Set back on stove where they will simmer until juice is a thick syrup and very little of it. Serve when cold with cream.

Stewed Prunes With Orange—Soak three quarts of prunes over night in enough water to cover. Add one cup sugar and a sliced orange or lemon. Cover with water and stew two hours. Prunes cooked this way have a rich color and flavor.

Steamed Prunes—Wash thoroughly; steam until fruit is swollen to its original size and is tender. Sprinkle with powdered sugar and squeeze lemon juice over them.

Prunes With Whipped Cream—Cook in usual manner, cut in two, remove pit; serve cold with whipped cream.

Onion on Toast—Take half of a large sweet onion, slice very thin, put in frying pan with butter, season with salt and pepper. Cover and let stew slowly for 10 or 15 minutes, then remove cover and let brown. Thicken with flour and milk as for meat gravy. Pour over hot slices of toasted bread.

Indian Cheese—One-fourth pound butter, one-half pound cheese, one-half pint milk (or cream), one ounce arrowroot, peper, salt, cayenne, one teaspoon made mustard. Butter and cheese to be melted in a pan. Milk and arrowroot to be mixed and poured onto butter and cheese and stirred till it gets thick; if too thick add a little milk or cream to thin it. Add seasonings and serve immediately with toast.

Tomato Relish—At this time of year when chili sauce, catsup and other relishes are so much desired, the supply made in the fall by housewives becomes low. Here is an inexpensive one easily made: Take canned tomatoes. Season with salt, peper, sugar and mixed spices. Add vinegar and boil thoroughly. A few whole cloves and thin slices splendid eaten with meat or even with plain bread and butter.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CARY HALL

Can You Guess It?

Of course you guessed the CHAMOIS; I'm not at all surprised
That you should know it without being told.
And now today I'm going to tell you of an animal
That is so fierce, it makes your blood run cold.

It lives away in Asia, and is just about as large
As a lion, and has whiskers like a cat;
Its eyes are big and shiny, and they glisten in the dark
When it goes to hunt its prey—now think of that!

Its skin is marked quite handsomely with rows of shining black,
And is quite often used for rugs and such;
But we all know that "handsome is as handsome does," and so
We really can't admire this creature much.

For it is so ferocious and as cruel as can be;
It will kill men and little children, too!
It's really not an animal that one would like to meet
I'm glad it lives in Asia, aren't you?

I think perhaps you've guessed its name already, and, if not,
I'm sure you will before so very long;

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Otis Turner, who produced "Damon and Pythias," which is to be presented at the Plainfield Theater this afternoon and night, for the Universal Company, spent two months and a half alone in research for architectural models and costumic designs for the presentation of this spectacle. Its six parts have been described by students of the period as the most perfect representations ever made of Grecian life at this time, 400 years B. C. The Universal Company has made it the triumphant work of their studios, and given it a superb cast for the telling of this story of the truest and most devoted friendship the world has ever known.

Architecture, scenes of splendor, depicting the life of the period, the games, dances, chariot races are seen, while vast armies are employed in conflict at sea and on land, and great throngs gathered for the assemblages about the stadium.

One of the really big successes of the present theatrical season, "On Trial," will be presented by Cohan & Harris, at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday night, March 8. Written by Elmer L. Reizenstein, a hitherto unknown author, "On Trial" upsets all traditions, all the rules and laws of play construction. It is in a prologue and three acts, comprising seven scenes and an epilogue of two scenes. Its story is told both backward and forward. It is distinctly a novel idea, and the play is as absorbingly interesting as it is novel. The play tells a thrilling and most novel story that is of absorbing interest every minute.

It is unquestionably the greatest hit New York has had in a number of years, and its scenic production is without precedent upon the stage. An exceptionally strong company, which numbers thirty-five people, has been selected for its presentation.

Local theatrical interest is just now being concentrated on the forthcoming engagement of the noted actress, Margaret Anglin, and her incomparable company in Oscar Wilde's comedy of society and manners, "Lady Windermere's Fan," which will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre, on Wednesday, March 10.

Since the announcement of the booking there has been a continuous inquiry at the box-office, and there is every indication that the capacity of the theatre will be tested.

In the Wilde play Miss Anglin will be seen in the role of Mrs. Erlynne, which is generally conceded to be ideally suited to her emotional and histrionic gifts. The role is a favorite with the actress herself, probably because it has won her the highest critical praise, and immeasurable popular success. The production will be complete and elaborate in every detail, and will be presented here in exactly the same manner as during its three month's run in New York last season. Miss Anglin's supporting company includes Ruth Holt Boucicault, Stanley Dark, Florence Carpenter, Sidney Greenstreet, Harry Redding, Wallace Widdecombe, Virginia Palmer, Harry Barfoot, Leonard Willey, Howard Lindsey, Carolyn Darling and a dozen others.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Every theatre-goer is familiar with the name of Lew Fields, and everybody who knows Lew Fields know that he is the comedian with but few equals. When he was associated with his old partner, Joe Weber, their theatre at Broadway and Twenty-ninth street was one of the most famous in the entire country. As an individual producer, Lew Fields has a dozen big successes to his credit, one of the most pronounced of which is in "In Old Dutch." This great comedy has been transferred to the screen, and it will be shown at Proctor's Theatre next Monday and Tuesday. The film is in five parts, and Mr. Fields is seen in his original role, the one which brought him added fame and fortune. A new series of war pictures will be shown at Proctor's today and on Saturday. Charles Chaplin, the greatest of all silent comedians, will be seen in another of those hilarious two-reel comedies. Mr. Chaplin was formerly with the Keystone Company, but is now the star poser for the Esseney people, and is the highest paid male camera actor there is in the country. The succeeding episode of "Runaway June" is scheduled for today, and the "Exploits of Elaine" will form a portion of tomorrow's program.

SEEING CEREAL MADE.

The picture portion of the program at Proctor's Theatre, this afternoon and tonight, will include a wonderful education film, showing the transformation of grain from the time it is harvested in the field until it is made into cereal and packed in boxes ready for shipment to the retailer. The picture was taken under the direction of the Hecker Company, one of the largest cereal concerns in the country, and portions of the scenes show the workings of the concern's big factories. The film will be shown only during today.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA
If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the messy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Take Salts and Get Rid of Uric Acid

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, color or rank. If not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure, and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts, put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

PRIVATE FUNERAL FOR MRS. JOSEPH LA FLEUR

The funeral of Mrs. Joseph La Fleur, a former local resident, who died at her home near Pittstown, Hunterdon county, will be held tomorrow afternoon at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Jeremiah Van Winkle, of 828 West Fifth street. The service will be private and will be in charge of Rev. J. Y. Broek, of the Trinity Reformed church. Burial will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Mrs. La Fleur was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Smith Garretson, and was a native of Plainfield, having lived here nearly all her life. They had resided at Pittstown only a few years, removing from the West End when Mr. La Fleur purchased a farm in that section. Her death came after a brief illness, as she had been visiting in this city last week. Beside her husband, she is survived by two sons and three sisters, the latter being Mrs. Frederick Stillman, of West Fourth street; Mrs. Jeremiah Van Winkle, of West Fifth street, and Mrs. George Benbrook, of Somerville.

CHAMBER FAVORS A NEW COUNTY

Counsel Will Prepare Bill to Be Introduced Into the Legislature.

CAMPAIGN IS PLANNED

Encouraging Reports Received From Committee on "Boosting" Plainfield—New Families Remove Here as Result of This Work.

The Chamber of Commerce favoring the establishment of Washington county with Plainfield as the county seat, instructed its counsel at the monthly meeting last night to prepare a bill for introduction in the Legislature, providing for the establishment of such a county. Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, A. B. Wilson and Garret A. Keating were appointed a committee to gather, analyze and publish data setting forth the advantages and desirability of this movement.

The publicity committee reported that 1,600 post cards, descriptive of Plainfield, had been distributed on the 7.55 and 8.30 o'clock commuter trains to New York, and as the result two families are moving to this city on account of the Chamber of Commerce's "boost" cards. Negotiations are also underway with twelve people who are among those who answered an advertisement inserted in the New York World by a member of the Chamber who was thanked for his interest and efforts in behalf of boosting Plainfield.

A communication was received from Australia setting forth the advantages of trade with that country and mimeograph copies will be mailed to all manufacturers in Plainfield for their information. A suggestion made by A. B. Wilson that an effort be made to ascertain what allied manufacturing businesses would be helpful to the present manufacturers of Plainfield was adopted and he was appointed a committee of one to write to the various industries and report at the next meeting any interest which the manufacturers would appreciate being established in this city.

The committee on garbage and ashes made a report, including statistics which showed the result in seven cities and towns in New Jersey for the disposal of garbage, ashes and paper for the year 1914. This committee comprising A. B. Wilson, Irving Kuntzman and Garret Keating submitted the following report:

"The attached statistics on garbage and ash disposal, as handled in eight other cities and towns shows that this subject is handled directly by the municipal authorities in seven of the eight.

"Of the seven municipalities, five handle the proposition by means of a contract, while the other two cover the same through a department of municipal labor.

"The matter of collection, as to the curb, back yard, or cellar seems to vary in the various towns. Four collect at the curb, one at the curb or in the yard, one up to 100 feet back from the curb, and one from the back yards only, garbage not being allowed on the curb.

"Practically all cities and towns upon which we have obtained information use an ordinary dump wagon and carry a cover to cover the garbage and ashes when the wagon is loaded.

"All statistics obtained have been for the year 1914, and it would seem that the contract proposition is the more advisable in view of the fact that the majority of the cities, towns, etc., contract this work out. Garbage and ashes are not separated in any of the contracts, although we are advised that the contractors generally take care of this to a large extent, due to the fact that ashes can be dumped at certain places where garbage is not allowed.

"The committee wishes to respectfully call the Chamber's attention to the fact that there are pending at this time proposed bills in the Legislature of New York State providing for the disposal of garbage, ashes, etc. The committee is of the opinion that the city of Plainfield could handle this subject in a much more efficient manner than it is now handled by the individual constituents and local garbage and ash contractors."

WANT TO PROVIDE SMOKES FOR ALLIES

Mrs. George Megrew Makes An Urgent Appeal for Contributions.

Mrs. George Megrew, of 963 Central avenue, has become interested in the work of the S. S. S., or "Smokes for Soldiers and Sailors," of the Allied forces in the European War. She is personally acquainted with Lady Maud Warrender, a member of a large committee made up of prominent English people, and will gladly receive contributions to provide smokes for the soldiers and sailors.

Since the beginning of September last this organization has been sending out tobacco and cigarettes to all hospitals at home and in France, where the soldiers and sailors who have been wounded in defence of England and in the cause of the Allies.

At the present time the distribution embraces over seven hundred hospitals and convalescent homes, ambulance trains, etc., and since the work was started no request for cigarettes and tobacco have been refused. The Treasury has allowed the committee to purchase its supplies free of all duty and thus money sent to it has a far higher purchasing power than in private hands.

The committee in its letter says that the first thing a wounded man usually asks for when he comes into a hospital is a cigarette and nurses have described how this helps them through the pain of their dressings and the tedium of their recovery.

Mrs. Megrew says that she will be glad to receive contributions in any sum from five cents up and she will promptly forward the same to the committee in London.

WILL SAFEGUARD SHIPMENT OF GOODS

Both Germany and England to Aid in Forwarding Relief for the Belgians.

A great deal of anxiety has been felt during the past week about the possibility of continuing to send in safety relief ships to Belgium. At the meeting of the Plainfield Belgian Relief yesterday, however, letters from the Commission for Relief in Belgium at 71 Broadway, New York, were read indicating that both Germany and England will make efforts to see that all supplies destined for the Belgians reach their goal in safety.

A letter of thanks from Dinant, Belgium, dated February 3, was also read expressing the warmest gratitude for the clothing sent by the Plainfield committee through Dr. Van Dyke. To date 2,482 new garments and 502 used garments have been completed and collected and the next box will be shipped March 15. After that date it will be impossible for the Commission at 71 Broadway, New York, to guarantee the sending of any garments for a while as there is great congestion of food supplies at the Bush Terminal and the food is more needed than the clothing. Therefore, it was resolved by the members of the Plainfield committee that for the present they shall devote all their energies to securing for the purchase and shipment of condensed milk.

The treasurer reported that she had received in contributions, plus two interest payments of $2.81 and $1.15 respectively, $2,221.04 and had expended chiefly on shoes, flour and milk $2,091.07, leaving a balance of $129.97. During the meeting, after an urgent plea for money for milk, this balance was increased to $154.43. As at least $310 is needed for each shipment in order to buy the milk at the best advantage—at a little more than 6 cents a can—a subscription list was opened for those who would like to give regularly $1 or more a month. Several of the women present registered their names immediately.

The chairman stated that $1 buys enough milk to support two and a half little babies for a whole month. Anyone who feels like adopting a child or even the half of one to the extent of supporting it at long range with no trouble and slight expense will please send the treasurer, Miss Hartridge, forty cents or twenty cents monthly. Stamps are a convenient medium and will be gratefully accepted and promptly acknowledged.

TEMPERATURE REPORT.

The temperature report from the State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 34 degrees; 11 a. m., 36 degrees; 1 p. m., 41 degrees.

LOCAL CIVIC BODY SENDS GREETINGS TO EXPOSITION

Paul H. Burns, president of the Chamber of Commerce, of this city, this morning communicated with an official of the Pacific Telephone Company on the Panama-Pacific Exposition grounds at San Francisco, talking from the New York city office of the New York Telephone Company. Mr. Burns' message conveyed the greetings of the Plainfield civic body to the official at the Exposition. The New York to San Francisco telephone service has created considerable favorable comment and Mr Burns, who is connected with the telephone company in an official capacity, is one of the few individuals who have engaged in trans-continental conversation.

A number of greetings have been sent from all parts of the world to the Exposition grounds but this is probably the first from a municipal civic body.

The youngsters are being held for the Union County Grand Jury under charges of having committed more than a score of robberies in this city since Christmas last. All have records and have visited the county jail before.

WEATHER BUREAU SAYS BIG BLIZZARD IS COMING

Chicago, Mar. 5.—The blizzard which holds Chicago tight in its icy grasp today, is sweeping eastward and the local weather bureau says that it should reach the Atlantic Seaboard by night. Fifteen inches of snow have fallen already and the indications are that a depth of two feet will be reached by late afternoon. Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Arkansas are practically cut off, many miles of wire being down and traffic is badly hindered.

CHILD WELFARE FOR PLAINFIELD

Being Considered by Officials in Its Many Phases Applicable to City.

BADGES FOR NEWSBOYS

Mayor Calkins, Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield and Police Chief Kiely Met in Conference This Morning.

"The Child Welfare Question" came up for consideration at a conference of Mayor Leighton Calkins, Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and Police Chief Kiely, in the Mayor's office this morning, existing evils being discussed with a view to providing remedies. Certain conditions that are said to be a detriment to development of young Americans in Plainfield were brought to the attention of the group by individuals and organizations, and it is not unlikely that a number of new regulations will be tried out as the result of conclusions reached this morning.

One of the subjects given considerable attention was the plausibility of making newsboys wear badges. Miss Margaret Holly, the local truant officer, has made it plain to the Mayor that her duties would become less burdensome if boys holding the proper credentials for working on the street were designated by some outward mark. Under the State laws a boy must take out working papers before engaging in the business of selling newspapers, and it is alleged that a number of youngsters in Plainfield have failed to meet the demands of the law.

Miss Holly maintains that it would be easier for her to single out the offenders if badges were provided for newsboys, and at the same time the city would be able to keep a check on this class of juvenile merchants. In other cities, particularly in Elizabeth, Newark and Asbury Park, the scheme has been tried and has proved successful. Although it is not proposed to charge an annual license fee, it is thought that levying a small fee, probably twenty-five cents, to secure a badge, would make a youngster feel the responsibility vested in him.

Chief Kiely favors organizing the newsboys into a self-governing body, and his suggestion met with general approval at this morning's meeting. The chief is an advocate of the slogan "Give every youngster a chance to make good," and in his opinion it would be better to let the juvenile businessmen guide their own affairs than to impose needless legislation.

He suggested calling a mass meeting of the newsboys and organizing them under a suitable name, with officers and committees. By so doing, the "black sheep" in the newspaper business would be eliminated, and the boys would probably lend their individual efforts to regulate the trade.

Mayor Calkins is thoroughly in accord with furnishing badges to the newsboys, cherishing the opinion that the city in this way could keep a check on the boys selling daily newspapers on the municipality's streets.

MRS. GEORGIANNA MARGERUM.

The funeral of Mrs. Georgianna Margerum, aged about 76 years, will be held at her late home in Princeton this afternoon, and the burial will be in that place. Mrs. Margerum, who died on Tuesday from ptomine poisoning, was a sister of Mrs. Garret Eick, and Tenadore Van Cleef, of this city. She had lived in Princeton for many years. Beside a sister and brother, there survives one daughter, Miss Cora Margerum, and several nieces and nephews.

BARN PARTIALLY BURNED.

The North Plainfield Fire Department was called to the home of William H. Lunger, of Westervelt avenue, yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock to extinguish a fire in the barn in the rear of his home. The blaze was started by a grass fire which burned up to the building. The flames were quickly extinguished and there was very little damage.

ASSEMBLYMAN'S BIRTHDAY.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon has been receiving the congratulations of many friends today. The popular leader of the House is forty-four years old on this day and date but he says he doesn't feel it. Some time during last night burglars entered the home of Alfred Hearn, at Beechwood Heights, near Bound Brook, and stole a quantity of valuable silverware, much of which was of the antique variety. No clue to the individual who committed the deed has been revealed.

Chief of Police Kiely, of this city, was notified of the burglary this morning, and asked to have his men cautioned to be on the alert for suspicious characters. It was though that the crook fled in the direction of Plainfield, via trolley car. No estimate has been placed on the loss.

The Rev. Henry Mesier, rector of St. Stephen's church, addressed the members of Abraham Lincoln Chapter, I. C. S., Fraternity of the World, at its rooms in this city last night. He compared the present-day methods of training young men to the way the Lord took St. Peter, an ordinary fisherman, and made him a fisher of men. Mr. Mesier was elected an honorary member of the chapter.

F. A. Costales and Harry W. Swivel, it was announced, have completed their courses of study. The entire membership of the chapter has been divided into two teams for the purpose of enlarging the enrollment of the chapter.

GAVE A TELEPHONE TALK.

The wonderful development of the telephone, from the time that Professor Bell constructed his crude instrument up to the time of the modern apparatus of today was told in an interesting way to the pupils of the Plainfield High School this morning by A. B. Wilson, local manager of the New York Telephone Company. His subject was "The Telephone, Past and Present," and with the aid of numerous stereopticon views he pictured the old fashioned changes, the present day exchanges, the old method of carrying over head wires, the up-to-date underground conduits, and many other features of the telephone business. Mr. Wilson also related interesting facts regarding the transcontinental connections between New York and San Francisco which has just become an established fact, after many years of experimenting.

HAY STACK BURNED.

The No. 2 pumping engine from headquarters and No 4 Hose Company, from Netherwood, were called out on a still alarm at 1:20 this afternoon for a hay stack fire on the premises of C. W. The prompt arrival of the firemen prevented the flames from spreading to adjacent buildings. The origin of the blaze is not known.

COLD BATHS HEALTHY, EVEN IN TIER'S POND

But One Dip Was Enough for Grover Cashin When He Tested Temperature.

In a way that has not as yet been satisfactorily explained, Grover Cashin, 31 years old, got into the icy waters of Tier's Pond, yesterday afternoon, but no sooner had his body become submerged than he beat a hasty double-crawl for the shore, deciding that the water was not only too wet, but also too cold for comfort. The sight of a human being indulging in a swim with the mercury hovering around the 20-degree mark caused a little stir for the time being, and rumors that a man had attempted to end his worldly existence were heard.

A crowd soon collected, and Cashin was pulled to the shore. After first aid remedies had been administered, the man appeared to be none the worse for his experience, and was able to go to his home unassisted. Cashin conducts a grocery store. He has a wife and two children.

THIS NEGRO DIDN'T THINK HE'D LIKE TO WHITEWASH

"I'se would rawther ride buckin' mules than whitewash ce.ls," said George Primrose, colored, of Kalamazoo, Mich., when he was found guilty of swindling in the city court this morning and Judge DeMeza threatened to give him a six months' job kalsomining the cells in the Union county jail at Elizabeth. Primrose, who says he is employed by a vaudeville manager to perform on a pair of bucking mules, came to Plainfield February 19 and it is said obtained $5 from John Hogan, of Proctor's Theatre, under false pretenses. According to the testimony given by Hogan, the negro represented himself to be a member of a troupe due to appear at the West Front street playhouse and induced Hogan, who is the stage manager, to loan him a five spot until the manager arrived. He also extracted a similar loan from Nicholas Van Winkle, of North Plainfield, admitting his culpability in both instances.

Primrose was apprehended yesterday in Elizabeth at the request of the local authorities. Upon his promise to make restitution for the two "fake" loans the man was sent merrily on his way. He said his mules were stabled in Newark and would starve to death if he didn't get to them before it was time for their noon-day meal. Primrose, who lays no claim of relationship to the individual of minstrel fame, says he can prove his claim as a mule tamer by scars on his own carcass. This assertion was made when Judge DeMeza expressed doubt concerning his claim to footlight prominence.

ADELBERG'S STORE OPENS WITH ENTIRE NEW STOCK

After a complete renovation and improving made necessary by the bad fire on Saturday night, January 21, Adelberg's store at 129 East Front street is again open to the public. The showrooms of both women's and men's departments have been made unusually attractive, and are so arranged to display the stock to the greatest advantage. A big corps of workmen has been busy for several weeks, and the Adelberg store now stands in a class by itself.

The stock on hand at the present time is absolutely new, and represents all the latest and best in New York's up-to-the-minute fashions. Not an old garment was retained after the fire loss had been adjusted, and customers desirous of seeing the spring styles, elected by Adelberg experts, should make certain to visit the store while the reopening sale is in progress.

Frank Cashin, the North avenue cash grocer, who resides in the Siriski brick apartment, was tendered a surprise party in honor of his birthday, Wednesday evening, by thirty-five of his friends from Plainfield, North Plainfield, Westfield, Newark and this place. The feature of the program was a solo, "The Boy Who Sang in the Gallery," rendered by Frank Doyle, of Front street. Mr. Doyle was accompanied by Arthur Dunn, of Plainfield, pianist.

Mr. Cashin received many nice and valuable presents, among which was a $20 gold piece, the gift of his mother, Mrs. James Cashin, of 733 East Sixth street, who moves to Albany, N. Y., this week. Refreshments were served.

The many friends that Mr. and Mrs. Thorn made here during their former residence will welcome their return with open arms.

J. P. FABER IMPROVED.

'Plains & Fanwood.

In his monthly treasurer's report for February Charles Sheelen, borough collector, reports a cash balance on hand of $3,484.22. The delinquent tax list now totals a sum of $522.24, which is greatly reduced owing to the paying of over a thousand dollars on one assessment.

The Friday night social of the young people of the 'Plains is scheduled for tonight in the lecture room of the Baptist church.

Rev F. J. Hubach will be in charge of the fourth quarterly conference, which will be held in the Methodist church tonight, following the prayer meeting.

At the last meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church all of the officers were elected for another year: They are: Miss Laura Borman, president; Mrs. Fred Smith, vice-president; Miss Hannah Hayes, treasurer; Miss Lydia Hayes, secretary.

It is probable that the boundary line question in the eastern section of the borough and township will soon be settled, as it will be re-surveyed by the township engineer, F. A. Dunham, being satisfied that his survey for the borough is correct. He has put the boundary line on the new borough tax maps, and they are now in the hands of the State for inspection.

A man in Ohio lived for 62 years alone in a house he built for his bride to be, who died just before the wedding day. He never allowed a woman in the house.

Deafness and blindness are about equal in proportion throughout England and Wales. One in every 1,310 males and one in every 1,424 females, is blind.

The largest well in the world has just been completed at the Chicago stockyards. It is 1,625 feet deep and has a flow of more than 3,000,000 gallons a day. It took two years to sink the well.

Married men in Canada are not allowed to enlist without the permission of their wives. Forty per cent of those who wished to volunteer secured the written consent of their better halves.

The groom in a mock marriage at Tioga, N. Y., was alarmed to find that he was really knotted for life. The court refused to annul the marriage and now he is suing the town clerk, who had charge of the church festivities when the wedding took place.

COMPLIMENTS A. G. HOOLEY AS BENCH SHOW JUDGE

The American Field, conceded to be the foremost sportsman's paper in this country, in reviewing the dog show held at Madison Square Garden last week, has the following to say regarding A. G. Hooley, of this city, who judged the English setter classes:

"The English setter classes were judged by A. G. Hooley, a sportsman of wide experience with bench shows, whose dogs have also competed in field trials. Although Mr. Hooley's inclinations are toward the type of dogs that have been winning on the benches and he is a large exhibitor, there is no doubt but that he is keenly mindful of the working dog. Mr. Hooley has been a careful student of type and his opinions regarding certain peculiarities of conformation are those that practical men believe of great importance. The varieties of types that confronted him in the ring were enough to hopelessly confuse any man not absolutely sure of himself, but he sorted them out methodically and when done, while he may not have pleased everyone, he had stuck as closely to the type that he admires as was possible. In other words, we do not believe that anyone could have done any better, and the man who came out as well could have considered himself fortunate."

HUMMELS DEFEAT N. P. H. S. LASSIES

Plainfield Five Again Chalks up Victory on Columbus Club Court.

The Plainfield Five brought home their fourth straight game last night on the Columbus Club court when they defeated the North Plainfield High School girls by a final score of 26 to 15. The game was one of the hardest fought this season by the local girls and the first half was a "nip and tuck" affair, the score at the end of the first period being 14 to 9 in favor of the Plainfield Five.

The gallery and side lines of the court were filled with lusty cohorts of both sides, who kept up a din of applause for their respective favorites, as each scored a point.

In the second half, which was played with but one center, the local lassies completely outplayed the boroughites, both in teamwork, guarding and shooting. The work of the Hummel sisters was up to the usual standard, Helen caging nine goals and a brace of fouls while Ida tallied three baskets. The scoring for the visitors was divided between "Lil" Spencer and "Blondy" Burtis, the former numbering two baskets and the latter three and five fifteen foot goals.

WESTFIELD QUINTET WERE A SPEEDY LOT

Columbus Club Five Vanquished in Game on Local Court Last Night.

In the double-header attraction at the Columbus Club, last night, the representatives of that institution lost to the speedy Westfield team by a score of [illegible]. The visitors started in with a rush and kept ahead of the local quintet all through the contest. The game was replete with many thrills and long distance shots by the Westfielders which opened the eyes of the local boys, who as a rule never attempt long throws. "Billy" Coyle played his initial game with the Columbus boys, last night, and incidentally caged eight goals for his team besides playing a good all round game.

The Westfield honors were divided between F. Traynor, Dallas and P. Traynor. Traynor had the jump on McAfee throughout the game and kept the ball rolling in the Westfield territory. The score at the end of the initial period was 25 to 14, favoring the visitors, who scored another 25 counts to the opponents in the second half.

Y. M. C. A. TO PROMOTE OUT OF DOOR CLASSES

At the monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. last night, the physical department was authorized to make changes in the locker rooms and gymnasium for the purpose of protection. Hereafter there will be a lock on the door leading from the corridor to the "gym" and keys will be necessary for admittance.

It was also decided at the meeting to fix up the lot in the rear of the building for useful purposes. The fence will be repaired and the ground graded. It is the purpose of Mr. Meermans to hold out-of-door classes as soon as the weather permits. A baseball diamond will be laid out there and it can also be used for volley and hand ball games. At the present time the lot is not in use.

"STOP MY PAPER."

Since the war broke out newspapers throughout the country have been ordered to discontinue delivering to many of their German subscribers because of alleged unfairness to the Kaiser's cause. There are cases in Plainfield where men who have been active in the city have become so incensed because the local papers have not forgotten their neutrality and favored the Germans, that they have discontinued their subscriptions. These people content themselves with reading a German paper published in Newark or New York, and hearing others tell what is going on at home.

The fraction of a papers revenue which such people withdraw is not worth considering from the publishers viewpoint, and the person so doing fully realizes it. He hopes, however, to frighten publishers into the belief that others will stop the paper, and thus bring about a reversal of the policy which has been laid down. The New York Times sums up the situation well when it says:

Of course such a reversal for such a reason would be dishonest as well as cowardly, but he who proclaims the stopping of his subscription doesn't think of that. And how hard to explain is it that anybody should be without the willingness, or even without the eagerness, to hear what can be said against his own views or conclusions! Either his confidence in his own judgment is weak or he prefers to hold to notions already accepted, regardless of whether they are right or wrong.

The reader who will not take a paper with all the utterances of which he cannot agree does not want a newspaper at all, or to know what can be known about the subject he considers important or interesting—he wants a partisan organ that will keep him in a comfortable twilight. Papers of that kind were once numerous, but they are scarce nowadays, and they get fewer every year.

It looks very much as if local option will become a reality in New Jersey before the Legislature adjourns. The bill providing for it passed the Senate on Tuesday, and the leader of the Democratic minority in the House says that the Hudson county delegation of twelve men will vote for the passage in the Lower House. That means that only nineteen votes will have to be procured, and those who follow political matters at Trenton say that they can see twenty-four votes for it aside from those in Hudson county. Governor Fielder says that he will sign the bill if it comes to him, so the people of many municipalities are reasonably certain to have the liquor question put up to them for a decision before long.

The Public Service Corporation has a rule forbidding smoking or carrying lighted cigars on its cars, but it appears to be a regulation in name only, sometimes being enforced and at other times no attention being paid to it. And not only in the trolley cars do the fellows who do not know better carry cigars or smoke when they should not. Yesterday morning a man calmly smoked a pipe in the waiting room of the Plainfield station while many women were about and no one took the trouble to call his attention to the rule forbidding it. "Gentlemen will not indulge in such practices. Others should not."

The Legislature has now been in session for the best part of two months and up to date not a bill has been passed and sent to the Governor that will reduce the expense of operating the state one cent. It's pretty near time that the county tax boards were abolished, and unless the Republican majority gets busy it will be too late to live up to campaign pledges.

If there has been any doubt about the passing of the horse, a look at the cab stand at the Plainfield station will be convincing. A year ago a couple of decrepit automobiles were all that were seen doing taxi duty. Now there are but few horse drawn cabs.

The best thing that you can do for your town is to get a family to move here and settle in one of the vacant houses. There are no cities which offer more attractive advantages for residential purposes than Plainfield.

The contributing editor for tomorrow will be L. M. Booth, who will discuss from a new angle a matter of much interest to people who trade at Plainfield stores. The subject is "A Look Ahead in Merchandising."

Statisticians tell us that with the present calendar we lose one day in every 2,500 years. We should all worry about the length of time it cuts from our lives.

Congress having adjourned the people of the United States can breathe a sigh of relief. Aside from talking it cannot be said that much was accomplished.

Who says Spring has not come—the seed catalogues have begun to arrive and Senator Martine is sending strawberry plants to his friends.

Maxson conducted a queustion box, and many questions relating to the school and the home were answered.

A social time followed the business meeting, and refreshments were served. The annual meeting will be held during the first part of May.

REV. E. B. SAUNDERS TO PREACH HERE TOMORROW

TOUR CONTESTANTS' STANDING WILL BE FIRST SHOWN TOMORROW

Candidates Busy Bringing in Votes to Win Free Trip to Panama Fair—Announcement Will Give Relative Positions—Still Plenty of Room for New Entries for Educational Trip.

Tomorrow will appear for the first time the list of candidates, together with the number of votes each candidate has received up to 6 p. m. yesterday. Any votes received after that hour will appear in the next revised vote standing Thursday, March 11th, and will include all votes received up to 6 p. m., Tuesday, March 9th.

About Dealers and Newsboys.

The management of the Press assures all newsdealers and newsboys that subscriptions secured by candidates will in no way affect their future business. All regular readers of the Press who give their subscriptions to a candidate may rest assured that the same carrier will continue to deliver the Press, and will receive the same percentage he has always received.

The above statement is made to settle for all time the argument some candidates report from people they have asked for their subscription, the people in many cases contend that they will either lose their carrier or that the carrier will lose his percentage and the Press assures everybody that neither will happen.

Clip the coupon from today's issue of the Press and vote for your favorite in the list of candidates.

The friendly rivalry to secure first position in their respective districts, when the first vote announcement is made, Saturday, is now on in earnest. A number seem determined to lead in their districts from start to finish. Apart from the candidates, interest in the contest is increasing generally. The opportunity to enter is now, and the hesitating ones should not forget to get their applications in so that the contest representative can call on them and start them in the race from the scratch. This will give them an opportunity to interest others in their behalf before the field is covered and their friends have promised their support to someone else.

Candidates May Work in Any Territory They Choose in Securing Subscriptions.

Candidates must be residents in the district from which they enter. They may go into any other district to get the ballots that are printed in the paper and to secure the paid-in-advance subscriptions on which votes in blocks are issued.

There are no conditions that do not apply to all alike. It is a fair field, where the ambitious candidates have an equal chance of winning. As many may enter as comply with the rules of the contest. When you enter, get a campaign manager, or, better still, two campaign managers. Get them to assist you in mapping out a plan of action. Get hold of all the coupons that appear in the Press that you can. Make a list of prospective subscribers. Have your friends use their influence with their friends, and before you know what has happened you will have an endless chain of workers in your behalf.

Careful systematic planning and effort is what will win the Press trips across the continent. A frequent counseling with your campaign managers will prevent misunderstanding of plans. The "everlastingly" at it will secure the trip for you.

If you are a woman over 16 years of age, married or single, you can learn how to make a twenty-three-day midsummer trip across the American continent at the expense of the Press.

One candidate wants to know if it is necessary for her personally to send in the subscriptions. Anyone may send in the subscription, but they must be sure to state that the votes are to be credited to whatever candidate they wish them given, and addressed to the contest department.

Everyone Wins.

The management of the Press has decided to be most liberal to the candidates who may enter this contest. In addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all those candidates who do not win trips, and remain active until the end of the contest, a commission of ten per cent. will be paid on new subscriptions, and a five per cent. commission will be paid on old subscriptions.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday until further notice.

IONA COUNCIL GIVES AN ENJOYARLE EUCHRE

Iona Council, Degree of Pocahontas, gave a euchre last evening at the council rooms, 109 Park avenue, which was attended by nearly one hundred members and their friends. The winners of the euchre were Charles Case, first; Miss Hummer, first; William Young, second, and Mrs. Dora Sutton, second.

The committee in charge of the euchre comprised Mrs. Edward Bowman, chairman; Mrs. John Ludgate, Mrs. M. Dunn, Mrs. Thomas Parsons and Charles F. Meyers, Jr.

Y. M. C. A. TO CO-OPERATE WITH SCHOOL PRINCIPALS

Secretary Alfred Estes, of the Y. M. C. A., has been in communication with several of the principals of the local grammar schools regarding the motion picture entertainments, which are held in the association auditorium every Saturday. It is Mr. Estes' object to co-operate with the schools in giving the children instructive pictures on historical, educational and industrial subjects, which are right in line with the work that he has been doing in certain classes.

Special features for the school children will be shown every week, together with comedy films. Tomorrow two of the pictures will be "Enoch Arden" and "The Minute Men."

MRS. CHARLES E. RYNERSON.

Mrs. Maud Agnes Rynerson, wife of Charles E. Rynerson, died Wednesday at her home, 118 Dwight street, Jersey City. She was a former resident of Plainfield being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Jeffrey, of 1504 West Third street. The young woman was twenty-two years old and leaves an infant son. The funeral will be held at the home of her parents Sunday afternoon at 2.30; burial will be in Samptown.

CZAR NEARS GOAL BY BRITAIN'S AID

It Puts Constantinople Within Reach of the Russians.

CITY DESIRED FOR AGES.

Muscovites Have Waged Ten Wars For Purposes of Seizing Ancient Byzantium, Ultimate Object Being Winning of a Port With Access to the Mediterranean.

The declaration of the British foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey, that Great Britain is willing to abandon her historic opposition to Russian access to the Mediterranean, shows that a policy which England had from time to time for centuries maintained by force of arms has been abandoned. This policy was to keep Russia from having unobstructed access to the Mediterranean, and originated with the idea that such access might at any time be employed to isolate the United Kingdom from the Indian empire, which would then fall a prey to Russia operating from Siberia.

On the other hand, Russia, with a vast area of as yet undeveloped resources, has as constantly sought a southern port that should be free from ice the year around. Imagine the United States in its present latitude, but with twice its lateral area and with no port south of Portland, Ore., and you have a fair idea of the commercio-geographical position of Russia. The reduction of the Dardanelles forts protecting Constantinople has aided materially in advancing Russia's aims.

For two centuries Russia has sought to reach the eastern Mediterranean through Turkey and is now fighting her tenth war in the effort. After each defeat she has turned her attention elsewhere. The Russo-Japanese war developed from an attempt of Russia to secure the coveted port on the coast of Asia. The delicate condition of Anglo-Russian diplomacy during the latter half of the last century was due to Russia's desire to obtain a foothold on the Persian gulf. This condition was finally dissipated, however, by the Anglo-Russian treaty of 1907, which paved the way to the present triple entente. Russia's attention then reverted to the near east and Turkey.

Here is a brief record of Russian attempts for the last 200 years to reach the sea via Turkey:

In 1709 Russia attempted to reach Turkey via the Black sea and was defeated.

In 1739 Russia, aided by Austria, tried to reach Turkey through the Balkans, but at the close of the war the Turks had invaded Russian territory.

The war of 1768-74 was in retaliation for that of 1739. Russia invaded northeastern Turkey and swept the Turkish ships from the Black sea. All that saved Constantinople then was the plague which broke out in the Russian army.

In 1788 Russia attacked Turkey along the Danube, and her troops had reached the southern confines of Bulgaria, as it was prior to the late Balkan war, when Turkey sued for peace.

The war of 1806-7 was brought about by the intrigues of Napoleon's agents at the court of the sultan, who desired to divert Russia's attention from the march of the French on Moscow. England came to the support of Russia this time. Admiral Duckworth sailed through the Dardanelles and threatened to bombard Constantinople unless Turkey joined England and Russia against Napoleon. The Turk was still making evasive answers when peace was concluded.

In 1810 a Russian army advanced as far as Bazarjik, but could not proceed on account of disease and the lack of provisions.

A similar invasion was repeated in 1828-9, with great preparations on Russia's part and with the proclaimed objective of Constantinople. This was the famous war in which Greece gained her independence and by which Russia freed part of what is now Roumania from Turkish rule, but it was cut short by the plague.

Then came the Crimean war of 1853-4, in which Russia's avowed objective was again Constantinople and which drew England, France and even the kingdom of Sardinia to the defense of the Turks. In this war the allies carried hostilities into Russian territory north of the Black sea, and, in the end, even Austria rose and forced Russia to evacuate the part of Roumania she had freed from Turkey thirty years before.

In the war of 1877-8 Russia, thinking to allay any apprehensions in western Europe, declared herself to be the champion of Christendom, but her objective was, as ever, the same—Constantinople. As a result of the Crimean war Russia had been prohibited by the allies from maintaining a fleet on the Black sea, and so now she entered Turkey through Roumania and was actually saved from disaster by the Roumanian troops at Plevna. The new Servian state also aided Russia, and her victory seemed assured, when again England intervened by sending a fleet through the Dardanelles to the defense of Constantinople. Disease, lack of provisions and the threatening British fleet brought the campaign to a close, and again, and perhaps for the last time, saved the ancient capital of Turkey from the Russians.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The wardrobe which the association girls have been working on for the past few months will be on exhibition at the local parlors all day Thursday, March 11. Everyone interested is cordially invited to come There will be a sale of other small, useful articles, which the members have worked on in order to raise money for the expense they have been put to. Home-made cakes and candies will also be on sale, and it is hoped that these booths will be generously patronized.

Miss Lena Mae Jackson, of East Fifth street, will begin her duties at the association on Monday morning as the new assistant secretary. Miss Jackson is well fitted for her position, having had a great deal of experience in church work, also being a student at the Bible Teachers' Training School, in New York. Miss Jackson will be at the Y. W. C. A. Sunday afternoon, when she will be glad to meet the association girls and members.

Dr. F. E. Du Bois was the lecturer at the "First Aid to the Injured" classes this week. His talk included "Injuries in which skin is not pierced or broken, strains, dislocations, fractures, etc, with demonstration of emergency treatment." "Injuries in which skin is pierced or broken cuts, gunshot wounds, bleeding, etc., and demonstration of treatment. These classes are extremely popular with the members, and the association feels especially grateful to the doctors, who give their services in lectures and demonstrations.

Among the Plainfield delegates to the Silver Bay City Association Conference will be Miss Katherine Aller, the local general secretary. Miss Aller will teach at the conference, her subject being "Christian Citizenship for Girls." The conference includes a carefully planned program, including study of the Bible, under the best-known teachers of the country, and consideration of the vital issues in the life of today, both in our own land and on the foreign mission field, together with inspirational hours on the essentials of the Chritian faith, and well outlined technical work treating of the concrete problems which each association has set itself to solve.

Do You Know that Railroad Expansion Makes Work and Stimulates Industry?

Money saved by the railroads flows back to the people. The $2,000,000 paid annually by the railroads of Pennsylvania and New Jersey to unnecessary trainmen, forced upon them by the Full Crew—or "excess man crew"—Laws, deprives the people of the big benefits and advantages this money, properly expended, would bring.

Because the efficient development of the railway industry in these States is so materially identified with the prosperity of the farmer, business man, working man, and scores of more or less affiliated industries, the railroads ask the people to help them save this huge amount—now absolutely wasted—that it may go to useful purposes and work toward restoration of general prosperity.

This $2,000,000 spent for 80 locomotives, for example, would make one year's work for 1745 men, as follows:

In the locomotive shops	894
In the various processes of producing the 29,200,000 pounds of material going into these locomotives, 851 men would get employment as follows:
In steel mills	206
In blast furnaces	45
In iron mines	140
In coal and coke production	60
In other work	400

Wages for all these men would amount to $1,750,000. This wage money going into circulation would make work in hundreds of other directions.

Railroad development bears upon all industries. It affects hundreds of businesses, thousands of individuals. Under normal conditions, the railroads constitute a great constructive force. Increasing their facilities and improving their systems results in stimulating all industry and business and automatically creates work for innumerable persons in many occupations.

Increased industrial activity swells passenger and freight traffic. This means more trains and real work for additional crews. In turn, it necessitates more locomotives and cars, increased equipment, erection of new and remodeling of old stations, reduction of grades and curves, elimination of grade crossings, construction of sidings in producing territories, increased passenger and freight terminal facilities.

The welfare of the people and the prosperity of the railroads are closely linked. The railroads find their prosperity in the general welfare. They seek not to decrease, but to increase, employment.

Communicate in person, by letter, or otherwise—TODAY—with your elected representatives at Harrisburg and Trenton. Ask them to repeal the Full Crew Laws. Call attention to the fact that, of 282 editorials received to date, 229 urge the repeal of the laws.

Let all get together to start the wheels of industry turning—to open wide the doors to prosperity.

NOW, "WHADDAYA" THINK OF DUFFY?

Columbus Club Scorer Says He Was Responsible for Club's Defeat.

John Duffy, alias "Quinine," has come through with the startling revelation having a direct bearing on a basketball issue between the Columbus Five of this city and the W. F. A. quintet of Bound Brook which opposed each other on the local court last week. According to Duffy's statistics at the culmination of the game the decision was a draw and an over period was declared. Bound Brook scored two points and won the game in the extra session.

Meditating over his figure that same night, Duffy discovered that he had failed to credit "Long George" Linke with a foul he had registered during one of the heated periods. This point would have placed Columbus Club in the lead by a slim margin at the end of the two regulation periods but inasmuch as it was not recorded the game was thought to have been a tie.

Various reasons have been advanced for the descrepancy in the official score book. One of these is that a couple of fair representatives of the weaker sex conspired to keep Duffy's attention from the contest at a vital point and while "Duf" was endeavoring to pacify the suffragettes Linke slipped in his one point counter. Another theory is advanced to the effect that Duffy sat with his "bad eye" in the direction of the Columbus Club basket. According to those wiseacres who think they know a thing or two it takes Duffy so long to move his immense headpiece from one poise to another that a point could easily have been registered without him knowing it, in the event of his good eye having been pivoted on some object at the other end of the court. Still others think that Duffy was hired to "throw" the game, but "Duf" steadfastly maintains that he was ignorant of any wrong-doing.

This "find" of Duffy's, or rather his confederates in the club, while it may lead those on the team to believe that they won the game, will probably have little effect on popular sentiment, as circumstances are conflicting. However, the victory was carried that same night to Bound Brook and it is a well-known fact that anything that is taken to that hamlet seldom returns. Considering the fact that Duffy has heretofore attended to his duties conscientiously and in a thoroughly satisfactory manner a caucus of the near athletes at the West Front street rendezvous unanimously voted to retain his services as official record compiler. Duffy has heretofore been impressed with a responsibility of his duties and this little incident will probably serve to remind him that suffragettes are a menace when good score keeping and a livelihood are at stake.

THINGS TO WORRY ABOUT

Whether or not "June" had anything to do with "Runaway June."

Whether or not Hymie Abrams would rather reside in Somerville than North Plainfield.

If it is necessary to play two more games to decide that feminine interscholastic basketball title.

When "Mike" Moynihan will be able to force Morris Abrams to accept defeat in a checker match.

Why they didn't make rings bigger in basketball. (Dedicated to Columbus Club five.)

Getting a girls' basketball team to oppose the Plainfield Five.

Who, besides the referee, was responsible for Plainfield High School's victories over North Plainfield this year.

What baseball mogul will have the backbone to start a representative team on local sand lots this year.

Who is a better scorekeeper than a man who can find a point that has been scored during the game and the absence of which from a scorebook has cost his team the decision.

Where that silver loving cup will come from that Plainfield High School won by annexing the interscholastic title.

How old Methuselah will be when Westfield finds a referee that will suit her.

What certain feminine basketball players will do when war hits the food supply at the Columbus Club.

How many male basketball players are not in favor of playing against a girls' basketball team.

IMPORTANT MATCH.

An important bowling match, between the Sparrows and Hawks, of the Columbus Club five-man tourney, will be played tonight. The Sparrows are now second in the standing to the Robins and need every game, as the latter have a good lead, with only three more games to play.

Swimming News and Notes

Written for the Daily Press by LOUIS P. HANSEN.

Kahanamoku Learned to Swim by Dodging Sharks.

Duke Kahanamoku, who beat the best swimmers of the world at the Stockholm Olympic games, and who demonstrated the efficacy of the Hawaiian kicking stroke over the Australian crawl stroke, learned his technique playing hide-and-seek with man-eating sharks just outside Honolulu Harbor.

Just as the airmen learned the art of flying from the birds, the greatest swimmer of the world learned the tricks of the water from its denizens. Kahanamoku's method of obtaining instructions involved even more risks than those taken by the first airmen. The sharks would have much preferred the Kanaka lad for a meal than for a pupil.

Not so many years ago the world's champion swimmer was one of the almost naked boys who swam from the dock at Honolulu to meet incoming liners, and to dive for silver coins for the amusement of the passengers. They seemed to come out of the water from its hidden caves, demanding Gathered Many Coins.

Kahanamoku was the brightest and the liveliest of the crew. He could swim faster and dive deeper than any of them, and he usually returned to the dock with his mouth filled with coins.

For a few dollars the Duke would perform a trick in the water that would make the matodor's taunting of the bull seem decidedly tame. He would swim beyond the coral reefs into the waters where the maneating sharks lurked. Poised with his head above the water, he would wait for the sight of the shark's fin. He would let the man-eater move closer and turn on its back to open its jaws.

Then, with a light laugh, the brown boy, who knew the water better than the shark, would dive under the cumbersome monster, whose powerful jaws would close on nothing. He would bob up yards away, and, laughing, invite the shark to another attack. This game of hide-and-seek would continue until Kahanamoku would seize a rope and pull himself up to the deck of the liner to collect his fee for the exhibition, while the shark circled the ship hungrily. The "show" over, the brown boy would lead the sea monster a merry race back to the coral reef, which barred the sharks from the inner harbor.

Born a Swimmer.

Kahanamoku was born in Honolulu, the son of the chief of police of the city. To be born in Honolulu means to be born a swimmer, for among the Hawaiians swimming is to the natives what baseball is to Americans. When he was very young Kahanamoku was one of the stars at surfriding at Waikiki Beach. This is a sport which used to be indulged in for the edification of the ancient kings of Hawaii. The surf-rider stands erect on a flat plank and balances himself in the booming surf. In this position Kahanamoku looked like a young Triton done in bronze.

Six months previous to the American trials for the Stockholm meet the Hui-Nalu Swimming Club, of Hawaii, anxious to be represented as Americans in the world's games, sent Kahanamoku to the United States. His prowess was recognized immediately. While he was handicapped at the start because he was used to open water swims and could not turn rapidly in tanks, he beat some of the best swimmers in America.

Under the tutelage of George Kistler, swimming coach of the University of Pennsylvania, he soon overcame this and proved himself the master of swimming courses, enclosed or in the open.

In the trials for the Olympic meet at Verona Lake, Montclair, N. J., Kahanamoku easily won the 220-yard swim, doing the distance in 2 minutes and 40 seconds, lowering the American record by three-fifths of a second. (The course actually measured 225 yards.)

Sets World's Record.

At Stockholm Kahanamoku established a world's record for the 100-metre race of 1 minute 2 2-5 seconds. (In trial heat he covered the distance in 1 minute 1 2-5 seconds.) He won the final from Bretting, the German champion, with ease. He was so far ahead at the end that he finished laughing over his shoulder at the other competitors, as he used to laugh at the sharks beyond the entrance of Honolulu Harbor.

The "Duke" lowered the world's record of 54 3-5 seconds by four-fifths of a second, and the Australians, whose crawl stroke had been held the last word in fast swimming, began to sit up and take notice.

In Sydney, Australia, Kahanamoku swam away from the best of the Australians, and the watermen of the Antipodes began to notice the difference in strokes.

The slow, easy movements of Kahanamoku, from the hips to the tips of the fingers, were snarply in contrast to the style which the Australian cracks used. The Australians buried their heads, while Duke kept his head out of water and had what the Australians did not have, a clear view of his competitors.

Kick Increases Speed.

The Australians, in the crawl stroke, used leg work, not to increase the speed, but merely to balance the body in the water. The Kahanamoku kick gave him additional speed, and the Australians reluctantly admitted that the brown boy of Honolulu Harbor knew more about swimming than they did.

Kahanamoku loves his native waters best and spends most of his time near Honolulu, where he is known as the Duke of Waikiki, the most wonderful swimmer in the world.

The latest tale of the Duke's water feats recounts how he strangled a giant eel, which bit off one of his fingers while he was in the water. And yet, for the pure love of aquatic adventure, he teases the man-eating sharks outside of Honolulu Harbor.

No better proof could be found of the keen interest now taken by the public in water sports than the big crowd which attended the meet at the New York Athletic Club last Wednesday. Torrential rains and a gale of wind made one think longingly of a cozy fireside, yet men and women began to pour into the club natatorium at an early hour, and long before the first event was called the place was jammed to the roof.

Few pools offer facilities for accommodating spectators, and this proves a severe handicap to swimming, both here and in most American cities.

Quite recently the Illinois Athletic Club, of Chicago, attempted to arrange an Eastern tour for its champion team, but even the small guarantees asked to help finance the trip could not be granted by organizations only too anxious to secure the appearance of the Westerners, but lacking space to admit the public, and thus get returns from the meets.

The committee in charge of water sports at the Panama-Pacific Exposition has definitely announced that the swimming championships next July will be held in the Sutro Baths, over a 75-yard straightaway course. It was the original plan to run off the events in open water, but so many objections were raised by prospective entrants that the committee deemed it advisable to use the Sutro natatorium instead.

Quite a few of the Eastern High Schools are taking up college water polo, and there is talk of forming a league and holding a yearly tournament. Philadelphia has several teams in the field, and they have been active of late competing among themselves and against university freshman sextets.

THOSE WHO WILL ENGAGE IN LAST LEAGUE COMPETITION

In tomorrow afternoon's basketball game on the Plainfield High School court six out of the ten players will engage in their last Plainfield-North Plainfield basketball clash. The two captains, Abrams, of N. P. H. S., and McNamee, of P. H. S.; Rosenson, Chamberlain and Peacock, of P. H. S., and Van Mater, of N. P. H. S., are the performers engaging in their final big match. Naturally the issue will be a keenly waged one in view of the personal pride each player takes in being credited with engaging in a last victory over the bitterest rival.

Plainfield will lose all of its regulars this year with the exception of "Bill" Wheelan and in all probability he will be elected captain. North Plainfield retains Conroy and Townley as forwards, and Hebert as guard.

Y. M. H. A. GAME PUT OFF; LOCALS WILL PLAY CHAMPS

Because of the incomplete condition of the new gym, the basketball game scheduled between the Perth Amboy and Plainfield Y. M. H. A. teams, to be played at the former place last night, was postponed for the second time. The game will probably be staged on Monday, March 15, at Perth Amboy. The local team will meet the Elizabeth Y. M. H. A. five in the T. A. B. Hall next Tuesday night.

This will be the second meeting of the season between these two teams, the Elizabeth five winning the first game of the season from the locals at Elizabeth.

The Betsytown quintet claims the championship of the State, and in defending their claim will meet the teams of Bayonne, Passaic, New Brunswick and this city during March.

ELKS EVEN SERIES WITH THE PARK CLUB

Two Games of Last Night's Match Went to Watchung Avenue Aggregation.

Frank Blatz's pinning was the feature of the second match between the Park Club and Elk bowling teams rolled on the Watchung avenue drives last night, when the home pinners took the last two games, dropping the initial roll. The result of this match again ties up the series between these two teams, this being the second time it has happened this year. Blatz rolled three fine scores, 215, 235 and 234. His average for the match was 228.

There were large delegations of "rooters" from both clubs present last night and things looked dark for the "Bills" after the first game had been played. Barlow's big score as a starter in the first game, helped materially in the Parks annexing the game. He rolled a 234 and the Washington avenue crew copped the initial tilt by scores of 927 to 892. Blatz was high in all the games for the Elks and in the second one made high score of the match.

After rolling such a fine score in the first game, Barlow went to pieces and registered a 17 for his second score. He went down still farther in the last game, only getting a 141. Kiely made a 205 in the second game and Long, for the Park Club, finished the tenth frame with 206. The team scores of the second game were 967 to 838. Blatz surprised the audience by keeping up his good work and registering a 234 in the final game. Captain "Bill" Nash made his best score of the match, a 203, just at the right time and at the end of the game the visiting aggregation were 73 pins in the rear.

The scores follow:

ABBOTT CAPTURED THREE POINTS ON PARK ALLEYS

A. M. Abbott did some fine pinning in the weekly play of the handicap five-back tournament held at the Park Club last night, and won three points in the first night's play for the March average prize. He was placed at scratch and won first place with a score of 186. Abbott was at his best, and the nearest net score to his was 182, made by R. C. Campbell, who was given a handicap of 8. He received two points for second.

The remaining point went to Dr. Marcus Clawson, who had a handicap of 38, and a total score of 173. There were fourteen who took part.

The results follow:

Dr. F. T. Clawson	140	25—165

GEORGE LEIGHS INJURED.

George Leighs was injured in the basketball game last night on the Saengerbund court, when he collided with his teammate, Louis Ulmer, and received a severe cut above the eye. Two stitches were required to close the wound. The two players were on the W. F. A. quintet of Bound Brook, which lined up against the St. Joseph's team, and both were running for a ball when the collision took place. Mr. Leighs will be in shape within a few days.

PLAINFIELD AND BOROUGH RIVALS IN THIRD TILT

Although there is nothing to be gained in either team's winning the game, except a little satisfaction, the third basketball contest between the Plainfield and North Plainfield quintets, which is scheduled to be played in the P. H. S. gym tomorrow afternoon, at 3:30, will undoubtedly be an interesting one, and a large crowd of supporters of both teams are expected to witness it. Plainfield has taken two one-point victories from its interscholastic rival, which was just enough to annex the championship and medals, and the boroughites will be there tomorrow in full force, prepared to take advantage of their last chance to win, this being their final match of the season.

The game will be the last of the season between local school teams, as the Leal aggregation has finished its schedule and will not meet either the city or borough teams in the third game. Plainfield still has four more games to play. The teams will line-up tomorrow as follows:

P. H. S.		N. P. H. S.
McNamee	forward	Townley
Rosenson	forward	Conroy
Chamberlain	center	VanMater
Peacock	guard	Abrams
Wheelan	guard	Hebert

Every year, toward the end of the season, we do this. We make a new low price on a lot of the good clothes in broken size ranges, color assortments, etc., that remain from the Winter's busy selling.

In this instance, we gathered some 1,400 Overcoats and Suits that had been originally $18.50 to $25, and have marked them all $12.75. Probably a thousand of these are left for tomorrow's selling — which amounts to saying that the men who come in for a look will be well satisfied with the assortment at their disposal.

SUNDAY TO VISIT PRINCETON MONDAY

Evangelist Will Be Heard by Nearly All of 1,600 Students at Two Meetings.

Princeton, March 5.—The committee in charge of the coming of Billy Sunday to Princeton made public yesterday the plans for the visit of the evangelist, who according to the scheme is scheduled for two addresses on Monday.

Mr. Sunday is coming here under the auspices of the Theological Seminary and will speak in the First Presbyterian church. President Hibben declined to give the use of a university building for the service, but the church in which the meeting will be held is surrounded on three sides by the university and is only fifty feet from Alexander Hall, the college auditorium.

Mr. Sunday will address two meetings because the throng that desires to hear him cannot crowd into the church auditorium at one time. The undergraduates have all filed applications for tickets and indications are that almost all of the 1,600 students are going to attempt to get into a place capable of holding 900.

Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton was one of a committee of three New York ministers that called on the evangelist yesterday for the purpose of getting his consent to speak in New York. Mr. Sunday said that if he went to New York, and there was a small possibility of his doing so, he would insist on the erection of a tabernacle. He refused to speak in Madison Square Garden.

ELIZABETH DISCONTINUTES ITS MOUNTED POLICE

Decision to discontinue the mounted squad and to sell the horses of the Elizabeth Police Department was reached yesterday afternoon at a special meeting of the Police Commission. The mounted squad consists of three patrolmen, who have been on duty in the less thickly populated residential sections of the city for years. Elimination of police on horseback has been agitated upon numerous occasions in the past, but certain influences always prevented such action before it could be put through.

Economy and lack of necessity for such a force were the reasons given by President De Hart for the latest change ordered by the commission. He stated that shoeing, feed and other expenses incidental to the upkeep of the horses entails an expenditure of about $80 a month, or $960 a year. According to Captain DeHart, the police can give possibly better service on foot and the money spent on the horses could be used to better advantage elsewhere.

HERE AND THERE

In a recent issue of the "Fire Engineer" a glowing tribute to the ability of Chief T. O. Doane as a department head is prompted by the following communication received by the chief from a prominent Plainfield citizen reading as follows.

"The City of Plainfield, N. J., is very fortunate in having as the chief of its fire department a skillful and veteran fire engineer like Chief T. O. Doane. He is as alert at fire prevention as he is to answer an alarm and that is the reason Plainfield has been saved from desctructive fires.

"Chief Doane believes second count in the initial stages of a fire. It is a religion with him. That is the reason the Plainfield department always gets there on time and also why Plainfield has been saved from many a bad fire.

"Chief Doane is keen to the fact that fire prevention is the need of the hour, especially in places like Plainfield, which do not have at their command the powerful fire fighting forces of a large city. A building in the business section of a city like Plainfield on fire from cellar to roof is a more serious and dangerous proposition than the same fire would be in New York. It is that fact which makes very valuable the work of a man like Chief Doane. As an illustration let me suggest that had the fire in the Edison factory been within striking distance and with water pressure of departments capable of concentrating powerful apparatus like those of Newark or New York, the fire would undoubtedly have been checked in its early stages."

Commenting on the foregoing letter the magazine writer says:

"Plainfield gives honor to the man because he has won it and the whole town loves him because he is himself, Chief Doane. To the everlasting glory of the profession there are other chiefs like Doane who measure up to the full dignity of manhood and citizenship. It's fine to be appreciated like that, but it's finer still to be really somebody whom people like those can so appreciate."

CONFLICT OF INTERESTS

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 4.

Many men employed in railroad yard service in this territory, and also baggage masters on passenger trains, are privately expressing themselves as against the Full Crew—"excess man crew"—Law. They say it takes work from them.

Explaining how the yard men are affected, a train master of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Rrailroad said in a yard where thirty and forty crews are employed, it is necessary, in order to be prepared at all times to fill out a crew to the required number of men, to maintain a large extra list, this extra list being larger than otherwise required.

He adds that the union agreement with the men being that all extra brakemen will work first-in, first-out, prevents many of the older extra men from making the number of days per month that they would if the extra list could be kept lower. This condition also makes a conflict between the younger and older men and the working agreement between the company and its employes which provides for absolute seniority.

Baggage masters with runs on the Pennsylvania Railroad between here and New York state that the law has worked hardship on them by reason of the fact that extra brakemen had been forced upon the through trains, so obviating often the necessity of a baggage master by permitting baggage cars to go through locked. Prior to the enactment of the law, the baggage masters performed the duties of the front brakeman in addition to their own. They say that the effect has been to discontinue baggage masters wherever possible, as a way to offset the compulsory employment of the extra brakeman.

C. E. DELEGATES TO HAVE SPECIAL TRAIN

Will Attend World's and International Convention to Be Held in Chicago.

Tentative plans are being made for a special train for the New Jersey Christian Endeavor delegates to the World's and International Christian Endeavor conventions, which will be held simultaneously in Chicago, July 6-12, according to the announcement made by Arthur E. Warner, of Elizabeth, transportation manager for the State of New Jersey. While the definite announcement of the details of the trip is not yet ready, it is stated that the special train will leave Jersey City on July 6, arriving at Chicago Wednesday afternoon. The New Jersey delegation will unite with that of New York and Pennsylvania, the special cars of the latter being "picked up" by the convention special at some Pennsylvania point.

In connection with the Chicago trip there will be organized a special Christian Endeavor tour to the Pacific coast, which will leave Chicago on the evening of July 13. This trip will include the Grand Canyon, Redlands, Riverside, San Diego Exposition, Los Angeles, Catalina Islands, Santa Barbara, Del Monte, Big Trees, San Francisco and the Exposition, Salt Lake City, Royal Gorge, Colorado Springs, Cripple Creek, "Garden of the Gods" and Denver.

For those who are unable to go across the continent, arrangements are being made for several special trips at the conclusion of the convention.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Community use of public school buildings appears to have taken a firm hold in Plainfield, where five of these buildings are utilized for play guilds, gymnastics, orchestra concerts, choral society entertainments, local club meetings, popular lecture courses, dancing, etc., under the supervision of a public recreation committee of influential citizens and the city school superintendent. It has already been noticed that the dances in the school buildings are rapidly lessening the attendances at the dance halls, and that social intercourse is greatly increased by giving the children and the grown people pure enjoyment under proper control. To clubs and private individuals the buildings are furnished at prices covering only the actual expenses, but when entertainments are given by the school children the costs are met by the City Council and Board of Education. The idea of the larger use of the public school buildings is spreading widely. All the more because it is no longer a mere theory, but a practice known to be followed by beneficent results. The educational value of this larger use is commanding general and very positive recognition, and the wonder is that in past years the school buildings were empty for such a large proportion of the time.—Newark Evening News.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Local theatre-goers are in for a dramatic treat. A real one. Confirmation of this assertion is furnished in Manager Counihan's announcement that he has just closed a contract with Cohan and Harris which calls for the presentation of "On Trial," probably the greatest melodrama success that the American stage has harbored in the past twenty-five years, at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday, March 8.

"On Trial" is a marvelous play with an unusual plot. Much of its cleverness is due to its structural uniqueness and mechanical ingenuity. But it is its acting virility that makes the piece stand out in bold relief among recent stage productions.

"On Trial" is from the pen of Elmer L. Reizenstein. It is his first play effort, but judging by its reception in New York and Chicago, this author will have to be reckoned with as a future contributor to the contemporary stage.

Among the notable theatrical attractions that will invite attention at Plainfield Theatre during the present season is Margaret Anglin in a revival-production of Oscar Wilde's brilliant comedy drama "Lady Windemere's Fan," which will be the attraction Wednesday, March 10.

Miss Anglin has the right to rank as one of the really great women of the American stage. By her performance in such works as "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Mrs. Dane's Defense," "Zira," "The Great Divide," "Helena Ritchie" and a number of other modern plays, to say nothing of her success in the heroine of the comedies of Shakespeare, and in the works of the Greek masters as exemplified in her performances in the Greek theatre of the University of California, she has won a foremost place as an uncommonly gifted and versatile actress. Her talents have been tested in comedy, drama, and tragedy, and she has adorned all she has touched. By her varied experiences and training she has acquired a flexible method in adjusting her histrionic resources to whatever may be required of her in delineating character, expressing feeling, and setting forth the import of a stage situation that gives clearness, security and artistic finish to her performances. Her expressional means are of such tremendous scope that she ranges easily from scenes of farcical complexion to those of emotional and tragic significance. It is justly claimed for her that she is the most faultless reader of any actress before the public at present. Miss Anglin is now in the heyday of her charms, physical and mental strength and executive ability.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

In Allah Rajah, the mystic mind-reader, who opened a three days' engagement at Proctor's Theatre yesterday, the Front street playhouse has one of the most interesting novelties presented this season. Allah Rajah is a young woman who reads the future, gives a marvelous exhibition of telepathy, and proves that there really is such a thing as second sight. The readiness with which she names articles pointed out, gives their description and calls the names of people who test her power is akin to weirdness. Allah Rajah's male assistant, who mingles with the audience, injects subtle humor in the act in such a manner as to create roars of laughter while the mind-reading is being done. Yesterday's bill introduced another big number in the presentation of the dramatic playlet, "Behind the Footlights," an absorbing story of what sometimes takes place on the part of the stage that the spectators never see. It is admirably acted by a company of five people. Other numbers on the bill are: Bernard and Scarth, singing and talking comedians; Warren and Brockway, comedy musicians, and Schrode and Mulvey, comedy skit, featuring an eccentric knockabout originality by Mr. Schrode.

The big feature photoplay to be shown in connection with the vaudeville program next Monday and Tuesday will be Lew Fields, in his own production of "Old Dutch."

WANT TO ABOLISH ALMSHOUSE HERE

State Prison Reform and Aid Ass'n Would Establish One County Institution.

LEGISLATION IS SOUGHT

Board of Freeholders Settle Controversy With Ousted Small Board Officials by Paying Them $60 Each.

Elizabeth, March 5.—The Board of Freeholders settled its controversy with the officials of the ousted small Board of Freeholders yesterday by adopting a resolution providing for the payment of $60 each to three officials who have been seeking compensation, provided the ousted officials release the county from further obligation. The money was ordered paid to Michael Connell, courthouse custodian; Henry Coughlin, sealer of weights and measures, and James Daly, supervisor of roads. Judge Abe J. David, who was county collector, and John P. Owen, who was county attorney, have already been paid..

The State Prison Reform and Aid Association wrote the Board, through its Union county committee, asking that body to support legislation for the elimination of almshouses at Plainfield, Elizabeth and Rahway, and for the combining of all three into a county institution. The communication was received and placed on file.

Freeholder Teller, of Cranford, objected to a report of Freeholder Meisel about the work of the newly organized State Association of Boards of Freeholders of the Counties of New Jersey on the ground that the Union Board had not authorized the use of its name as a member. He was assured, after some debate, that the Board had not been bound by any action taken, and withdrew his objections to the receiving of the report. The State organization's purpose is to secure co-operation among the counties for road improvement work.

The Board was authorized by the board of managers of Bonnie Burn Sanatorium to bring action against the Morris County Freeholders to recover for the maintenance of Annie Franke at the institution.

Repairs to the bridge at the Westfield-Fanwood line, at a cost not to exceed $125, were authorized.

SOMERSET G. O. P. PLAN FOR A DOLLAR DINNER

The Republican County Committee has made arrangements for a dollar dinner to be held at Somerville, Saturday afternoon, March 27, at one o'clock. Prominent speakers are expected and it promises to be a remarkable occasion.

The purpose of this dinner is to get Republicans from all parts of the county together at a time when no campaign is taking their attention and when they can fully appreciate the social features.

JERSEY CENTRAL LAYS OFF FIVE HUNDRED MEN

Five hundred men employed in the locomotive repair shops in Elizabeth of the Central Railroad of New Jersey were put on short time this week, due to dullness in business and the open winter, which has reduced the wear and tear on rolling stock and made less necessity for repairs. The men, who have been working one-half day Saturdays, will remain idle all day. It is also reported that about forty firemen will be laid off commencing this week.

"There was no help for the reduction in hours," said C. E. Chambers, superintendent of motive power. "With business dull, there was little to haul, and with as little snow as there has been this winter, there were few repairs to make. Should business pick up, the men will be placed on longer hours."

Mr. Chambers was asked if the agitation over the full crew law had any effect on the shortening of the hours of the meen.

"The agitation has nothing to do with it," he said; "of course, the law itself has made business bad, and forced retrenchment wherever it could be made."

PEG O' MY HEART

By J. Hartley Manners

A Comedy of Youth Founded by Mr. Manners on His Great Play of the Same Title—Illustrations From Photographs of the Play

Copyright, 1913, by Dodd, Mead & Company

CHAPTER XXIV.

Enemies No Longer.

ETHEL sank down into a chair and covered her eyes.

"The wretch!" she wailed. "The wretch!"

"That's what he is," said Peg. "An' ye'd give yer life into his kapin' to blacken so that no dacent man or woman would ever look at ye or spake to ye again."

"No! That is over! That is over! I hate myself!" Ethel cried between her sobs. "Oh, how I hate myself!"

"Ethel acushla! Don't do that! Darlin', don't! He's not worth it. Kape yer life an' yer heart clane until the one man in all the wurrld comes to ye with his heart pure, too, an' then ye'll know what rale happiness means."

She knelt down beside the sobbing girl and took Ethel in her arms and tried to comfort her.

She helped her cousin up and supported her. Ethel was on the point of fainting, and her body was trembling with the convulsive force of her half suppressed sobs.

"Come to my room," said Peg in a whisper as she helped Ethel over to the stairs. "I'll watch by yer side till mornin'. Lane on me. That's right. Put yer weight on me."

She picked up the traveling bag, and together the two girls began to ascend the stairs.

Ethel gave a low choking moan.

"Don't, dear; ye'll wake up the house," cried Peg anxiously. "We've only a little way to go. Aisy now. Not a sound! S-sh, dear! Not a morsel o' noise!"

Just as the two girls reached the landing Peg in her anxiety stepped short, missed the top step, lost her footing and fell the entire length of the staircase into the room, smashing a tall china flower vase that was reposing on the post at the foot of the stairs.

The worst thing that could possibly have happened was just what did happen.

Peg instantly made up her mind that they were not going to know why Ethel was there.

Ethel must be saved and at any cost.

"Holy mother!" she cried. "The whole house'll be awake! Give me yer hat! Quick! An' yer cloak, an' yer bag!" Peg began quickly to put on Ethel's hat and cloak. Her own she flung out of sight beneath the great oak table.

"Now remember," she dictated, "ye came here because ye heard me. Ye weren't goin' out o' the house at all. Ye just heard me movin' about in here. Stick to that!"

The sound of voices in the distance broke in on them.

"They're comin'," said Peg anxiously.

"Take care, mater—keep back. Let me deal with them." And Alaric, with an electric flashlight, appeared at the head of the stairs, followed by his mother and the servant Jarvis.

He began a systematic search of the room until suddenly the reflector from the flashlight shone full on the two girls.

Ethel was sitting back fainting in a chair, clinging to Peg, who was standing beside her trembling.

"Ethel!" cried Alaric in amazement.

"Margaret!" said Mrs. Chichester in anger.

"Well, I mean to say!" ejaculated the astounded young man as he walked across to the switch and flooded the room with light.

"What does this mean?" asked Mrs. Chichester severely.

"Sure Ethel heard me here," answered Peg, "an' she came in, an' "—

"What were you doing here?"

"I was goin' out, an' Ethel heard me an' came in an' stopped me, an' "—

"Where were you going?" persisted the old lady.

"Just out—out there," and Peg pointed to the open windows.

Mrs. Chichester had been examining Peg minutely. She suddenly exclaimed:

"Why, that is Ethel's coat!"

"Sure it is," replied Peg, "an' this is her hat I've got, an' here's her bag." Peg was striving her utmost to divert Mrs. Chichester's attention from Ethel, who was in so tense and nervous a condition that it seemed as if she might faint at any moment. She thrust the dressing bag into the old lady's hand. Mrs. Chichester opened it immediately and found just inside it Ethel's jewel box. She took it out and held it up accusingly before Peg's eyes. "Her jewel box! Where did you get this?"

"I took it," said Peg promptly.

Mrs. Chichester opened the box. It was full. Every jewel that Ethel owned was in it.

"Her jewels—Ethel's jewels!"

"Yes, I took them too."

"You were stealing them?"

"No, I wasn't stealin' them. I just took 'em. I wanted—to wear them," answered Peg readily. Suddenly Peg saw a way of escape, and she jumped quickly at it. "I wanted to wear them at the dance."

"What dance?" demanded Mrs. Chichester.

"Over there—in the Assembly rooms—tonight. I went over there, an' I danced, an' when I came back I made a noise, an' Ethel heard me, an' she threw on some clothes, an' she came in here to see who it was, an' it was me, an' we were both goin' up to bed when I slipped an' fell down the stairs, an' some noisy thing fell down with me, an' that's all."

Alaric called out from the window:

"There's some one prowling in the garden. He's on the path. He's coming here. Don't be frightened."

Alaric pushed his electric light full into the visitor's face and fell back.

"Good heavens, Jerry!" he ejaculated, completely astonished. "I say, you know," he went on, "what is happening in this house tonight?"

Jerry came straight down to Mrs. Chichester.

"I saw your lights go up, and I came here on the run. I guessed something like this had happened. Don't be hard on your niece, Mrs. Chichester. The whole thing was entirely my fault. I asked her to go."

Mrs. Chichester looked at him stonily.

"You took my niece to a dance in spite of my absolute refusal to allow her to go?"

"He had nothin' to do with it," said Peg. "I took him to that dance."

Mrs. Chichester looked steadily at Jerry for a few moments before she spoke. When she did speak her voice was cold and hard and accusatory.

"Surely Sir Gerald Adair knows better than to take a girl of eighteen to a public ball without her relations' sanction?"

"I thought only of the pleasure it would give her," he answered. "Please accept my sincerest apologies."

Peg looked at him in wonder.

"Sir Gerald Adair! Are you Sir Gerald Adair?"

"Yes, Peg."

"So ye have a title, have ye?"

Peg felt somehow that she had been cheated. Why had he not told her? Why did he let her play and romp and joke and banter with him as though they had been children and equals?

"I am ashamed of you! You have disgraced us all!" cried Mrs. Chichester at Peg.

"Have I?" screamed Peg fiercely. "I've disgraced ye, have I? Well, none of you can tell me the truth. I'm goin' back to me father."

"Go back to your father, and glad we are to be rid of you!"

Before Peg could say anything further Ethel suddenly rose unsteadily and cried out:

"Wait, mother! She mustn't go. We have all been grossly unfair to her. It is I should go. Tonight she saved me from—she saved me from"— Suddenly Ethel reached the breaking point. She slipped from Peg's arms to the chair and on to the floor and lay quite still.

Peg knelt down beside her:

"She's fainted. Give her air!"

Peg loosened Ethel's dress and talked to her all the while, and Jerry and Alaric hurried out in different directions in quest of restoratives.

Mrs. Chichester came toward Ethel, thoroughly alarmed and upset.

"Go away from her!" cried Peg hysterically. "What good do ye think ye can do her? What do you know about her? You don't know anything about yer children. Ye don't know how to raise them. Ye don't know a thought in yer child's mind. Why don't ye sit down beside her sometimes an' find out what she thinks an' who she sees? Take her hand in yer own an' get her to open her soul to ye! Be a mother to her! A lot ye know about motherhood! I want to tell ye me father knows more about motherhood than any man in the wurrld."

In a few moments the two men returned with water and salts. After awhile Ethel opened her eyes and looked up at Peg. Peg, fearful lest she should begin to accuse herself again, helped her up the stairs to her own room and there she sat beside the unstrung, hysterical girl until she slept, her hand locked in both of Peg's.

One thing Peg had resolved—she would not spend another night in the Chichester home.

Her little heart was bruised and sore. The night had begun so happily; it had ended so wretchedly.

And to think the one person in whom she trusted had been just amusing himself with her, leading her to believe he was a farmer—"less than that," he had once said, and all the time he was a man of breeding and of birth and of title.

"I was goin' out and Ethel stopped me," said Peg.

Poor Peg felt so humiliated that she made up her mind she would never see him again.

In the morning she would go back to the one real affection of her life—to the man who never hurt or disappointed her—her father.

* * * * * * *

We will now leave Peg for awhile and return to one who claimed so much of the reader's attention in the early pages of his history—O'Connell.

It had not been a happy month for him.

He felt the separation from Peg keenly. At first he was almost inconsolable.

The days passed slowly until Peg's first letter came. It contained the news of Kingsnorth's death—Peg's entrance into the Chichester family, her discontent, her longing to be back once more in New York. This was followed by more letters, all more or less in the same key. Finally he wrote urging her to give it all up and come back to him. He would not have his little daughter tortured for all the advantages those people could give her. Then her letters took on a different aspect. They contained a curious half note of happiness in them. No more mention of returning. On the contrary, Peg appeared to be making the best of the conditions in which she was placed.

These later letters set O'Connell wondering. Had the great message of life come to his little Peg?

Although he always felt it would come some day, now that it seemed almost a very real possibility he dreaded it. There were so few natures would understand her.

That Peg was developing her character and her nature during those few weeks was clear to O'Connell. The whole tone of her letters had changed. But no word of hers gave him any clew to the real state of her feelings until one day he received a letter almost entirely composed of descriptions of the appearance, mode of speech, method of thought and expression of one Jerry. The description of the man appealed to him, he apparently having so many things in common with the mysterious person who had so vividly impressed himself on Peg. Apparently Peg was half trying to improve herself. There was a distinct note of seriousness about the last letter.

He lived entirely alone in the same rooms he had with Peg when she was summoned abroad.

He was preparing, in his spare time, a history of the Irish movement from twenty years before down to the present day. It was fascinating work for him, embodying as it did all he had ever felt and thought or done for the "great cause."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

The icy blast struck Dick Morton, as he swung off from the car, penetrating his heavy overcoat as if it had been of summer weight. The suburban district where he lived was beautiful in summer with its trees, and the stroll from the city limits through the vacant lots aflame with bloom or autumn coloring was a very different matter from this walk in the teeth of the north wind. This was a stint of dogged endurance, made with bowed head and tightly buttoned coat, his footsteps creaking on the snow as he ran. The lights of his cottage shone out across the frozen waste and the rush of warm air struck him gratefully as he opened the door.

"Hello, Dick!" Nell put her face, flushed with cooking, through the kitchen door. "I can't leave my dinner now. It's most ready."

Dick took off his overcoat and went on to the kitchen, and Nell floured his coat as she gave him a welcoming kiss. He was unusually silent at dinner, and Nell watched him anxiously. She knew he had business worries and she thought he looked pale and careworn. There were dark circles under his eyes.

"You are very quiet tonight, dear," she finally said.

He smiled. "I am afraid I am not a good dissembler. The fact is, dear, things are looking pretty black with us just now. I had a talk with the manager today. They laid off half their force, you know, and now they are planning to shorten the hours to about half time. He said, 'I hate to tell you, Morton, but I think you had better have your eyes open for another position. I am afraid we shall have to close down. This six months' injunction has lost us the bulk of our customers, no matter how the suit ends.'"

Nell was silent for a time, then said, "Isn't this the wrong time of year to get a position?"

"Well, perhaps. I don't know that there is any particular time of year when it would be easy. I shall get a list of all the concerns doing our line of work and write to them. I must find something. I shall offer the house for sale."

Dick felt the tingling of the "bitter wine of necessity" in his veins.

"Dear little home, how we love it for all the happy times we have had in it," said Nell, softly.

"The beautiful part of that is, that we can make a home wherever we decide on a home." Dick smiled across the table.

"That's so; it is love that makes a home, not the four walls of a house. We have each other and our health, so we have everything to be thankful for." Nell rose and going round to Dick's chair laid her cheek against his forehead.

"It will be hard for you to leave your people and all your girlhood friends, as well as the little home you have taken such pride in," began Dick.

"You mustn't talk about it that way or you will utterly unnerve me. I do not want to think about it. Other girls go away from their home town when they are married and they get along all right. I can do what other girls can do and if we can succeed—the place will not matter much." Nell smiled bravely into his tired eyes.

"Thank you for helping me, little wife, for these are hard times for both of us," he answered.

REFRESHMENTS FOR PARTIES

Sponge Sandwich—This is particularly nice for an evening party where only light refreshments are wanted. Place a slice of strawberry ice cream, cut from a brick, between two thin slices of angel or other white cake. Ornament top with whipped cream, sweetened, flavored with maraschino syrup, and pressed through a pastry tube to form a fancy rosette. In the center put a single maraschino cherry.

Substitute for Cream (to be eaten on fruit)—Heat one cup sweet milk until boiling. Beat together whites of two eggs, one tablespoon white sugar and piece of butter size of hazelnut; now add half cup cold milk mixed with one teaspoon cornstarch. Stir well together until smooth, gradually pour in the cupful of hot milk and cook over hot water until it thickens—it must not boil, and should be the consistency of fresh milk. Use when cold.

Charlotte Russe—Three dozen lady fingers, one quart heavy cream, one tablespoon plain gelatin, one cup pulverized sugar, put one tablespoon gelatin in one-half cup milk, let stand on back of stove until melted. Divide cream in four parts to whip, add sugar and gelatin and a teaspoon of vanilla. Line a cup with lady fingers, using six halves; cut piece about an inch square for bottom of cup. Fill up cup with cream, put in cool place for a few hours. When ready to serve turn out on plates. This amount will serve twelve persons. This makes a very dainty dessert.

Martha Washington Loaf Cake—One cup half butter and half lard; 1½ cups sugar, three eggs, one pint flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one cup dried stoned cherries, one-half cup milk, one teaspoon vanilla extract. Rub butter and sugar to white, light cream; add one egg at a time, beating three minutes after each addition. Sift flour and powder together, add to butter and so forth, with cherries, cream and vanilla extract. Bake in a loaf in a tin forty minutes in moderate, steady oven. Watch carefully; if getting too brown, protect with paper. Frosting for above cake: One-half pound confectionery sugar mixed with a few drops of strawberry extract; mix. This makes it red. When cake is cold, spread this all around.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Pig in a Blanket (new)—An inexpensive beef roast, serving one meal to four, at a cost of about twenty-eight or thirty cents. Get one pound round steak and five cents' worth fresh pork (can use salt pork if preferred). Place beef on breadboard, sprinkle with flour, pound flour in well with wooden potato masher. Flour again and pound in; add a little salt if fresh pork is to be used. Spread over steak a turkey filling, then place right down the center the strip of pork. Roll all tighty together, tying cord around it about every inch; fasten ends of roll in tight with metal skewer. Making a little rolled roast, cook in oven same as beef roast, adding a little hot water from time to time, when roast can be rolled over. Use covered pan. Takes about hour and a half to cook. A good filling for above: Half loaf stale bread (crumbled), half onion chopped, salt and pepper, several pinches "marjoram" (or other seasoning). Can add bits of butter, although pork is fat and moist enough.

Chicken Pie—One large or two small chickens; cut and stew until meat will slip off bones. Leave out skin and bones. Put meat in baking dish. Take three tablespoons melted butter (if chicken is fat, butter is not needed), three tablespoons flour, pepper, salt, rub all together. To this add three cups warm stock, left from chicken, cook to a smooth sause and add one cup milk or cream, pour over chicken meat and set in oven till crust is made. Crust: Two cups flour, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, two tablespoons melted butter, one egg beaten light, one cup milk. Stir and pour

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Can You Guess It?

And did you guess the TIGER—that great ferocious beast?
All right; then here's another one to try,
The animal I have in mind looks something like a dog,
And everyone agrees that it is sly.

Its family is a large one, and they live in many lands;
You've seen them roundabout here, I dare say;
Some members of the family have fur of lovely white,
And some of them have black, or red, or gray.

It has a long and bushy tail, that's sometimes called a "brush";
It has four feet, and pointed ears and nose;
Its food is birds and berries and tiny quadrupeds
(You know what quadrupeds are, I suppose).

Sometimes you'll find it living in burrows underground;
Sometimes it lives in caverns formed of rocks,
And always it is crafty and as sly as it can be,
You've heard the saying, "Cunning as a F - -.

Well, well, I nearly told you this crafty creature's name—
I'm sure the guess you make will be correct;
If you are going to guess them so quickly every day,
I'll have to make them harder, I expect.

Library Notes.

Furnished by the Directors of Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room.

Among the books recently added by the library are Col. Roosevelt's description of his journey through the Brazilian wilderness; a description of South and Central American trade conditions as they are today by A. H. Verrill, which should be of interest in view of the efforts now being made by United States merchants to secure additional trade with these countries; and Treitschke's Doctrine of German Destiny and International Relations.

Among the new fiction works are books by Wells, Wilkins and Lucas, and two new books by Leblanc in which the adventures of the noted Arsene Lupin are continued.

Among the books on the war, perhaps none has been as popular as Prof. Cramb's "Germany and England." This has just gone into its one hundred and twentieth thousand.

The demand for Booth Tarkington's new book, "The Turmoil," was so great that a second edition was printed before the book was actually put out on sale.

For those who are interested in birds and who are looking forward to the advent of the song sparrow and the robin within the next week or so, the following list of books contained in the library upon the subject of birds, may be of interest.

Birds of the U. S. East of the Rocky Mountains, A. C. Apgar; Bird Life, F. M. Chapman; Birds of Eastern North America, F. M. Chapman; Bird Neighbors, N. B. Doubleday; Birds That Hunt and Are Hunted, N. B. Doubleday; Bird Book, F. H. Eckstorm; Our Common Birds and How to Know Them, J. B. Grant; Birdways, O. T. Miller; In Nesting Time, O. T. Miller; Little Brothers of the Air, O. T. Miller; Upon the Tree-tops, O. T. Miller; Ornithology of Eastern North America (2 v.), T. Nutall; Bird Studies, W. E. D. Scott; Birdcraft, M. O. Wright.

In a world without books, life would be intolerable.

In a world full of books, to live without books is to exist with the animals.

Banish books from the world and civilization would have to begin again almost from where it started.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

ASKS PENSIONERS FOR DATA ON THEIR DOMESTIC STATUS

Washington, March 5.—The commissioner of pensions has prepared a circular letter which will be sent to every male pensioner in New Jersey and elsewhere, aggregating about 450,000, requesting information as to the domestic status of each.

The letter contains inquiries as to the date and place of the soldier's birth and his residence at the date of enlistment; his wife's full name and her maiden name; date and place of marriage, and as to whether there is any public record of such marriage.

If either the soldier or his wife was previously married he is requested to furnish full information in regard to such former marriages and also as to the names and dates of birth of all children.

These inquiries are made wholly in the interest of the soldier and his family, and it is believed the information thus to be gained will at some future date prove of value to the widow or children.

A somewhat similar circular letter was sent to pensioners in 1898, and the replies have already proved to be valuable, but inasmuch as more than sixteen years have elapsed since that date, during which, of course, many changes may have taken place in each family, and because those circulars were not sufficiently definite to bring out all the material facts, it was thought best to make this request for full information.

GERMAN LOSS AT GRODNO GREAT

Prisoners Tell Russians That Two-thirds of Army Has Been Wiped Out.

CHAMPAGNE FIGHT HOT

Zeppelin 8 Destroyed in Landing After Successful Flight in Flanders—Dardanelles Now One-Third Cleared of Mines.

Petrograd (via London), Mar. 6.—German prisoners captured in the vicinity of Grodno admit that the army which advanced on the Niemen from East Prussia has lost two thirds of its numbers in killed, wounded and prisoners. Further advances have been made in the last two days by the Russians along the entire line north and east of Ossowlietz.

Paris, Mar. 6.—According to the official statement issued this afternoon violent night attacks by German troops northwest of Beausejour, in an attempt to halt the French advance in Champagne, resulted in desperate fighting. The statement says that the attacks were repulsed, and also claims that French positions in the region of Perthes have been maintained.

In Belgium, in the region of Nieuport and Ypres, fighting on Friday consisted wholly of artillery engagements, while farther south there were intermittent cannonades between the Lys and the Aisne. The statement adds that the heavy artillery fire of the French batteries reached Vieville en Haye, northwest of Pont Mousson causing a panic among the German soldiers, who abandoned a farm on which they had kept up their positions, fleeing to a wood near the forest of Porros. Later German forces attempted to attack French advanced positions in that region, but their efforts were wholly unsuccessful.

Amsterdam, Mar. 6.—After a successful reconnaisance over the British lines in West Flanders, Zeppelin Eight collided with trees while landing in the darkness near Tirlemont last night, says a despatch to the Handlesblad from Brussels. The dirigible was so damaged that it had to be dismembered into sections.

All motor 'bus traffic on the streets of Berlin has been stopped by order of the Imperial authorities, according to a message from the German capital. This was done to conserve the gasoline supply.

Buchares (via Paris), Mar. 6.—A despatch from Marmoritza, on the Roumanian side of the Bukowina frontier, announces that the Austrian forces evacuated the line from Pourin to Czernowitz, leaving the latter city only in the hands of a small rear guard which is already falling back on the main army in the direction of Franzenthal, south of the Carpathians.

Paris, Mar. 6.—The Dardanelles now has been cleared of mines as far as Chanak Kalesi, about a third of the distance through the Straits, says a Tenedos dispatch to the "Petit Parisien," dated March 5. The mine workers are working under the protection of the allied warships, which are keeping up a steady bombardment of the forts on the European side.

Gothenburg, Sweden, Mar. 6.—Three German cargo steamers arrived this morning at Christiania flying the German flag. They passed through the sound between Denmark and Sweden flying the Norwegian flag and afterwards changing to the Swedish colors.

Tokio, Mar. 6.—The pilot and two officers were drowned when a navy seaplane fell today at Yokosuka. The seaplane and its crew was attached to the naval station at that place.

PATIENT TAKES TO FLIGHT.

Louis Tuzo, of Scotch Plains, who has been at Muhlenberg Hosital with an attack of aphasia, escaped from the institution last night by leaping from a ward window. He was caught by one of the attaches before getting off the grounds. Tuzo has been rational only part of the time since he became afflicted and has to be watched constantly. His condition, however, has somewhat improved since he was first taken to Muhlenberg.

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP WANTS MACADAM

Discussion Aroused Over Proposed Improvement to Westfield Avenue.

The question of repairing Westfield road and Westfield avenue was considered at a meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee, yesterday. The road is not macadamized and the township does not feel that it should stand the whole expense claiming it is the boundary line between the township and borough. The borough claims that the boundary line runs west of the road putting the thoroughfares in the township. W. L. Hetfield, Jr., counsel for the township, advised that the borough is responsible for the upkeep of the road.

Freeholder Hall and a representative of the P. S. C. were present at the meeting in the interest of Westfield avenue matter and a meeting will be held today to govern the situation. The Freeholders will repair the drainage at Westfield and Park avenues, while efforts will be made to have the company repair the roadbed between the rails.

The Committee's attention was called to the law governing the appointment of a district fire warden. The matter was laid over. Herman Frowery, of the Scotch Plains Hotel, complained that Plainfield and other liquor concerns violated the law by peddling liquor in the township. No action was taken. The Township Committee will take up the petition from the Westfield Golf Club for a hydrant near the clubhouse with the water company.

WASHINGTON AMUSEMENT COMPANY LEASES ASTOR

Under the management of the Washington Amusement Company, the Astor Theatre, in West Front street, will be opened to the public next week. The new corporation, having leased the place from the local owners, Dreier and Abrams, will take possession at once and some preliminary matters will be completed during the first part of the week, the first shows being given Wednesday or Thursday.

The new proprietors will make a specialty of the Paramount feature films, an attractive program being arranged for each afternoon and evening. The company runs picture houses under the title of the United States Theatres, and has been unusually successful in promoting scenic features. At the present time it owns show houses in Elizabeth, Orange, Hoboken and Jersey City.

MOTHERS' ASS'N HOLDS INTERESTING MEETING

An interesting meeting of the Plainfield Association of Mothers was held at the home of Mrs. William M. Sandford, at 333 East Seventh street, yesterday afternoon. Considerable time was devoted to a discussion of the school luncheons, and the new department of "Child Hygiene," which was in charge of Dr. Clara Krans.

Mrs. J. Hervey Doane read a paper entitled, "A Mother's Message to Mothers," which was timely and full of helpful suggestions. Three new members were elected. The association discussed plans for extending the school luncheons to the Whittier, Stillman and Franklin Schools and something definite will be decided upon in the near future.

REPORT PROGRESS IN PREPARING TAX BUDGET

Considerable progress was made in the way of preparing the tax budget at the meeting of the Councilmanic finance committee last night. Mayor Leighton Calkins, President George S. Clay of the Common Council, and Archibald Cox, president of the Board of Education, met with the committee and discussed various details concerning the budget.

A. B. Jones and Chaplain L. Riley, representing the Public Recreation Commission, called on the committee and made known its request for the 1915 appropriation going over this work somewhat in detail. Mayor Calkins, as previously stated, has requested a meeting of the Council Monday night when he will present a special message outlining his plans for the city survey.

DISCUSS SEWER RIGHTS OF WAY

Borough Council Considers Two Pieces of Ground Included in Map.

INSTALL NEW TAPPERS

Reports From Department Heads—Contract With Muhlenberg Hospital Executed—Joint Sewerage Bills Paid.

Councilman Ulysess G. Tingley, chairman of the sewer committee, presented a report to the Borough Council at its March meeting, last night, dealing with the rights-of-way through the Truitt property in West End avenue and the Galloway property in Westervelt avenue. The latter right-of-way, extending from a point on Codington avenue to Westervelt avenue through the Galloway property, cuts through and will cause considerable damage to the latter estate in the opinion of the committee. Councilmen Tingley and Stahl visited the owner during the week and secured a tentative estimate from him. Galloway offered to grant the borough permission to extend the right-of-way through his premises for a consideration of $150 and these figures were referred to Lindabury, Lepue & Faulkes. It is probable that it will be accepted inasmuch as it is considered a reasonable offer and met with the approval of the Council.

The matter of establishing a right-of-way through the Truitt property has also been referred to the borough's attorneys. It was stated that it will be necessary to search the title of the latter property before arriving at any definite conclusion.

The Council voted to grant the request of the residents of Verdon street, who, at the February meeting made application for the extension of sewer service along that thoroughfare. A filing cabinet, the cost of which is placed at a maximum figure of $50, was authorized for installation in the office of Borough Clerk George F. Brown. This will be used for filing all borough documents. An advance of $300 was made to the Board of Health on the health account and a similar advance was made to Overseer-of-the-Poor Fred Becker on the poor account. Bills amounting to $1,864.89, incurred during the month of February, were ordered paid.

During the month the borough lighting system entailed an expenditure of $480.42; the expenses of the police department amounted to $451.61; the fire department cost $272.45 for maintenance, and the street committee spent $293.60.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the New York Telephone Company to install two fire tappers in houses located at 33 Grandview avenue and 116 Jackson avenue, respectively.

The annual contract entered into by the borough with Muhlenberg Hospital was reported executed for 1915. Despite the fact that proposals had been advertised for the furnishing of cracked stone to the municipality, no bids were received last night. During the month twenty-six arrests were made by the borough police and $52 were collected in fines, according to Chief Weiss' statistics. The borough's share of the expenses incurred by the Joint Sewer Commission since the last meeting, amounting to $4,113.17, was ordered paid.

SUPPLYING SMOKES FOR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

Mrs. George Megrew, of 963 Central avenue, who is the local representative of the S. S. S., or "Smokes for Soldiers and Sailors," of the allied forces in the European war, urges the public to send contributions to her for the cause. Any amount from five cents up will be received and sent to the committee in London.

This organization was started last September by a number of prominent English people and has been doing a great work in alleviating the sufferings of the wounded soldiers, who, the nurses say, always ask for a cigarette after coming to the hospitals. The men say it helps them through the pain of their dressings and the period of convalescence.

RELIEF FUND BRANCH TO RETAIN PRESENT NAME

The members of the New Jersey Branch of the Prince of Wales Relief Fund held a business and social meeting at the "Porcelain House," the home of Mrs. S. S. Carvalho, on West Eighth street, yesterday afternoon. One of the principal matters considered was the proposition to change the name of the organization, but it was decided after a discussion not to do so. A large number of articles were received during the afternoon for shipment to the allied headquarters in Europe. Piano selections were given by Miss Audrey Eaton.

Mrs. Charles D. Freeman, of Colonia, was the hostess of yesterday's gathering, and Mrs. Rufus Delafield will be the hostess at the next meeting.

MISS MARGARET EWART IS ELECTED PRESIDENT

The Sigma Gamma Kappa Club of the North Plainfield High School, held its bi-annual election of officers at the Y. W. C. A., yesterday afternoon. Miss Margaret Ewart, of the junior class, was elected president and the other officers were Elsie Debele, vice-president; May Hoagland, secretary, and Margaret Brizzie, treasurer. The executive committee, which consists of the officers and one member from each class, was named. The non-officers who were chosen are the Misses Margaret Currin, senior class; Helen Yates, junior class; Dorothy Lee, sophomore class, and Elsie Kurzhal, freshmen class.

During the meeting two very interesting talks were given by Mrs. Dwight Potter, of California, and Mrs. Frederick Goddard, of this city. The society decided to give a reception to the parents in the Y. W. C. A. rooms during April and a dance will also be held in the spring.

TABLEAUX VIVANTS PLEASE AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

The tableaux vivants presentation of the "Cradle Songs of Many Nations," as given in the Congregational church parish house, yesterday afternoon and last night, was enjoyed by large and enthusiastic audiences. Thirteen countries were represented with America divided in three parts, showing the American mother, the colored mammy and the Indian squaw. Each number was appropriately staged, the American, English and Japanese being especially pretty.

The tableaux were given under the auspices of the Woman's Association of the church and the proceeds will be devoted to its funds. Mrs. B. T. Barnes presided at the piano during the evening and James Tanham was violinist.

TO SING "STABAT MATER."

There will be a communion service at the Crescent Avenue church tomorrow morning and in the afternoon, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie will preach the second in the series of sermons on "The Beatitudes," the topic being "Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted." The monthly musical service will be held at that hour when Rossini's "Stabat Mater" will be given by the quartet choir, comprised of Miss Lillian Vernon Watt, soprano; Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; Paul C. Haskell, tenor, and Dr. Hugh Schussler, bass.

URGES A PROMPT SURVEY OF CITY

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS

Declares That People Are in No Mood to Bear Additional Tax Burdens Nor Tolerate Inadequate School Accommodations.

Charles S. Sminck, of East Front street, who has made a thorough study of local conditions, especially those pertaining to increased school facilities for the city, has the following to say on this timely subject which is being agitated by the East End Civil Association:

"The public schools of Plainfield have been of great benefit to all the people. The standard is high. Plainfield schools are probably the equal of any in the United States. That this statement can be made without fear of successful contradiction is a good thing for Plainfield, its prosperity, and its future. In this connection praise is due W. S. Tyler, for the time and attention devoted to the progress of education while a member of the school board, also the city is to be congratulated in having a highly efficient man like Archibald Cox, president of the Board of Education.

"Plainfield should be proud of the high school, the splendid corps of teachers, the range of instruction the efficiency, the gymnasium and the swimming pool. The swimming pool is a valuable addition especially to an inland place like Plainfield. The art of knowing how to swim and to save life is a priceless possession. It is liable to be called to urgent use without an instant's warning, and Plainfield graduates will make a good record.

"Serious complaints are being made to the Board of Education, particularly from the east end of the city, that school accommodations are lacking for children of tender years. It is said by those in a position to know that these complaints are just and not debatable. If this is true are we not confronted with a condition not a theory?

"The people of the east end are reasonable. A hundred thousand dollar building is not demanded. The request is made to provide for the small children in an adequate and economical manner. It is felt that the people of the city will sustain the east end because its position is supported by all the elements of justice.

"Our able and distinguished Mayor has made the excellent suggestion that a survey be made of the city departments with a view to greater efficiency and more economy. Let a prompt survey be made of the educational field together with an analysis of the financial resources of the city. Let it be quickly determined whether it is or it is not possible to provide suitable buildings for small children. If it is not possible, then we are brought face to face with an evil and a weakness in our educational administration. What shall be done to remedy the situation? As previously stated, I stand as a warm supporter and an enthusiastic advocate of the high school. In this connection a tribute is in order to the public school teachers of the city who work hard and earn their money. As a taxpayer I am willing to "go the limit" to provide for advanced education because it is a good thing for Plainfield. However, if it is demanded by the economy of the situation would it not be better to close up some of the departments in the high school and use the money thus saved to provide for children of young and tender years, as represented by the serious condition in the east end? Does not this idea come within the keystone of the arch of free public schools as provided for in the constitution of the State?

"It is to be hoped that it will never be necessary to take any action along the line suggested. That ample funds will be provided for the high school and also the little folks.

"It has been stated that the expenditures of the government, State, county and city run close to a maximum of general prosperity, and can only be sustained on that basis. If that is so, Mayor Calkins' suggested survey is decidedly in order for the people are in no mood at this time to bear any additional burdens of taxation or to tolerate inadequate school accommodations for little children."

WANT BETTER LIGHT FOR BOROUGH STREET

Merchants Along Main Business Thoroughfare Petition Council.

Somerset street business men, headed by Louis Weiss, the druggist, presented a petition to the Borough Council at its March meeting last night requesting that body to install new and better lighting facilities along that thoroughfare from the bridge that divides it from Plainfield, to Manning avenue. It was pointed out in the petition, which has many endorsers, that lights throwing four-and-a-half times as much light as those now in use could be installed for about double the present item of cost to the municipality. The request, while it apparently met with the approbation of a majority of the members of the Council, was referred to the lighting committee and will be investigated prior to the April session when final action will be taken.

Somerset street is the borough's only business thoroughfare of any consequence and there has been agitation on foot for better lighting for some time. The petitioners are representative business men, a majority of whom have been established on that street for many years. Frequent individual attempts have been launched to gain better illumination but this is the first united effort of the merchants and property owners.

Despite the fact that stores line both sides of the street the lights are so bad that four standing within a radius of 150 feet at the intersection of Chatham street fail to throw the amount of illumination directed from one globe used on this side of the brook. The petitioners make a demand for 350 candle-power lamps instead of the present twenty-five candle-power.

Mr. Weiss appeared before the Council and presented the claim, at the same time commenting on the condition of the lighting system and expressing the sentiments of his coworkers.

SENATOR MARTINE SENDS $40 FOR CHILDREN'S HOME

In response to an appeal made through the columns of the Daily Press, on Thursday night, United States Senator James E. Martine has sent a check for $40 to be forwarded to the managers of the Children's Home. As was stated in the article, the Home has seldom had to make an appeal for funds, but this year, because of the large number of children in the care of the organization, and the general depression has made serious inroads in the normal income. Any other person wishing to make contributions to this worthy cause may send them to the Daily Press, and they will be promptly forwarded to the proper authorities.

NO PLAY TO BE GIVEN BY COMEDY CLUB THIS YEAR

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, has been compelled by illness to withdraw from the plays which it was planned to give on March 22 at the Plainfield Theatre for the Belgian cause. As originally planned, Mr. Saunders was to produce two plays under his general supervision, in the name of the Comedy Club of Plainfield, the latter organization feeling that because of the general depression it would be unwise for them to undertake a play, following their annual custom. When it was learned that Mr. Saunders was unable to proceed with the work, a special meeting of the executive committee of the Comedy Club was called last night. At that time the committee decided that because of conditions this year, the club, as an organization, would not give a play.

MASS MEETING TO BE HELD MARCH 11

Arrangements have been completed for the mass meeting for women to be held in the First Baptist church on Thursday night, March 11, under the auspices of the Bible class of which Mrs. Louis Matlack is the teacher. It was expected that Mrs. Sunday, wife of "Billy" Sunday, would speak at this meeting, but she will be unable to come here. Miss Emily March will take her place and there is a possibility that Miss Margaret Slattery may also speak. There will be special music. TOURAINE AFIRE 700 MILES AT SEA

Passengers and Crew Reported to Have Been Taken Off by Other Vessels.

FIRE CAUSE UNKNOWN

Belfast, Ireland, Mar. 6.—According to marine advices received here all the passengers and crew of the French Liner LaTouraine, which was afire at sea, have been taken off the vessel.

London, Mar. 6.—Lloyd's station at Valentia, Ireland, received a wireless despatch today that the steamer LaTouraine was afire. The message said that the steamers Rotterdam, Swanmore, Cornishman, Arabic and others had gone to the assistance of LaTouraine.

New York, Mar. 6.—Wireless messages received here early today stated that the steamship LaTouraine, of the French line was afire at latitude 48.06 north, and longitude 20.14 west. Five steamers were reported to have gone to her assistance. The LaTouraine sailed from this port last Saturday afternoon, with a small passenger list, but a large cargo of freight aboard. She was due to arrive at Havre on Monday or Tuesday of next week. There was 38 cabin passengers and 48 in the steerage. Captain Caussin was in command and the wireless operators were Vidamment and Sagot.

The position of the vessel given in the wireless message was about 1,200 miles from Havre and about 700 miles off the Irish coast. The steamer has a crew of about 200. She carried no ammunition and no cotton, but had a cargo of about 1,200 tons of foodstuffs and general merchandise. Most of the cabin passengers were doctors and nurses from the French hospital here.

August Cauchois, general agent of the French line, said, "We have no word on the reported fire on the LaTouraine, except that which has been transmitted to us by the press. We have sent a cable to Paris, giving them the information we have received here. The LaTouraine carried no explosives."

The manifest of the vessel shows that she carried 1,000 cases of ammunition, consisting of cartridges for rapid fire guns, besides large quantities of food supplies, blankets, automatic revolvers and rapid fire guns. Mr. Cauchois said that the passenger steamers of the French line do not carry explosives, and that cartridges are not under the heading of explosives as prohibited by law. There are special steamers of the line for the purpose of carrying explosives, he explained, and these do not carry passengers.

Twenty-two members of the New Market Grange were entertained by M. B. Kirch, of Greenbrook, last evening. The trip to and from the Kirch home was made in the Bennett auto truck. The evening was pleasantly spent with games and cards. Refreshments were served.

VALUABLE PIN LOST.

Frank O. Nelson, of Piscataway, lost a valuable scarf pin this morning. Mr. Nelson thinks that he must have lost it at the corner of North and Prospect avenues, Dunellen, as after his son, Albert, had driven him over from his farm he pulled a muffler from around his neck and placed it on the seat of the wagon. Mr. Nelson is hoping that the pin clung to the muffler, but he considers the chances of it having done so very remote. The pin is of gold and has a four-leaf clover centered with a pearl.

Stylish SR Reliable

We never ask a man to buy HERE before looking THERE.

That's a pretty decent attitude, don't you think so?

Getting a man in your store and trying to sell him before he's had a chance to "look around" is like a judge giving a decision after hearing but one side of the case.

AND THIS IS WHY WE DO IT:

Good things look better when compared to poorer ones. How majestic a Packard car looks alongside of a cheap "sewing machine on four wheels."

Our clothes never look so fine as when a man compares them with the usual run of stuff offered nowadays.

And as for the price—

$7.75, $10.45, $13.75, $16.45 Why, they make a man's mouth open so wide in wonderment that he "keeps still" for fear that I've made an error in pricing. Our Removal Clearance Sale is the reason.

The John Wanamaker Store

Subway to Astor Place — Broadway at Ninth, New York

The Economies in the March Sale of Housewares

Of course, quality first. But the quality of these housewares being Wanamaker quality, the low prices make the whole sale of double interest.

For years the Wanamaker Housewares Store has been testing and trying the household utensils of the world. After they have proven their quality, their price is then considered.

Without the great purchasing power of two stores (our Philadelphia as well as our New York store) these housewares would be much higher than they are all the year 'round.

The Wanamaker Housewares Store has earned the enviable reputation of being

First in Quality and Last in Price

And now — during the March Housewares Sale — the prices of household utensils are from 10 to 50 per cent. lower than the usual low prices—and the self-same "quality - first" merchandise which characterize the whole store.

As an example of the savings to be had, we give as follows the average reductions on the various groups of household utensils:

Average Percentage of Reduction
Refrigerators	33⅓ Per Cent
Wooden Ware	15 Per Cent
Bathroom Fixtures	25 Per Cent
Chafing Dishes	25 Per Cent
Percolators	25 Per Cent
Iron Kitchen Utensils	35 Per Cent
Galvanised Ironware	15 Per Cent
Brushes	20 Per Cent
Aluminum Ware	25 Per Cent

Consider for a moment what articles these classes of housewares you need, and then bear in mind that after March 31, the present savings will pass.

Added to the Sale of Publishers Overstocks

When the sale began, a few weeks ago, we had a remarkably varied collection of titles.

Every one was desirable. Every book and set was an original edition—not a cheap, sale imitation.

The public instantly recognized the unusualness of this opportunity, for the books melted away rapidly.

But we have just secured more books from the same and a number of other well-known publishers.

This addition makes the sale.

Practically a New Sale

At 50 to 80 per Cent. Below Publication Prices

The additional titles are too numerous to list here.

We give below the added standard sets merely as an example of the remarkable chances every one who wants books will find here.

The new titles include illustrated and fine editions, history and biography, novels, juvenile books, and many of a miscellaneous character.

If you want books, come and see this renewed sale on Monday.

SUCCESSFUL YEAR OF MISSION SOCIETY

Crescent Avenue Church Women Elect and Hear Interesting Address.

A year of personal activity, growing membership, larger attendance, and much to look forward to in the coming year, were marked features of the annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, which was held in the church parlors yesterday afternoon. After the devotional exercises which were in charge of Mrs. William E. Honeyman, with Mrs. Charles H. Hall presiding at the piano, Mrs. Israel C. Pierson, president of the society, took the chair to conduct the routine business of the afternoon.

Encouraging reports of the various officers were submitted. Mrs. William W. Meyers, treasurer, reported receipts of $896.396; disbursements of $888.62; with a balance on hand of $8.37. Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, the secretary, read the thirty-third annual report, showing the fine progress of the organization during the past perplexing year. The report of the secretary of literature showed a loss in subscriptions over last year and the members were urged to increase the subscriptions.

Mrs. H. H. Halloway, chairman of the nominating committee, read the nominations for this year, which were elected as follows: President, Mrs. Israel C. Pierson; vice-presidents, Mrs. William E. Honeyman, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore; secretary, Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch; secretary of literature, Mrs. Frederick Conlin; treasurer, Mrs. William W. Meyers.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, Mrs. Dwight W. Potter, student secretary of the Woman's Board for Home and Foreign Missions, gave a short and very interesting talk on her experiences in the mission field. Mrs. Potter's work was to meet the college girls and bring them in a closer touch with the work of their church at home. Her method of coming in contact with these girls was through afternoon teas and personal calls, and she said it was wonderful to see the longing of these young women away from home for some knowledge of the work of the Presbyterian church. At Smith, Holyoke, Bryn Mawr and other colleges, Mrs. Potter started circles where the girls got together to discuss their religion each day. An urgent appeal was made to the women of the missionary societies to give the college girl a chance to do something when they return home and get her interested in missionary work. Mrs. Potter concluded her address by telling of the mission schools in New Mexico and Arizona, where a great work is being done by the girls leading the missions. They are the uncomplaining co-workers of those good Indians, teaching them the work of Christ and helping them in all their difficulties.

Following the address tea was served to the members of the society. Mrs. Roger F. Murray and Mrs. Albert Winter poured tea while the Misses Dorothy Parvin, Dorothy Leal, Margaret Miller, Mary Rushmore and Juliet VanVliet served.

A LOOK AHEAD IN MERCHANDISING.

The high cost of selling goods is one of the causes which contribute to the high cost of living. An analysis of selling expenses reveals two prominent reasons why it now costs more to market goods than it did a generation ago.

First, is the increased competition. The increased cost due to this item is legitimate and necessary, especially in marketing some of the more complex products of modern commerce. This competition does not need to be direct, as between two similarly priced automobiles, for instance. The competition for the favor of the customer's pocketbook may be indirect, as between an automobile and a substantial payment on the mortgage on the home. There are so many things offered for sale nowadays that the methods of the merchant must be organized on a thorough and painstaking basis.

A second reason for the high cost of selling is that the price includes the cost of unnecessary merchandising items. Most of these extravagant frills in salesmanship are disguised as "service." They are presented either to compensate for the lack of merit in the proposition, or worse, to cater to the capricious fancy of the purchaser.

This is the time for the Plainfield merchant and his customer to get together and decide on cutting out some of the frills, to the end that the customer fills his needs for less money, and still the merchant is enabled to increase his "net annual income."

The following are two items which the merchant might well eliminate in making his prices:

(a) Cost of maintaining a credit system including accounting, interest or money due from slow payers, and finally losses.

(b) The cost of delivery.

(a) Throughout the length and breadth of the country, the merchant of the small town is raising his voice in protest against the practices of the mail order house. Instead of nursing a grudge against his fellow townsman, who, when he has the ready money to do it, goes to the post office and buys a money order to send away to some big city in payment for a suit of clothes because he thinks he can save a few dollars, why doesn't the local merchant take a leaf out of the mail order man's manual and apply it to his own business. Such a plan appears all the more advantageous when the local merchant recalls that when John Smith does not have the money for the suit which he covets, he comes to the local merchant, because he knows his neighbor is willing to serve as an anticipated pay envelope, even though the contents be still unearned.

The Thrifty Buyer with the ready money, is not only the bed rock foundation of the money order houses, but is the whole frame work of its business. Mr. Plainfield Merchant, why don't you go after Mr. Thrifty Buyer? With the proper encouragement he will more gladly lay his money on your counter, than to send it away to a man he never saw. You meet your customer through your own sales force, face to face. Certainly this important advantage to your salesman, carefully trained under your own direction is an important aid in keeping more of our citizens' trade in Plainfield. If you abolish the credit system you can reduce the margin between Plainfield prices and the lowest prevailing elsewhere.

The "charge account" customer uses his overdue bill as a club to enforce adjustments. While this is a justifiable practice in some dealings, it is often abused, inflicting severe injustice on the merchant. The reason there are so few adjustments to make in the mail order business is because of reluctance on the part of the customer to bother to return the goods—his goods—for such trivial reasons as would serve as an excuse to send back, with or without reason, the goods of the merchant. Besides the customer's own money may still be drawing interest at the bank uninterruptedly, if he has a charge account.

A cash-with-the-order basis for business to replace the credit system, of course, involves the cultivation by the merchant, of the highest type of the customer's confidence. The customer must know that when goods are not satisfactory he is at liberty to exchange them for the cash he originally paid.

(b) "Free" delivery systems are economically unjust. In the first place, the proprietor of the system misrepresents the case when his salesman asks, "Shall I send it up?" intimating that it is no "trouble whatever," etc. The fact is, it is "trouble," and the "trouble" costs, so the system is not "free." The injustice falls heavily on the conscientious housewife who carries home her pound of sixty-cent tea, while her neighbor calls the same merchant on the phone and requests the delivery of a yeast cake.

A large percentage of delivery vehicles could be eliminated if a proper extra charge were added to cover the cost of delivery of all goods purchased. Elimination of individual delivery systems would enable our merchants to specialize in real merchandizing service—the kind that is a genuine benefit to the customer. Specialization is in a great measure responsible for the fact that the world's greatest automobile manufacturer has in a few years built a business yielding dividends approximately the same as our greatest railroad corporation, with nearly fifty times the capital stock.

The wide awake merchant is he who is far sighted enough to determine the customers' economic demand, before the customer even suspects it. By thus anticipating requirements he can embark on an intelligently directed campaign of education which will head the customer away from the present wasteful merchandising practices to the future system founded on justice for all concerned.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the place that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

—Your "for sale" ad will be found and considered—probably investigated—by some of your "logical buyers."

VOTE STANDING OF CANDIDATES IS ANNOUNCED IN TODAY'S PRESS

Way Contestants in Panama-Pacific Exposition Tour Contest Are Lined up Shows Great Opportunity for Others to Enter Race, as But Little Has Been Done Yet.

The start in the race for the Press' Trans-Continental and Panama Pacific Exposition Tour Contest has been made with the announcement today of the vote standing of the candidates. Look over the line-up and see where your favorite stands, see if she needs your aid in order to be numbered among the three winners who will be named on April 17th. Better not take any chances on waiting, but give her your support at once, it will be big encouragement and one less call to make, which means so much to the candidate who has a big list to see and little time in which to see them.

While the Press has been most liberal in arranging to award cash prizes to all active candidates who remain to the finish, the tours are what the candidates are striving for and everybody should select some candidate and do all that they can to see that she wins.

The Proper Spirit.

"Here's a vote for my favorite." He was a little chap with a rather tousled head crowning a full-grown crop of freckles, and he held before him a square of paper—a ballot in the tour contest—and not particularly "neatly trimmed along the border," according to Hoyle and the contest manager.

"She's going to win, too," he added.

Then looking up wistfully, he said: "Don't you think so?"

It was hard not to tell him "yes," but he went on:

"You see, this lady is my teacher and I have got the whole bunch working for her—every one of the boys and girls, too—and, golly, the way the coupons are pilin' up is sumpin' fierce."

The contest manager took the coupon and smiled, for it was only one, and polka-dotted with finger marks, but it reflected the spirit and interest which this grimy-faced little chap was taking in his teacher, who had enrolled her name as a candidate in the trans-continental tour contest. Only a diminutive piece of paper, but it represented a message of affection, and a link in the endless chain of cause and effect from which successful organization is perfected. "Great oaks from little acorns grow."

"She's got to win," was his parting shot as he waved a hurried farewell and scampered through the door of the contest department, apparently to make the rounds for the further collection of ballots.

And his favorite will surely win if all her friends are as staunch and true as this diminutive champion, from now until the close of the campaign. Deeply in earnest, he is bending every effort to pilot her to success, and her progress, helped onward by the little lad who is so loyal, will be watched with interest.

This is the spirit that makes success possible, and the spirit will gradually become manifest throughout the contest territory, when the race is on in earnest, when all the candidates shall be eagerly engaged in accumulating the ballots which will mean success and a glorious trip across the continent.

Each day interest in the Press' Tour Contest increases by leaps and bounds. Almost everywhere one goes now someone is talking contest.

It is almost impossible to pick up a copy of the Press out of which the vote coupon has not been clipped, showing that the candidates have already commenced organizing their forces, but there is going to be a big surprise for those who have not enrolled, because they believed they were distanced in their districts. Without disclosing a confidence it can be honestly said that there are some of the districts which are simply going begging for a hustling candidate to step in and take the honor position at the close of the contest. That district may be the one in which you live.

Notwithstanding the splendid prizes which are offered for effort, this enterprise would necessarily prove a failure were it not that public interest and support are with the Press. The Tour Department was sure the Press readers would promptly put up their sisters, daughters, wives—and why not?—as candidates when they understood the plan.

Even now many people are vague on just exactly what the plan is. Why not give the Tour Department a chance to explain the idea fully to you if you have not acquainted yourself with the details?

Stop procrastinating! Drop the paper and go right to the 'phone or write to the tour manager now. It will be answered immediately, or all information will be imparted by telephone, or a tour representative will call.

Everyone Wins.

The management of the Press has decided to be most liberal to the candidates who may enter this contest. In addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all those candidates who do not win trips, and remain active until the end of the contest, a commission of ten per cent. will be paid on new subscriptions, and a five per cent. commission will be paid on old subscriptions.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday until further notice.

DOUBLE DEFEAT PUTS SPARROWS ON SHELF

Robins Are Assured of the Title in Columbus Club Tournament.

Standing of the Teams.

The Sparrow pinners, of the Columbus Club five-man tourney, lost all hope of catching the leading Robins last night when they dropped two out of three games to the Hawk aggregation. Both teams now have one more match to play and even if the Robins should drop all three games, which is very unlikely, and the Sparrows made a clean sweep, the former would still be a full game ahead. After dropping the initial tilt last night the Hawks took a decided brace and annexed the last two games by large margins.

The Hawks were nineteen pins behind their opponents in the first game, the scores being 845 to 826. Two low scores made by the Hawk players pulled down their total mark considerable, these marks being 135 and 155. Gueterman hit for a 190 in this game and McInerney, Sr., counted for a 181. Regan, who made a 182 in the first game for the Sparrows, fell down in the second and only chalked up a 149. Shannon's average of 165 was the second highest score of the game for the Sparrow team, George Howe making a 203. For the winning team Frank McInerney, Sr., made a fine score, a 232, which put the game safely away for his team.

Gueterman's 210 in the final roll was a life-saver and the poor pinning of the Sparrows helped to win the game. The scores follow:

MANY CHANGES IN P. H. S. GIRLS' SQUAD

Shifts Make Decided Change in Status of School Aggregation.

The girls' basketball team of the Plainfield High School had little difficulty in defeating the girls' team of Cranford High School, at Cranford, yesterday afternoon. The final score was 27 to 16. The Plainfield team led all the way, the score at the end of the first half being 13 to 9 in favor of Plainfield.

Many changes were made in the Plainfield line since the last game, Miss Palmer shifting from side-center to forward and Miss Bremble changing places with Miss Good, from guard to center. The team worked very well with these changes, their passing and shooting being of the first calibre. Miss Dorothy Crane caged the most baskets for Plainfield, scoring eight field goals and two foul goals. For Cranford, Miss Cox played the best all-around game, passing the ball consistently and caging five field and two foul goals.

The score:

WESTFIELD FIVE PUTS UP GOOD GAME AT RAHWAY

Rahway High School's basketball team, minus three of its regulars, managed to pull a game out of the fire on the Rahway Y. M. C. A. court, last night, when it nosed out the Westfield High School team, 22 to 19. It was a hair-raising affair from start to finish with the quintets battling at top speed all the way.

The Westfield team offered more opposition than the Rahway contingent was prepared for. The score at the end of the first session favored the home aggregation by a two-point margin, 10 to 8. The passing of both teams was fast and clever, while in the shooting department the home team had a shade the better. Meinger, a second team player, who had to be used at guard, played a clever game, holding his man to a lone basket, while he accounted for two himself.

The score:

STILL ANOTHER SERIES.

In an effort to decide which is the better bowling team, the members of the Park Cluk and Elks' teams, have decided to start another series to be played in the near future. Two series have already been played which resulted in a deadlock, each team taking two games on their home alleys, and as the series are of a friendly nature it was decided not to play a rubber on neutral alleys. The dates for the new match will be announced later.

ELK BOWLING MEETING.

There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the Senior Elks' Bowling League tomorrow afternoon at Jersey City to decide on the roll-off match between the Elizabeth and Newark teams for fourth place in the team standings. The local Elks' alleys are in line for the match.

Looks as If Old Athletics Are Shot to Pieces.

HIT BY BAKER'S RETIREMENT

Mack Will Have Hard Time Replacing Great Third Sacker—Bender, Plank and Collins Will Be Missed—Other Sport Comment.

If Frank Baker does not change his mind and quits baseball, the Athletics' chances in the coming race will be considerably reduced. In fact, the Mack forces will be so much weakened that it is almost certain the team will not be able to finish in the first division.

A team which loses two such players as Collins and Baker is very apt to be changed from a pennant winner to a second division proposition.

It is hard to believe that Baker, who is still in his prime and in a position to demand enormous pay, should want to quit the sport. But stranger things have happened.

With Lajoie in Collins' place and the rest of the wonderful infield intact there was hope for the Athletics to cut a figure in the race again. Lajoie, while not as agile as Collins, is pretty sure to fill his shoes in an offensive way, so that Collins would not have been badly missed. But there is no one who can take Baker's place. This wonderful batter is not easily replaced. In fact, it is questionable whether the game has ever had a player whose hitting has been as sensational as that of the Athletics' third baseman.

The weakening of the Mackmen by reason of the loss of Collins and Baker, not to speak of the dropping of Bender and Plank, ought to leave the American league race solely between Boston and Washington. The Athletics have been torn to pieces and can no longer be figured as a dangerous foe.

Judged from the tone of Connie Mack's announcement of the retirement of Baker from the game, he does not have much hope of inducing his star player to change his mind.

The deal which Jimmy Callahan was handed by Comiskey does not seem fair. Callahan managed the Chicago White Sox for several seasons when the material was lacking to give him a chance to bring the team well up in the race. There were no Eddie Collinses on the roster. In fact, all during the Callahan regime the material on hand, barring a fair pitching staff, was somewhat mediocre.

It is generally recognized that the acquisition of Eddie Collins will make the White Sox pennant contenders. There have been many instances where the addition of a single player has made a world of difference in the artistic achievements of a ball team. Collins may prove this, but Rowland, the new manager, will get the credit, and he is having a better team handed him than has held forth on the White Sox grounds for several years.

ANNUAL EXHIBITION FOR Y. M. C. A. BOYS

Youngsters Performed in Association Gymnasium Last Night.

Parents and friends of the members of the Y. M. C. A. Boys' Department filled the gallery of the association building last night and witnessed one of the best gymnastic exhibitions that has even been given by the members of that department. All of the boys' classes took part and there were seventy-eight, ranging in age from twelve to seventeen, who were on the floor. The program consisted of a variety of "stunts" that the boys are taught during the class periods by Physical Director Robert Meermans, which bring into use the various and many muscles of the body, developing them gradually.

The pieces of apparatus that were used in the exhibition last night were the "horse," the "elephant" and parallel bars. The members of the Boys' Club started the entertainment with "setting up" exercises led by Gus Engler. Seymour Day then put the Employed Boys' Class through a series of strenuous acts on the horse. The little Indian League Boys, under the leadership of Arthur Krausse, performed on the small horse. Free drills, group games, a dumb bell and pyramid building were other features of the program.

James McClymont, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee, gave a short talk to the audience regarding the work of the boys in the association and asked for help for the boys in this city who cannot afford to pay full admission to the association. A silver offering was taken and the visitors were allowed to investigate the boys' rooms.

ANXIETY FELT IN CAPITAL OVER MEXICAN SITUATION

Washington, March 6.—Anxiety is felt in administration circles over the situation in Mexico City. While it was declared that no official despatches had been received over night officials admitted they were not without information from the Mexican capital. All these advices, it is understood, point to a reign of anarchy and terror. The administration has not given up its belief that Carranza will be able to curb the rule of General Obregon.

MRS. AMY L. SLADE.

Mrs. Amy L. Slade, widow of Frederick J. Slade, died this morning at her home in Trenton following a month's illness. She was the mother of Mrs. Orton G. Dale, of East Sixth street, and sister of J. Albert Lane, of West Seventh street. Mrs. Slade's husband was for many years connected with the New Jersey Steel and Iron Company, of Trenton. The funeral arrangements have not been made but burial will be in the family plot in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

LESSON FOR DELIBRIO.

Because he has been a frequent violator of city ordinances, Ralph Delibrio was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 with the option of spending forty days in the county jail when he was arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning, charged with riding his bicycle on North avenue without a light. Patrolman Fritts arrested him as well as Joseph Smith, who was fined $2 for driving one of Delibrio's wagons without a light.

TROUBLE-MAKER FINED.

John Long, an Italian, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning on a charge of trespassing on the Central Railroad tracks. He was sentenced to pay $5 with the option of going to jail for twenty days. Arthur Lowden, of Watchung avenue, his companion, was let go on account of his previous good record. John Hoffminister, a third party to the deal, failed to appear in court and will be arrested.

WAS GIRL KIDNAPPED?

Mrs. Mary E. Jacobs, colored of 531 West Third street, notified Captain John Flynn at police headquarters last night that Fanny Brown, also colored, and wife of Walter Brown, had kidnapped her daughter, Louise, aged fourteen. The local authorities are making an investigation.

COBB ONE LOYAL PLAYER.

He Thinks, Too, That Other Players Are Seeing the Light.

Ty Cobb is one of the many ball players who see no good for the players or the game in the Federal league since the outlaws have dragged the game into court.

Ty makes a strong statement in sizing up the present situation when he says:

"I think baseball players are beginning to realize that subterfuge has no part in the successful promotion of the national pastime. The game has been injured greatly therefrom the past season. And though it is still honest and always will remain so, the vacillating attitude of the many mercenary players has doubtless raised vague suspicions in the public mind in some quarters. No one blames a player for selling his services to the very best advantage. But a contract, written or verbal, is a sacred thing. Evasion through technicality is no sound excuse for dishonor. Let the least corruption creep into the manipulation of the game and the careful work of years will be destroyed. The baseball player has as much at stake in the present fight as any one. The outcome means no less than his future."

CUP ON EXHIBITION.

The trophy that has been offered for the winner of the P. H. S.-Y. M. C. CEMENT MAKERS FIGHT FOR PROFIT

Several Mills Will Remain Closed Until Conditions Improve.

CONSERVATIVE POLICY

Experts Believe That the Bottom on the Price Cutting Has Been Reached and That the Cement War is Nearing Its End.

New York, March 6.—The latest development in the Portland cement price war in this market is the decision of the Edison Portland Cement Company not to resume manufacture of cement at its plant at New Village, N. J., until it is possible to manufacture this commodity at a profit. The week closes with cement quoted at $1.23 a barrel which is equivalent to fifty-eight cents, Lehigh Valley mills. When asked for a statement regarding the action of the company W. S. Mallory, president, said:

"The action of this company in deciding not to resume the manufacture of cement at this time is in line with our usual conservative policy. Our mill at New Village, N. J., has been closed since the fifth of December. During that time we have been making the customary repairs. It has come to a period when resumption usually takes place and in view of the unsettled condition of the cement market as a whole and the low price now prevailing, which is considerably below cost of manufacture, we have decided to defer resumption until we can make cement at a profit.

"I want to say that the Edison Portland Cement Company is entirely solvent in every particular. We intend to take care of our trade and all outstanding contracts and, while we have called our salesmen in, it has been merely for the purpose of acquainting them with the plan of the company in the present circumstances.

"There is a possibility that our mill will again be in operation within a short time."

There was evidence aplenty in the market this week to the effect that the bottom of the price cutting has been reached. At a price of $1.23, which was bottom in this market up to yesterday noon, the mill price was fifty-eight cents. Since it costs between sixty-five and seventy cents a barrel to make cement, practically every cement company doing business today in this market at present prices is taking orders at a flat loss.

While the wholesale price of cement has been found extremely low by competition or manipulation, the consumer has not been a large benefactor. Most of the purchases have been made by interests looking for larger profits and this cement has been practically all stored in anticipation of a rise before the building season gets fairly under way. The cut has helped to bring down the average per cubic foot construction cost, but on actual price the consumer has been quoted on the job has not been materially below that usually ruling at this time of the year.

The Edison company has a capacity of 2,000,000 a year, all in one plant, and when it is operating full it can produce cement at a minimum cost. When, however, production is curtailed the cost of manufacture is considerably greater than when running full and it is not in such advantageous position to meet competition of the sort that has featured the New York market for the last two weeks.

The cement war is nearing its end. Just what part in it is taken by the supposed incorporation of some sixteen cement companies as a unit of manufacture reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, is not being divulged, but consumers may look for gradual change upward in prices from now on or else other companies will be forced to follow the lead of the Edison.

On the first of the month structural steel showed a slight upward movement. Quotations at tidewater here moved from 1.21c and 1.26c to —— and 1.26c indicating a stronger and steadier movement in steel orders throughout the country. The United States Steel Corporation is now operating above 60 per cent. of its capacity, whereas a month ago it was using only 45 per cent. and the unfilled tonnage showed a gain of 100,000 tons in February with only twenty-two business days over the total unfilled tonnage of 4,248,571 in January.

The war is shutting off sources of supply of decorative art tile to a considerable extent and American manufacturers are apparently awakening to the necessity of inducing architects to give preference to American products, especially since American manufacturers have gone to considerable expense and trouble to perfect colors and shapes and textures that will more fully meet the standards set by foreign producers for so many years.

Common brick is in plentiful supply. Prices generally are low. Terra cotta blocks are steadier in tone and price. Lime is firmer. Rockland-Rockport finishing was quoted at the opening of the month at $1.67 as against $1.62. Front brick is still in considerable competition and it might be said to be in a buyer's market although some distributors are trying to get better prices. Gypsum promises to have a year considerably better than last and even in excess of that of 1913.

The situation in crushed stone in New York is easier. The enforcement and subsequent confirmation of the constitutionality of the alien labor clause in the New York State Labor Law has checked work on the New York Subway which employs some 18,000 men and handles over 20,000 cubic yards of gravel and crushed stone a day. While the consumption of this material has not stopped entirely it has given the producers a chance to catch up with the demand. No advances in slate prices have occurred.

AN ENGLISH STUCCO COTTAGE

DESIGNED BY CHAS. S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

THIS English stucco cottage is 28 ft. in width by 28 ft. in depth, comprising three rooms on the first floor and three on the second. It is suitable for an east and south front. It is built frame construction and the outside walls are veneered with a dark Oriental brick up to the sill course and above this the walls are finished in cement stucco. The roof shingles are stained and all of the trimmings, cornices, verge boards, casings, etc., stained dark brown, giving a very pretty and artistic effect. The estimated cost, exclusive of heating and plumbing, is $3,200 to $3,800.

The entrance is onto a glazed piazza on the southeast corner and coming under the main roof. The main living room and the dining room both open on this piazza with glazed doors. The main stairs lead up between the living room and the dining room with combination arrangement. The first story is finished in oak and the second story in white enamel. There are three good chambers, bath, and ample closets on the second floor. A good storage space in the attic is reached by stairs carried up over the main stairs.

The basement is full under the house with ample space for heating apparatus, laundry, etc. The chimney is centrally located with wide open fireplace in the living room.

T. A. B.'S LIKELY TO ENLARGE HOME

Executive Committee Orders Plans and Specifications For An Addition.

Imperative demands for larger quarters have compelled the executive committee of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society to consider the advisability of enlarging its home, the T. A. B. Hall, on West Fourth street, near Liberty. Contractor Michael D. O'Keeffe, who is a member of the Association, has been authorized to draw plans for a two-story extension to be built on the west side of the present structure. The first floor, according to the committee's idea, must be constructed for the installation of two bowling alleys, and the upper floor for a meeting room and pool room. Estimates for the construction work will be submitted by Mr. O'Keeffe when the plans are approved, if they do not exceed the tentative figures, the contract will be awarded. There is little possibility, however, but what the addition will be a reality next fall.

At the meeting of the executive committee held the forepart of this week, Mr. O'Keeffe was given a contract to repair the interior of the building, which has stood without any great change for the past fifty years. The walls, now of plaster, are to be torn out, and wainscoting with an attractive panel effect substituted. An old fashioned chimney, built on the inside, is to be removed entirely, thus making a clear space the entire length of the main hall. The removal of the chimney is all that remains to give the society one of the best basketball courts of the city, the game having become quite popular among the members. The original building has no second floor with the exception of a small gallery located in the front and used as a choir loft when the structure was first built as St. Mary's church.

The T. A. B. organization, which was more frequently referred to as St. Mary's Temperance Society, has a membership of 150 young men, most of whom reside in the West End. The Fourth street hall has become quite a social center with them, and the nightly average attendance is fifty. The accomodations are frequently taxed to their capacity and it is for this reason that the executive committee has taken up the enlargement proposition.

COMPLETING PLANS FOR SEVENTH ST. APARTMENT

Plans for the modern four story apartment house which C. C. Alexander is to erect on the former Wills property on East Seventh street, between Watchung avenue and Washington street, are now being completed by Architect J. C. Westervelt, of New York. The finished drawings and specifications will be ready for inspection next week, and local contractors can look them over at Mr. Westervelt's office at 36 West Thirty-fourth street, New York. Several Plainfield builders have asked permission to submit bids and the contract will be awarded as soon as possible.

The building is to be constructed of hollow tile, with an exterior stucco effect. It will have twenty-four apartments in all, each one being fitted up to conform with the last word in dwellings of this type. Numerous original ideas have been embodied in the arrangement of rooms, the placing of hallways and location of stairways and dumbwaiters. A full description will be given in the real-estate and building section of the Daily Press when the contracts are let.

The former Wills home, a frame structure, now facing East Seventh street is to be moved to the back of the property and faced on East Sixth street. It is Mr. Alexander's idea to improve it considerably but to what extent he has not decided definitely as yet.

FEBRUARY BUILDING SHOWS A BIG GAIN

Twelve Permits Issued Last Month Call for Expenditures of $14,900.

That prosperity is well on its return journey is evidenced by the fact that the month of February, like the preceding month of January, witnessed the granting of building permits by Inspector T. O. Doane, in excess of last year's records. During the past month a total of twelve construction documents were issued by the official, calling for the expenditure of a total of $14,900. While this figure is somewhat below the figure of January, it looks large when compared with the $4,500 in permits issued in February of last year.

As was the case in January, the permits issued last month were largely for entirely new buildings, only one for alterations being granted. This fact appears to indicate that the money market, the tightness of which held up much construction work in this city for several months back, is gradually easing and getting into such shape that the owners of unimproved property can feel justified in the erection of buildings sorely needed in Plainfield at the present time. While the building in this city has improved considerably during the course of the past two months, it has not yet entirely returned to a normal state, as will be seen by the fact that in February of 1913, the building permits as issued called for the expenditure of $86,225, all but $4,450 of which was put into new buildings.

February, 1915.

	New Bldgs	Alterations	Totals
1st ward	$ 2,000	——	$ 2,900
2d ward	225	——	225
3d ward	9,375	——	9,375
4th ward	600	$1,800	2,400
Totals ..	$13,500	$1,800	$14,900

February, 1914.

	New Bldgs	Alterations	Totals
1st ward	——	——	——
2d ward	——	——	——
3d ward	——	$1 000	$ 1,000
4th ward	$ 2,500	$1,000	$ 3,500
Totals ..	$ 2,500	$2,000	$ 4,500

SPRING OUTLOOK IS ENCOURAGING

Building Inspector Doane Issues Seven Permits This Month.

MANY BIDS SOUGHT FOR

Architects Are Busy Drawing Plans for Extensive Building in the City During Early Summer—Normal Conditions Expected.

The present month of March opened under the most auspicious conditions in building circles, when seven construction permits, covering two dwellings, two stables, and three alteration jobs, were issued by Inspector T. O. Doane. The documents issued, call for the expenditure of $14,085, an amount within less than $1,000 of the permits as issued during the entire month of February.

The asking for bids and estimates on new work, as well as the drawing of plans for extensive building in the city during the spring months seems continues to be a great factor in the local construction field, and the present month should prove to be a strong one for the issuing of permits. Local contractors expect that the end of the month will see building conditions in this city very close to normal. The permits as issued during the course of the past week are as noted below:

First Ward.

Miss Johanna Hanson has been granted a permit for the erection of a one and half story frame dwelling at 1449 McCrea place. The structure will have a frontage of fourteen feet and a depth of twenty-four feet and will cost in the vicinity of $8[illegible].

A fifteen by sixteen foot hollow terra cotta block barn, the cost of which is placed at $100, is to be erected at 224 Sumner avenue by Salvatore Sciarette. The foundation and roof will be of concrete. The work will be done by the owner.

Alterations are being made to the residence of Mattios Mauro at 3 East Second street, an extension being erected to the rear of the dwelling at a cost of $585. The addition will measure 22 by 12 feet, and will be two stories high. The contracts are in the hands of John Sheehan, Hanson, and Charles Bicknell, carpenter.

Third Ward.

Alonzo Aldrich has planned for the erection of a dwelling at 805 West Fourth street, a permit having been granted. The structure is to be frame, and will cost $3,200. The building will have a frontage of twenty-eight feet, and an equal depth, and will be two and half stories high. The base course will be of concrete with a brick foundation and hemlock frame work. A hot-air system is to be installed. J. L. Manning is the architect and carpenter contractor, while the mason work will be cared for by Howard D. Hu[illegible].

S. S. Carvallio, of 400 West Eighth street, is having a brick extension one story high built onto the side of his residence at the above address, the improvement having been designed by the owner. A hot-air heating system is to be installed. Special attention is to be paid to the interior of the room, which is to measure 24x37 feet, and is to have an oak and chestnut finish on the woodwork. The room is to be used as a music and reception room. The estimated cost has been placed at $1,500.

Adam C. Blair is to alter the interior of his building at 114 West Sixth street, the structure to be used upon the completion of the improvements, as a storage warehouse. The present wooden floors are to be replaced by 4-inch concrete floors, and will be put in at a slightly lower level. The elevator is to be shifted to a new location. Bins are to be installed on both the first and second floors. The cost has been placed at $2,400. Frank McInerney has the mason contract, while the carpenter contract has been awarded to Alexander Milne.

Mr. Blair has also been granted a permit for the erection of a stable on the property adjoining the present building. The structure will be of brick, with a frame addition in the rear, and will cost $4,500. The new building will have a frontage of forty-five feet, and a width of twenty-six feet in the rear, and a depth of 105 feet. The front of the structure will be one story high, while the frame addition will be two stories, the upper floor to be used as a hay loft. The foundation and base course and foundations will be of concrete while the coving of the walls will be of terra cotta block.

NURSES' HOME TO BE ENLARGED

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital has decided upon several changes to increase the capacity of the Nurses' Home on Park avenue. One of these will be the installation of an open-air dormitory over the present porch in the rear, which has already been started, and another is the raising of the roof in the center of the building to provide sleeping quarters for about ten persons. The home is providing for its full capacity at the present time and more nurses are in demand at the institution.

BOROUGH PERMITS.

The North Plainfield Common Council last night granted the following building permits:

To Edward Odd, permit for the erection of an 8 by 16 frame barn on Wilson avenue; Mrs. Josephine Boice, to erect an addition to dwelling at Manning and Watchung avenues, and Edward Brokaw, to erect a 20 by 16 foot wagon shed on Coddington avenue.

SCHOOL WORK TO START.

The work on the foundations of the new Evergreen Avenu School is to be started within the course of the coming week, the excavation of the cellars having been completed. It is expected that the work on the digging of the cellar of the Harrison Avenue School, the borough, will be started the latter part of next week.

HOUSE FOR BOROUGH.

Bids were opened this week for a house to be erected by the Standard Investment Company, a Dunellen concern, on Duer street, North Plainfield, and the Apgar Construction Company was found to be the lowest bidder. Work will be started at once.

MELLICK FARM SOLD.

The William Mellick farm near Mt. Pleasant has been purchased by Erastus Kroug, the well-known dairyman, who formerly resided on Rahway road. The property has thirty-one acres and is especially suitable for dairying purposes.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

With a host of varied attractions to choose from during the current theatrical season, New Yorkers have pronounced "On Trial" the greatest success the stage has known in years. And the announcement that it is to be presented here at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday, March 15 has awakened more genuine enthusiasm than has been noticeable in many months.

A critical anaylsis of dramatic offerings would class "On Trial" as unmitigated and unalloyed melodrama. It is the old triangle plot, involving the betrayed maiden, the trusting husband and the betrayer. So novel is the treatment of the subject matter said to be that it will be recognized in its dress.

It is decidedly unusual departure from the regular course of dramatic portrayals in "On Trial" that brings down the theory of the average authority that this time worn triangle is no longer eligible as a dramatic motive.

Critics and a discriminating public have agreed that, viewed alone from a novel aspect, "On Trial" reveals subtlety on the part of its author that is appreciated more and more as the denouement is arrived at.

As the title indicates, the scene of "On Trial" is laid in a court room, not the regular stage court room which is usually something of a farce, but a court room scene were carried out to the smallest detail.

So true are the reader the dramatic effect of this nucleus play cannot be described. It has to be seen to be fully appreciated.

Sidney Greenstreet, one of the principals in Margaret Anglin's company in "Lady Windermere's Fan" is a attraction announced for Wednesday, March 10, at the Plainfield Theatre, is one of the most versatile and accomplished actors on the stage. Mr. Greenstreet is an Englishman and made his American debut several years ago as a member of the Street Players. He has played important roles in a number of Shakespearean organizations, and last season attained particular distinction as the characters of Malvolio, Jacques and Enobarbus in support of Miss Anglin in her Shakespearean revivals. As Lord Augustus Lorton in "Lady Windermere's Fan" he received one of the really big hits in New York last season. He also appeared in support of Miss Anglin in her productions of a Sophoclean tragedian of the Antigone and the Electra in the Greek Theatre of the University of California.

Patrons of the Plainfield Theatre will have an exceptional treat tonight when Edward Harding, Jr., the well-known local tenor singer, will render a ballet at the playhouse in connection with the new film feature, the singing moving pictures. The title of his song is "Let Bygones Be Bygones" and it is certain to make a bigger hit than "The Land of My Best Girl," which Mr. Harding gave on Washington's Birthday. Novelties in the moving picture world are rare and the introduction of the singing moving pictures with home talent assisting is an innovation at the Plainfield Theatre which is bound to be highly popular. In addition to the two legitimate attractions at the Second street playhouse next week, special feature photo-plays will be shown on all other days as follows: "The Adventures of Kitty Cobb," from James Montgomery Flagg's charming stories; Thursday, George M. Cohan's screaming farce, "Officer 666"; Friday and Saturday, the greatest drama that has ever been transferred to the screen, Hal Caine's perennial success, "The Christian." The last named is in eight reels and holds the breathless attention of the spectator from start to finish. The Plainfield Theatre serial pictures are shown on Tuesdays and Fridays, "The Master Key" on the former day and "The Trey 'o Hearts" on the latter.

PEG O' MY HEART

CHAPTER XXV.

Peg's Father.

ONE night a ring at the bell caused O'Connell to look up frowningly. He was not in the habit of receiving calls. Few people ever dared to intrude on his privacy.

He opened the door and looked in amazement at his visitor. He saw a little, round, merry-looking, baldheaded gentleman with gold rimmed spectacles, an enormous silk hat, broadcloth frock coat suit, patent boots with gray spats on them and a general air of prosperity and good nature.

"Is that Frank O'Connell?" cried the little man.

"It is," said O'Connell, trying in vain to see the man's features distinctly in the dim light.

The little man came into the room, took off his heavy silk hat and looked up at O'Connell with a quizzing look in his laughing eyes.

"McGinnis!"

"That's who it is! 'Talkative McGinnis,' come all the way from ould Ireland to take ye by the hand."

The two men shook hands warmly.

"An' what in the wurrld brings ye here, docthor?" asked O'Connell.

"Didn't ye hear of me old grand-uncle McNamara of County Sligo dyin'—after a useless life—and doin' the only thing that made me proud of him now that he's gone—may he slape in peace—lavin' the money he'd kept such a close fist on all his life to his God fearin' nephew so that he can spind the rest of his days in comfort? Didn't ye hear that?"

"I did not. And who was the nephew that came into it?"

"Meself, Frank O'Connell!"

"You! Is it the truth ye're tellin' me?"

"May I nivver spake another wurrd if I'm not."

O'Connell took the little man's hand and shook it until the doctor screamed out to him to let it go.

"It's sorry I am if I hurt ye. So it's a wealthy man ye are now, docthor, eh?"

"Middlin' wealthy."

"And what are ye doin' in New York?"

"Sure, this is the counthry to take money to. It doubles itself out here overnight, they tell me."

He paused, then continued:

"I hope ye've not lost the gift o' the gab. Hev ye got it with ye still, Frank O'Connell?"

"Faith an' while I'm talkin' of the one thing in the wurld that's near our hearts—the future of Ireland—I want to prophesy"—

"An' what's it ye'd afther prophesying?"

"This—that ten years from now, with her own government, with her own language back again—Gaelic—an' what language in the wurrld yields greater music than the old Gaelic?—with Ireland united and Ireland's land in the care of Irishmen, with Ireland's people self respectin' an' sober an' healthy an' educated, with Irishmen employed on Irish industries"—

"Go on, Frank O'Connell. I love to listen to ye. Don't stop."

"I'll tell ye what will happen! Back will go the Irishmen in tens o' thousands from all the other counthries they were thriven to in the days o' famine an' oppression an' coercion an' buckshot—back they will go to their mother counthry. An' can ye see far enough into the future to realize what they will do? Ye can't? Well, I'll tell ye that too. The exiled Irish, who have lived their lives abroad—takin' their wives, like as not, from the people o' the counthry they lived in an' not from their own stock—when they go back to Ireland with different outlooks, with different manners an' with different tastes, so long as they've kept the hearts o' them thrue an' loyal—just so long as they've done that—an' kept the faith o' their forefathers, they'll form a new nation an' a nation with all the best o' the old—the great big faith an' hope o' the old—added to the prosperity an' education an' business-like principles an' statesmanship o' the new."

"Sure it's the big position they should give you on College green when they get their own government again, Frank O'Connell," the little doctor said, shaking his head knowingly.

"An' where is the little blue eyed maiden, Peg o' your heart? Where is she at all?"

"It's in London she is."

"Is it English ye're goin' to bring her up?" cried the doctor in horror and disgust.

"No, it's not, Docthor McGinnis, an' ye ought to know me betther than to sit there an' ask me such a question."

When they parted for the night, with many promises to meet again ere long, O'Connell sat down and wrote Peg a long letter, leaving the choice in her hands, but telling her how much he would like to have her back with him. He wrote the letter again and again and each time destroyed it, it seemed so clumsy.

* * * * * * *

The morning after the incident following Peg's disobedience in going to the dance and her subsequent rebellion and declaration of independence found all the inmates of Regal Villa in a most unsettled condition.

Mrs. Chichester and Alaric opened a discussion as to the latter's business career.

"Oh, Alaric! There is a way—one way that would save us," said the mother after Alaric suggested going to Canada. And she trembled as she paused, as if afraid to tell him what the alternative was.

"Is there, mater? What is it?"

"It rests with you, dear."

"Does it? Very good. I'll do it to save you and Ethel and the roof; course I will. Let me hear it."

"Alaric?" she asked in a tone that suggested their fate hung on his answer, "Alaric, do you like her?"

"Like whom?"

"Margaret! Do you?"

"Here and there. She amuses me like anything at times. She drew a map of Europe once that I think was the most fearful and wonderful thing I have ever seen. She said it was the way her father would like to see Europe. She had England, Scotland and Wales in Germany, and the rest of the map was Ireland. Made me laugh like anything."

"Oh, if you only could!" she sobbed.

"Could? What?"

"Take that little wayward child into your life and mold her."

"Here, one moment, mater; let me get the full force of your idea. You want me to mold Margaret?"

"Yes, dear."

"Ha!" he laughed uneasily, then said decidedly: "No, mater, no. I can do most things, but as a molder—oh, no! Let Ethel do it—if she'll stay, that is."

"Alaric, my dear, I mean to take her really into your life—'to have and to hold.'" And she looked pleadingly at him through her tear dimmed eyes.

"But I don't want to hold her, mater!" reasoned her son.

"It would be the saving of us all!" she insisted significantly.

But Alaric was still obtuse.

"Now, how would my holding and molding Margaret save us?"

The old lady placed her cards deliberately on the table as she said sententiously:

"She would stay with us here—if you were—engaged to her!"

The shock had come. His mother's terrible alternative was now before him in all its naked horror. A shiver ran through him. The thought of a man with a future as brilliant as his being blighted at the outset by such a misalliance!

He felt the color leave his face.

"Engaged! Don't, mother, please." He trembled again. "Heavens—engaged to that tomboy!"

There was no escape. Mrs. Chichester held him firmly.

"She will have £5,000 a year when she is twenty-one—£5,000 a year—£5,000 of the very best!"

She took him in her arms and pressed his reluctant and shrinking body to her breast. "Think what it would mean, dear—your family preserved and a brand snatched from the burning!"

"That's just it. It's all right saving the family. Any cove'll do that at a pinch. But I do not see myself as a 'brand snatcher.' Besides, I am not altogether at liberty."

"What?" cried his mother.

"Oh, I've not committed myself to anything. But I've been three times to hear that wonderful woman speak—once on the platform! And people are beginning to talk. She thinks no end of me. Sent me a whole lot of stuff last week—'advanced literature' she calls it. I've got 'em all upstairs. Wrote every word of 'em herself. Never saw a woman who can talk and write as she can. And outside of all that I'm afraid I've more or less encouraged her. And there you are—the whole thing in a nutshell."

Alaric thought for a few moments.

The result of this mental activity took form and substance as follows:

"She is not half bad looking—at times—when she's properly dressed."

"I've seen her look almost beautiful!" cried Mrs. Chichester.

Alaric suddenly grew depressed.

"Shocking temper, mater!" and he shook his head despondently.

"The woman who loves always obeys!" cried his mother.

"Ah, there we have it!" And Alaric sprang up and faced the old lady. "There we have it! Does she love me?"

Mrs. Chichester looked fondly at her only son and answered:

"How could she be near you for the last month and not love you?"

Alaric nodded:

"Of course there is that. Now, let me see—just get a solid grip on the whole thing. If she loves me—and taking all things into consideration—for your sake and darling Ethel's—and for my—that is"—

As mother and son walked slowly toward the house they looked up, and gazing through a tiny casement of the little mauve room was Peg, her face white and drawn.

Peg decided to take a walk in the garden. As she reached the foot of the stairs Alaric came in quickly through the windows.

"Hello, Margaret!" he cried cheerfully, though his heart was beating nervously at the thought of what he was about to do, and across his features there was a sickly pallor. "What have you got there, all tucked away?" he ventured as the opening question that was to lead to the all important one.

Peg held up a book for him to see. "The only thing I'm takin' away that I didn't bring with me."

"A book, eh?"

"That's what it is—a book," and she began to go upstairs.

"Taking it away?" he called up to her.

"That's what I'm doin'," and she still went on up two more steps.

"You're not really going away—cousin?" he gasped.

"I am," replied Peg.

"Just a moment," he cried, stopping her just by an oriel window. She paused in the center of the glow that radiated from its panes.

"What is it?" she asked impatiently. She wanted to go back to her room and make her final preparations.

Alaric looked at her with what he meant to be adoration in his eyes.

"Do you know I've grown really awfully fond of you?" His voice quivered and broke. He had reached one of the crises of his life.

"No, I didn't know it. When did ye find it out?"

"Just now—down in that room—when the thought flashed through me that perhaps you really meant to leave us. It went all through me. 'Pon my honor it did. The idea positively hurt me—really hurt me."

"Did it, now?" laughed Peg. "Sure an' I'm glad of it."

"Glad? Glad?" he asked in astonishment.

"I am. I didn't think anything could hurt ye unless it disturbed yer comfort. An' I don't see how my goin' will do that."

"Oh, but it will," persisted Alaric. "Really it will."

"Sure now?" Peg was growing really curious. What was this odd little fellow trying to tell her?

Alaric felt that the moment had now really come.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Three days after Dick left to interview the manager of the Kansas firm Nell received the following letter:

"Dear Little Wife: I know you are anxious to know the result of my interview with Mr. Parsons and I hasten to report the glad tidings. I have the position, and they came across with as big a salary as I have been getting, which is much better than I expected, and will mean a veritable increase, when living expenses are taken into account. For alas! dear, there is nothing to spend money on here. We will save all we can and keep bunched up ready to spring if any chance ever offers. The trouble is, there are few concerns doing this line of work. I am thankful, therefore, to get a position so soon.

"I wish I could tell you the town was pretty, but I cannot. The people seem pleasant and obliging and I am sure you will like them. I feel relieved when I think of what you said when we first spoke of moving, 'I can do what other girls can do, and if we can succeed—the place will not matter.' Thank you for that brave speech. You will need all your courage.

"Tomorrow I am going over the works from start to finish with Mr. Parsons and the next day I house-hunt.

"Goodby, dear little wife.

"YOUR DICK."

Nell threw herself on the couch among the pillows and sobbed as if her heart would break. Her mother found her there and when told of the news looked very anxious.

"Nell, you mustn't feel this way about the move. You are young and will make friends and will learn to love the place."

"No, I shall hate it always. I can't endure a little, stuffy town, where everyone knows everyone's business," sobbed the girl.

"No one will succeed going into a place in such a spirit. Make the best of things, my child, and remember Dick's happiness is at stake, as well as yours." Mrs. Reeves sat down on the couch.

"If only I did not have to go now," sighed Nell.

"I am sorry, too, that the move could not have come in the fall. The summers are so much cooler here by the lake, but think what it would have meant if Dick had lost his position and been unable to get another. Any move is better than that."

"I am going to be brave when Dick comes, but—I must get this out of my system," said Nell, smiling through her tears.

"That's a good girl." Mrs. Reeves leaned over and kissed the hot face and smoothed the tumbled hair.

Household Hints

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

For Rheumatism—Use equal parts grain alcohol and witch hazel. For external use.

For Colds—The common mullein, or American velvet plant, is a valuable medicine. Gather leaves during summer and fall for winter use. Boil a handful in water, sweeten and drink freely; a mild stimulant to the kidneys and a tonic. Those with lung troubles will be benefited by its use.

For Sick Headache, no matter in what part of the head the pain is—Take a thin, old handkerchief. In the center place two tablespoons ground pepper; fold in nicely, so pepper wont sift out; wet thin side with any kind of spirits, witch hazel, camphor or even vinegar or water; place thin side to back of neck. If possible, lie down for half hour. This also relieves nausea. It will burn hard, but never blisters.

Splendid Hand Lotion—Use equal parts glycerine and peroxide. You can add a little lemon juice if you like. This is fine. Keeps the hands soft and will remove stains and tan.

Rubbing the Eyes—Rubbing the eyes tends to flatten the eyeball, making it necessary to use spectacles. Whenever you rub the eyes at all, let it be toward the nose, as it tends to round the eyeball, making the sight last longer.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Lima Roast—Soak two cups dried lima beans over night, cook in fresh water until tender, press through colander, mix with two cups bread crumbs and one cup ground peanuts. Season with salt, pepper and onion juice and shape into loaf in a well-buttered baking pan; brush with beaten egg and bake half hour.

Potato Surprise—Take cold boiled potatoes, rub through sieve, or wash carefully, so that no lumps remain. Season with pepper and salt. Line greased patty pans with potatoes. Have ready some peeled tomatoes cut in halves; add a good seasoning of salt. Put half a tomato into each patty pan, cover with more mashed potato and bake a nice brown color. A tiny bit of butter should be laid on top of each patty.

Pineapple Creole—Cut preserved pineapples in squares and mix it with rice cooked in milk. Dress the rice on an oval dish, shaping it like a half pineapple; decorate with sliced pineapple, parboiled black currants and, at the end, with a tuft of angelica.

Simple, Inexpensive Dessert—May be used in place of ice cream for a party. Six oranges peeled carefully so that none of the bitter white skin remains, cut up small. To these add one-half pound marshmallows. Let stand several hours. Place in sherbet glasses with whipped cream on top; serve very cold. This will make eight glasses. For a St. Patrick's day party, color the whipped cream a pale green by adding a few drops of green vegetable color and add a couple of green cherries on top.

NEW LENTEN SANDWICHES

These two new sandwiches will appeal to those who have to carry lunch every day of the year.

Prepare one box of lemon gelatin as directed; when cool and beginning to set, add one small can of tuna fish, minced fine. Let harden over night—a thin slice of this between buttered bread or buns is delicious.

A great many like peanut butter sandwiches, but cannot eat them on account of the oil. Those who like them should get one pound of salted peanuts, grind medium fine with the foodchopper. Butter the bread and sprinkle thickly with the ground peanuts. A lettuce leaf may be added or some good dressing. These are a fine addition to any lunch box.

WIDER GROW THE SKIRTS.

This frock was displayed in a smart shop and as both design and the material in which this was developed were of much practical beauty it has been selected as a fashion hint for today. Sand-colored crepe de chine was the material used and though pretty enough for semi-festive occasion it was not perishable nor easily soiled. A dainty addition was the fine cream lace which served as vest and brightness was contributed by the bands of gilt braid which bound the sleeves at the hand and headed the collar and wide belt. The collar and shield are of cream net—the girdle of the material. The folds on the skirt were made of the crepe.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Can You Guess It?

Of course you guessed the cunning FOX as easy as could be,
So put your thinking cap on once again,
And tell me quickly as you can what animal it is
That's quite ferocious and lives in a den.

Although it's very clumsy and awkward, it can climb
A tree as well as any boy you'll find;
And though it has four legs, this creature sometimes stands up straight,
And walks upon the two that are behind.

It's found in many climates, sometimes away up north.
The different kinds have different sorts of meals;
Some of the family live on roots, on honey and on ants,
And those up north are fond of fish and seals.

And here's a thing that's [illegible] when winter comes along,
This creature gets inside his cozy den,
And then curls up and sleeps and sleeps the whole long winter through,
And wont come out until it's spring again.

Some members of the family have fur of black or brown;
The ones up in the north have fur of white;
The grizzly ones are most ferocious, so if you should meet
One of this kind, just run with all your might.

I cannot bear to think perhaps you may not guess him right,
Or not guess him at all, which would be worse,
So I will tell you this much, if you'll look you'll find his name
Right in the very first line of this verse.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

"DEFAMER," SHE SAYS OF J. A. MATTHEWS.

FORMER ASSEMBLYMAN, DECLARES MISS RICHARDS, GAVE LOW VIEW OF WOMANKIND IN ANTI TALK.

SEES "BRAIN DEMOCRACY AFTER WAR.

Miss Janet E. Richards, of Washington, gave last night, the closing talk in a series on "Vital Questions of the Day,' under the auspices of the Contemporary, of Newark, at Wallace Hall.

She said, "I marvel that it is possible that here in New Jersey, in the United States of America, for a man like your former statesman, John A. Matthews, to make a speech like he did last night in Plainfield, when he defamed womankind and appealed to a low standard in an attempt to show under woman's right to the ballot next fall. It is a safe guess that there are some men here who cannot realize the feeling of resentment and humiliation felt by the women who are doing their best to aid the race and being compelled to pay even income taxes and yet are classed with idiots, convicts and the insane."

—Newark Evening News, Feb. 27, 1915.

MISS RICHARDS REGRETS HER ATTACK ON MATTHEWS.

Miss Janet E. Richards, of Washington, took occasion during her lecture before the a'Kempis, Saturday night, in the Montclair Club Hall, to announce publicly that she regretted she had been "misquoted" in saying that former Asemblyman John A. Matthews defamed womankind, and appealed to a low standard in a recent anti-suffrage speech, in an attempt to prevent women from getting the rigat to the ballot next fall.

"What I meant to say was that I, as a woman and a taxpayer, resented being classed with idiots, criminals and the insane," she declared.

Miss Richards said she had met Mr. Matthews in debate and knew perfectly that he, as an ardent Anti-Suffragist, had the highest regard for womankind.

Miss Richards supplemented her public repudiation of her quoted remarks in a telegram she sent to Mr. Matthews at his home in this city. In her message she wrote: "Deeply regret false reports of my remarks about you in today's Newark papers. Shall make public correction at Montclair lecture this evening."

Miss Richards mentioned the News among other papers as having "misquoted" her. A careful effort made by this newspaper to ascertain the truth of what Miss Richards said in her comment upon Mr. Matthews last Friday night resulted in verifying the accuracy of the report as published in its columns.

Further than that, Miss Richards apparently realizing she had said something under stress of feeling that she did not feel disposed to remain responsible for, requested the reporters present to expunge the name of Mr. Matthws from the notes, which invitation they refrained from accepting.

—Newark Evening News, March 1, 1915.

Some Inconsistencies.

There are many an frequent accusations made by Suffragists of connection of the Antis with liquor and general vice interests, and as many and frequent claims made by Suffragists of the combined efforts of women toward the abolishing of all evils, which would automatically follow the granting of the ballot in each State.

There are many evidences that the latter claims are as false and unfounded as the former, as the following words of Miss Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Woman Suffrage Association, would prove regarding prohibition:

"Despite the conflicting statements of Anti-Suffragists, the Suffrage Associations of the United States have never taken any stand upon the question of government control of the liquor traffic.

"Just what the position of women voters upon the liquor problem will be has never been guessed, much less stated by suffrage associations.

"The opinion of individual Suffragists are as varied as those of an equal number of Anti-Suffragists. But Suffragists as a whole are in no sense responsible for individual opinions."

When Miss Alice Carpenter was asked at a recent meeting in Trenton, "What proof Suffragists could offer of any connection between the Anti-Suffragists and the liquor interests,' she replied that she "Did not know that there was any proof."

Suffragists, individually, or as a body have never given proof on this matter, as there is none, and when demand is made by the Antis for it they become silent. As to the veracity of the oft-repeated claims of the Suffragists that prohibition will automatically follow the granting of suffrage to women, we have in addition to Miss Shaw's statements quoted above, the report of Dr. Helen Sumner of the failure of the women to vote for it. Dr. Sumner is an ardent (but truthful) Suffragist, and quotes the women among other reasons as saying that "they declined to vote for a losing issue." Until November last, when four States voted dry, there was but one suffrage State in which prohibition prevailed. This State was Kansas, which had prohibition for 20 years before the women had the vote. It has taken 21 years of woman suffrage in Colorado before it voted dry, and its capital, Denver, went wet by a large majority.

As against this record place the fact that are now twelve male suffrage States dry, and we need not, surely, give all credit to the women of these four suffrage States. We do believe, however, that woman's influence largely affected the vote in those States, through existing and legitimate channels, conspicuously the W. C. T. U.

Despite the admissions of the above named Suffragists, a lawsuit is pending against a Montana paper, brought by Mrs. O. D. Oliphant, of Trenton. This lawsuit is based upon the publication of a Suffragist's poem containing libelous statements, among them that 'Mrs. Oliphant is a supporter of the whisky interests." These points are clear on their own showing. "All Suffragists do not think alike on the issue of prohibition" (Miss Shaw); "There is no proof of any conpection between the Anti-Suffragists and the liquor interests" (Miss Carpenter); The women in the suffrage States "decline to vote on a losing issue" (Dr. Helen Sumner). And yet irresponsible persons continue to make charges which they cannot substantiate. Thus we have a foretaste of woman in politics, even in her fight to enter them.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.—Adv.

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples Are Impurities Seeking an Outlet Through Skin Pores.

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear, cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.—Adv.

A Plainfield vs. A New York Account

The advantages to residents of Plainfield and vicinity of maintaining a bank account in The State Trust Company are so numerous that no argument should be necessary to convince those who are now keeping their accounts in New York. Liberal interest rates (3% and 4%), the free collection of out of town checks and New York checking privileges are but a few of the many advantages that such an account affords. On the other hand a New York account means inconvenience in making deposits, charges on out of town checks and in many instances no interest on balances.

We offer our splendid facilities to any one who is willing to overcome habit and profit thereby.

ALBERT L. FORCE CALLED BY DEATH

Founder of the Plainfield Daily Press Succumbs to Complication of Diseases.

WAS ILL MANY MONTHS

His Paper the First to Suggest Grover Cleveland for Second Term as President—Daughter and a Sister Only Surviving Relatives.

Albert Lewis Force, founder of the Daily Press and its proprietor for twenty-five years, died last night at his home on Duer street, following an illness which dates back a year. The primary ailment was heart trouble, and various complications followed until the end. His condition first became serious last October, and he had been confined to the house for severeal months. His many relatives became aware several days ago that the end was near, although he was semi-conscious until the last.

Albert L. Force.

Albert L. Force was born in this city in April, 1846, and was therefore in his sixty-ninth year. He was the son of the late James Lewis Force and Mary Laing Force. His boyhood home was on what was then a little island near Farragut road and East Front street, most of the ground in that vicinity years ago beieng surrounded by water. His mother's homestead was at Watchung avenue and East Second street, the residence only recently being torn down after Mr. Force sold the property to the government for the new Post Office site.

Mr. Force, who established the Daily Press twenty-eight years ago, retired from active work January 1, 1912, when the paper was sold to the Plainfield Press Company.

In addition to the Daily Press, which has had a prosperous career, the sale included the Constitutionalist, which was published weekly.

Mr. Force was the dean of editors in this section of the State, having become one forty-eight years ago. When but twelve years of age he started to learn the printing business, obtaining a job as "printer's devil" on the Plainfield Gazette, owned by Charles Wilson. The plant was located on the second floor of the present site of the Scheuer building, on West Front street.

Four years later he went to work on the Plainfield Union, of which Milton F. Cushing was the editor. The Union plant was on the second floor of the Gloeckner building at Front and Somerset streets. There he stayed for three years, and then went to Gray & Green's printing shop at Frankfort and Jacob streets, New York, where his brother, the late William L. Force, was also employed. That was during the Civil War. Subsequently he worked at Harrison's printing shop, over old Cob Web Hall, on Duane street, near Broadway.

In January, 1867, Mr. Force and his brother formed a partnership in the printing business in Plainfield. Their shop was on the site of Moraller Brothers' store on Park avenue. One year later they started the Weekly Constitutionalist as a Democratic newspaper. The firm's business grew so rapidly that Andrew Vanderbeek, the owner of the property, built the present structure at Park and North avenues purposely for the concern, which has ever since occupied it.

In May, 1887, Force Brobers founded the Daily Press, conducting it in conjunction with the Weekly Constitutionalist. The paper was Democratic and, according to a letter from Grover Cleveland in the possession of Mr. Force at the time of his death, the Daily Press was the first paper to boom Mr. Cleveland for a second term as President. On numerous occasions it has raised large funds for charitable causes and worthy objects here and in other places. Its career has been unusually prosperous.

Mr. Force had been an active member of Trinity Reformed church for a quarter of a century, and for two decades was one of its elders and deacons. He was a member of Jerusa-

30,000 BELGIAN BABIES ARE IN NEED OF MILK

Pathetic Appeal Being Sent Out for Little Ones Born Since War Started.

More than 30,000 babies born in desolated Belgium since the war began need milk, according to the latest appeal made by the Belgian Relief Fund. An eyewitness describes a scene as follows:

"I stood one morning at the back door of an army cook-camp watching a group of Belgian women grubbing through the trash-heap. All these women carried babies in their arms.

"'What are they doing?' I asked a sergeant.

"'Scraping our condensed milk cans,' said the sergeant. 'It's the only way to get milk for their babies. I have seen them run their fingers around the inside of a can which looked as bright as a new coin and hold them in the babies' mouths to suck. My company has been getting along a good deal without much milk in the coffee and giving it to these poor women:—we are mostly family men. But it's little we can do. So much is needed.'"

Words cannot tell the story of the famine-time, war-time babies born to the homeless, helpless mothers in that desolated land amid ruins, in fields, in shattered churches, charred cottages, refugee camps—into the crash and horrors, and alarms and devastation of war, into homelessness, and into winter and famine.

But the heart of the story is this: they need milk they are crying and suffering and dying. Certainly you will be unwilling to let these little ones starve, by hundreds, possibly thousands, without your having made an effort to help in this, the world's greatest work for human salvage. Many of them will perish unless cash for producing condensed milk is contributed at once.

How terribly changed life's outlook since, those few months ago in the homes of that then prosperous, industrious land, the mothers looked forward with maternal hope and confidence and love. They still hope, struggle and endure, but the fight is very hard. They are sadly worn in body and mind—utterly destitute. They have been getting only the barest living ration, if that—only a little food doled out daily through the bread lines.

For even this they have been very grateful, because they want to live for their babies and for little Belgium. Even the frightful trials of war have not killed their hope that they again will see the fathers, sons and brothers who were swept away by the hurricane of conflict and that they will have their country once more for their very own.

Surely there never was a call more heart-aching.

The local branch of the Relief Commission is trying to get together another $310, which buys 4,800 cans of condensed milk. About $175 of this money is now in hand, and contributions for the balance will gladly be received by the Daily Press, Miss E. B. Hartridge or Mrs. Frederick W. Wallace. Any amount from five cents up will be welcomed.

LOCAL AMATEURS TO GIVE PLAY FOR BELGIAN RELIEF

Plans are under way by a number of well known local amateur performers to give two plays probably during this month for the benefit of the local Belgian Relief Fund. Most of those who are taking part are members of the Comedy Club of Plainfield, and the Belgian Relief Committee will aid in the selling of tickets and in the preparation of the stage. Some of the well known amateurs who will take part are Brown Rolston, Charles H. Lyman, Mrs. Maxwell E. Perkins, Miss Helen Joy, Mrs. Serrell and Hugh Jarvis. Further plans will be announced later, and the complete cast given.

ISSUES NEW PLANIFIELD MAP.

A revised edition of the map of Plainfield has been prepared by the State Trust Company. These maps are printed in colors, have a street index, show the location of schools, churches, public buildings, fire alarm boxes, house numbers, etc., and will be found very useful. FINE PRODUCTION BY P. H. S. JUNIOR CLASS

School Pupils Appeared in "Strongheart" Saturday Night.

One of the ablest presentations ever made by Plainfield High School third year talent was given in the auditorium of that institution Saturday, by the junior class pupils. This year's playlet, entitled "Strongheart," was excellently adapted to the class of actors and actresses who took the various roles and the production went off without a single hitch. A large and thoroughly appreciative audience witnessed the affair and the rapturous rounds of applause accorded the members of the cast was ample evidence of the enthusiasm with which the play was received.

Taking the part of "Strongheart," Herbert Peacock displayed a degree of performing that is seldom exhibited by a schoolboy and appeared to be exactly fitted to the role he portrayed. He had many long speeches to make and delivered them in a finished style. His co-worker, Miss Ruth Voorhees, taking the leading feminine role, "Dorothy," also played her part exceptionally well, especially in the latter part.

Much credit for the success of the affair is due to Harold F. Biddie, a P. H. S. instructor, who coached the amateur performers.

MOUNTED TROOP FOR PLAINFIELD

Plan is to Divide Military Body Between This City and Hoboken.

PROPOSITION FAVORED

Local Organization Would Be a Part of Troop D, First Squadron Cavalry N. J. N. G.—Governor Fielder's Approval is Awaited.

Plans are well under way for the organization in Plainfield of a mounted troop to be under the control of the State militia, as stated exclusively in the Daily Press last week. If they are approved by Governor Fielder and the State military authorities, Troop D, of the First Squadron Cavalry, N. J. N. G., of which Major W. B. Bryant is the commander, will be divided between Plainfield and Hoboken.

The local organization would have one officer (a first or second lieutenant), three sergeants, three corporals, and twenty-three privates, which would be quartered in and conduct its drills and school of instruction in Plainfield, making it practically a local organization. It would be a part of Troop D for administrative purposes. This plan has the approval of Major Bryant, and, it is believed, will be favored by Governor Fielder.

After the matter was considered, Major Bryant and Lieutenant A. G. Borden, adjutant of the First Squadron and acting captain of Troop D, went to Trenton and held a conference with Adjutant-General Sadler, who also expressed his approval of the plans. He requested Major Bryant and Lieutenant Borden to put their plan and request in writing, and he would take the matter up with the Governor. A favorable reply is now being awaited.

Daniel Runkle, who served over five years as a member of Squadron A, of New York, and Brown Rolston, J. Whitney Baker and J. M. Charles, who have also served in Squadron A, are promoting the local organization. The idea is to use the Plainfield Horse Show grounds as a place for drilling, while the horses could also be stabled there. There is ample room under the large grandstand to keep the equipment. It is also proposed to draw on Westfield, Cranford, Somerville and Bound Brook for eligible recruits., and there does not seem to be any doubt but that the required number of men can be secured at once.

Those who have taken the initiative in the matter are anxious to complete the details of organization as soon as possible, and would be glad to hear from persons willing to join the troop. Mr. Runkle, in speaking of the work of the organization, said that those who are contemplating joining should realize that it means plenty of hard work, and that it is not play in any sense of the word.

It was the original plan to organize a mounted machine platoon, with one officer, twenty-six enlisted men, an equipment of two Maxim rapid-fire guns, twenty-six riding horses and eight pack horses. When this was suggested to Major Bryant he was inclined to favor it, but an investigation showed that the tables of organization at Washington made it impracticable. The Buureau of Military Affairs does not provide for a machine gun unit, except as a part of a full regiment, and then only a permanent detail and not a separate organization. As there is no full regiment in the State, that plan had to be abandoned.

MOBILIZATION OF GERMANS DESCRIBED

Prof. W. B. Honeyman Pictures Scenes in Austria at Outbreak of War.

An interesting account of what follows among the civil populace when a nation declares war, was given in the German Reformed church, last night, by Prof. W. B. Honeyman, principal of the South Eighth Street Public School, Newark. Mr. Honeyman and his wife were in Innsburch, Austria, late in July when the realization came that the country was on the verge of a conflict and the scenes were such as never to be forgotten. The people thronged the public squares eager for news, bands played, everybody sang and waved flags and to those not directly concerned it seemed as if they were mad with joy.

Mr. Honeyman and his party proceeded from Innsburch, to Munchen, Bavaria, the trip being much hours late because of congestion, and they were in the latter city when the government officially declared martial hostilities. The scenes at Innsburch were repeated only on a larger scale, and when Cologne, on the Rhine, was reached, militarism ruled everything. All civil traffic on the railroads was suspended to permit the transportation of troops and Mr. Honeyman pictured the trains loaded with soldiers and cannon in a vivid manner. For days at a time troop trains followed each other in close succession, all gaily decorated with flags and flowers, and the troopers singing patriotic songs much the same as they would on a picnic. The Newarkers finally secured passage to Holland, being compelled to leave their baggage behind and after a few days in the latter country, mingling with the first Belgian refugees, they were permitted to embark from Amsterdam on a Holland-American steamer for New York. Their baggage followed three weeks later even to the smallest article, but showing that it had been thoroughly examined before being marked with the official seal.

Mr. Honeyman declared that the feeling of the Germans is one of absolute confidence when reference to the future is made. They faithfully adhere to the oft-expressed statement that "They cannot lose," asserting that their cause is just and right. Mothers give up their husbands and sons, and young women their sweethearts without shedding a tear, consoling themselves with the thought that the Kaised and the Fatherland needs them and that they must die if necessary in order that others might live.

Mr. Honeyman's address was in German.

VOWS HE'S INNOCENT BUT COURT THINKS OTHERWISE

Charged with a serious offense, Albert Rodgers, a well known local negro, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court this morning, and following a lengthy hearing in which much testimony was presented, he was ordered committed to the Union County jail at at Elizabeth to await the action of the Grand Jury in default of $1,000 bail. This was the second arraignment of the accused, the local magistrate taking considerable pains to ascertain the true merits of the charge.

The prisoner steadfastly maintained that he was innocent and hinted at a "frame-up." The complainant, who is said to be fourteen years of age, was equally as staunch in claiming that Rodgers was the guilty party. He was arrested by Sergeant Higgins who took him to the county jail this morning to await trial.

TURKISH GOV'T MOVES

Headquarters Shifted to Asia Minor—Heard Firing of Big Guns Off Hook of Holland—Slight Gains Made in Belgium.

Rome, March 8—The Turkish forts guarding the entry of the Gulf of Smyrna, have been completely silenced by the bombardment of the French and British fleets, while mines have been swept from the channel. The bombardment of Smyrna continued yesterday and the population is fleeing.

Constantinople, March 8 (via Berlin and Amsterdam)—The following official statement was issued today:

"Six hostile warships bombarded the forts of the Dardanelles Straits yesterday afternoon. Our batteries replied successfully and put out of action a French cruiser. An English cruiser was badly damaged. No damage was suffered by the Turkish batteries, whose gunners demonstrated their effective marksmanship. When the French cruiser retired from the battle line she appeared to be in flames."

Sofia, March 8—The Turkish Government wil be removed to Asia Minor on Thursday, according to a message brought here from Constantinople by courier today. It states that ex-Sultan Abul Hamid has been removed by the young Turks to Konia to prevent a revolution aiming to restore him to the throne.

Amsterdam, March 8—Continual gunfire is audible from the westward at the Hook of Holland this morning, according to despatches from that point. The firing is declared to be that of heavy guns.

The American steamer Henry Williams, for which some fears had recently been felt, arrived safely at Ymuiden and sailed for Bremen, Germany.

Paris, March 8—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon.

"In Champagne nothing of importance occured. The gain made has been increased. At the end of yesterday we had in addition, captured some trenches northwest of Souain. The trenches taken by us between Perthes and Beausejour represent from 400 to 500 yards. We captured some prisoners among whom were numerous officers.

"In the region of the Heights of the Meuse, our heavy artillery, according to stories told by the prisoners, seriously damaged a 42 centimetre cannon recently placed there as a battery by the enemy. That piece had to be dismounted and sent to the rear for repairs. Four men in the crew of this gun were killed and seven wounded.

"In Lorraine we have advanced to the north of Badonvillier. In the Vosges at Reichacker Kopt, the Germans made a violent counter attack at 5 p. m. yesterday. They were able for an instant to gain a foothold upon the crest, but after a furious hand to hand conflict, our Chasseurs drove them out. The Chasseurs are now wholly masters of Reichecker Kopf. The losses suffered by the enemy were extremely heavy.

"In Upper Alsace to the south of the station of Burnhaupt, an attempted attack against our advance positions was dispersed by our infantry fire."

Berlin, March 8 (by wireless)—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"Western theatre—Aviators of the enemy hurled bombs upon Ostend yesterday. The battles in Champagne continue. Last night the enemy was repulsed at Souain after a hand to hand engagement. Hostilities were resumed during the night.

"In the district east of Les Mesnil, an attack made by the enemy in the afternoon failed completely. Our night counter attack was successful. We captured 140 French prisoners.

"We repulsed attacks at Priestwelde, northwest of Font a Mousson, in the Vosges west of Muenster, and north of Rencheim. These engagements had not yet been completed.

Rev. Mr. Telford, of Rome, Ga., had charge of the services yesterday in the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church. In the morning the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed. In spite of the weather there was a good attendance at both the morning and evening services, and also at the Sunday-school. In the evening the girls' chorus sang "Father Divine."

The surrounding country was a veritable fairyland, Saturday and Sunday, in its dress of snow. The trees everywhere, twigs, bushes, and everything was laden with snow. A number enjoyed sleighing late in the evening and early Sunday morning.

In spite of the snow Saturday evening a goodly number were present at the entertainment given by the Ladies' Auxiliary in the "Mill." The entertainment included a selection from "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," by Miss Clara I. Harris; contralto and bass solos by Miss Nora M. Koons and Edward F. Bodine, with Charles E. Spier as an accompanist, and a sketch, "The Scheme that Failed," which was cleverly acted by all who took part, and a great deal of credit is due to their coach, Charles Child Wheeler. After the entertainment a social hour was enjoyed by all.

After a great deal of argument and waiting, it is said that the Board of Freeholders will start work on the widening of Westfield avenue as soon as the necessary funds are obtained. The matter has been hanging fire for more than a year and residents of that thoroughfare have even appeared in court in an effort to have several feet frontage of their property used for the improvement.

Owing to the heavy fall of snow, not much could be accomplished on Saturday afternoon, when the members of the Township Committee, a representative of the P. S. C. and Freeholder Hall went over Westfield avenue in an effort to decide on necessary repairs. Following many complaints, the Township Committee is making strenuous efforts to have the street put in a condition for traffic, and to do this it will be necessary to have the roadbed both between the trolley track rails and on either side repaired. Either by installing an open culvert or putting in another drainage pipe along the present one, the Committee hopes to eliminate the condition at the corner of Westfield road and Park avene after every rain.

Plans are being made for a Sunday-school social to be held in the Willow Grove chapel the latter part of the week.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE IN HOME OF JOHN BRIZZIE

A fire, the origin of which is not known, was discovered by John Brizzie, in the cellar of his home, at 94 Fairview avenue, yesterday morning, when he went there to look after his furnace. The blaze had made considerable headway through the partitions, and had so affected the telephone wires that it was necessary to go to a neighboring house to telephone fire headquarters.

When the department arrived the flames had spread to such an extent that the whole house was threatened. The firemen found it necessary to chop a hole in the side of the house to extinguish the blaze. The damage is estimated at about $100.

WHAT THE EXTRA TRAINMAN COSTS

Adds $2566 a Year to Expense of a Through Passenger Express.

Philadelphia, March 8.

Figures have been prepared by the Executive Committee of the twenty-one railroads of Pennsylvania and New Jersey working for repeal of the Full Crew —"excess man crew"— Laws, which show in striking way just what it costs to carry an unnecessary man on a train. For example, the excess man on the Broadway Limited, the fastest train which the Pennsylvania Railroad operates between New York and Chicago, makes an added operating cost of $2566 a year for that part of its run between New York and Pittsburgh. That amount is the wages at $7.03 for each trip.

At no time does this high speed, virtually no stop train, have less than nine men on it, not counting the engineer and fireman. Between New York and Pittsburgh it makes only three stops. This is but an illustration of the cost in a specific case of the unnecessary man.

It illustrates the fact that the excess brakeman forced on trains by the present law adds in operating costs of nearly $2600 a year for each of the fine through western passenger trains run by the railroads. He has little or nothing to do, as any passenger can readily see; neither is he needed on the train either for operating efficiency or safety. Very rarely does any member of the train crew have to leave one of these through trains except at the regular stops, and there, with assistance of the Pullman men, only to see passengers get on and off in comfort.

The effect which these extra trainmen have on the expense accounts of the railroads is shown very clearly in the gross amounts which have been paid to them by eighteen out of the twenty-one railroads operating in Pennsylvania and New Jersey since the laws became effective. Thus in Pennsylvania a total of $4,842,801 has been paid and in New Jersey, where the law became effective May 1, 1913, $642,676 has been paid, making a total in the two states of $5,485,477.

Public support of the proposition for repeal of the Full Crew—"excess man crew"—Laws is rolling up to great proportions. Action has been taken by boards of trade, chambers of commerce, manufacturers' and industrial clubs, city councils and business men's associations in both New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

In Pennsylvania resolutions for repeal have been adopted by such as the Philadelphia Bourse, the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, the Commercial Club of that city, which has a membership of 1100; the Philadelphia Milk Exchange and by farmers' organizations of Union county and other parts of the state. Indicating the unanimous character of such action, it may be stated that the Media Civic Association voted 213 to 1, and that a referendum vote on the proposition being taken by the Williamsport Board of Trade has so far resulted 155 to 6 in favor of repeal.

In New Jersey very emphatic action has been taken for repeal of the law in that state by resolutions passed by boards of trade and chambers of commerce in such chief cities as Newark, Paterson, Passaic, Jersey City and Trenton.

These various business organizations of the two states are also working through their members to impress upon the legislatures the general public demand for repeal of laws which have resulted in no good, but on the contrary have put unnecessary burdens upon the people.

Fair to All—the People, the Trainmen, the Railroads

The present Full Crew—"excess man crew"—Law is all it should not be. This the railroads know—this its effect demonstrates. Actively supported by Chambers of Commerce, the railroads have caused to be introduced at Trenton a bill to repeal this law. It gives to the Public Utility Commissioners new and greater powers to make certain that trains are manned for safety and efficiency of operation.

In a nutshell, the railroads ask the people to repeal a measure which has been proved to be ineffective and burdensome. In return, they offer to put in the hands of the people far greater power for protection of the public and railroad employes than the Full Crew Law gives. This bill will put the public in the strongest possible position to enforce, if necessary, the questions of safety and efficiency upon any railroad that happens to be derelict. It provides:

"In addition to the powers now given to, and the duties required of, the Board of Public Utility Commissioners granted and required by the act to which this is a supplement, said Commissioners shall have power to require any railroad company, its officers or agents, receiver, or any person or persons doing business in this State, and operating any railroad, either for the hauling of passengers or freight, to determine the number of trainmen, or other men, to be hired to operate such passenger and freight trains, provided such passenger trains are composed of more than three cars, and such freight train is composed of more than six cars; and such Commissioners may make orders and rules for the operating of such trains as they shall deem needful."

This proposed amendment does away with any doubt that may exist in the public mind as to the purpose of the railroads to faithfully perform their every obligation to the State and the people.

New Jersey has a Board of Public Utility Commissioners, charged with the safety of the traveling public and the supervision of railroads. The railroads ask the people—with no motive other than assuring the utmost safety, service and economy of operation—to give now additional power to these Commissioners and to leave to their discretion the proper manning of trains.

Make them freer to pass upon all questions which it is their duty to decide. Their rulings will be equitable and fair to all concerned—the people, the trainmen, the railroads. This can be done only by repeal of the unjust Full Crew Law, and the repeal of this law rests entirely with the people. They sent their representatives to Trenton. They are entitled to sound legislation.

The railroads, therefore, request the people to instruct their elected representatives to repeal this law, thereby making it possible for the Public Utility Commissioners to perform the functions they are paid to perform. The fairness of this request is obvious.

Plainfield, N. J., March 8, 1915.

ALBERT L. FORCE.

Plainfield loses a citizen who has been identified with the growth of the city and borough for nearly fifty years in the death of Albert L. Force, former publisher of the Daily Press. Modest and retiring he exerted an influence in the community that was second to none, and that influence was always for the good and welfare of the whole people. There was not a charitable or civic movement that did not have the undivided support of Mr. Force through the columns of the Daily Press, and during his twenty-five years as publisher of the paper it then, as now, took the lead in all matters of interest to the citizens.

Under Mr. Force's initiative thousands of dollars were raised for various local charities, and at times of national and world wide calamities. There was never an appeal to him personally for a worthy cause that did not find a ready response. Trinity Reformed church members will always think of him as the donor of the splendid organ now in use, which was originally erected as a memorial to his devoted wife, but will be equally as well a memorial of the donor.

Mr. Force spent forty-four years as a publisher prior to his retirement on January 1, 1912. Nineteen of those years were given to the Constitutionalist, and the rest to that paper and the Daily Press. For years he published the Constitutionalist at an absolute loss for the simple reason that it had started him on his successful career, and he had not the heart to discontinue it. As the influence of the Press grew, that of the Constitutionalist waned, until at the time he disposed of his interests to the present owners, the weekly had but about twenty-five paid subscribers.

Under Mr. Force's conscientious leadership dozens of successful newspaper men were trained, and are now occupying important positions in a broader field. His honorable business and journalist career was an inspiring example to all these men, and many of them recall their training on the Press as bright spots in their lives.

NO COUNTY ALMSHOUSE.

To substitute a county almshouse for the institution now maintained in municipalities to care for the indigent, as advocated by the Union County Charities Aid Societies in a communication to the Board of Freeholders, would be a step in the wrong direction. It would serve to complicate conditions rather than better them. Abolition of an institution like the Plainfield Industrial Home on Rock avenue, (and that would be what the measure would mean), would not only prove a rank injustice to this city, but also to those who have conducted it. The local almshouse is maintained on a thoroughly business-like basis at a minimum expenditure and the method of caring for the poor in Plainfield could not be bettered by the establishment of a county almshouse.

In committing an inmate to a county institution it would be necessary to go through a lot of red tape, such as is now required in transferring prisoners to the county jail and at the same time there is no plausible reason why we should be forced to bear part of the expense entailed in keeping the indigent of other communities. With a county institution it would mean that municipalities in the county which have little or no poor expense would be taxed for the maintenance of the central plant. The municipal almshouse idea has worked out excellently in Plainfield, as it has also in other Union county towns, and no obvious reason has been advanced for the discontinuance of the present system.

Speaker Godfrey, of the House of Assembly, has introduced a bill which will make it possible to combine the present Bureau of Labor Statistics with the Labor Department, retaining in office the present efficient head of the latter department, General Lewis T. Bryant. Mr. Godfrey's measure is one that handles in a sane way one of the proposals for economy, and at the same time continues maximum efficiency in an important State department. The bill has the approval of organizations representing thousands of laboring men and employers in the State, who have signed a "round robin" letter to the Speaker in which they say that "the conduct of the Department of Labor is of vital concern to both interested parties, employers and employes. It is intended to protect life and limb and health at the minimum expense to the former. This object can best be accomplished by preserving and coordinating the present organization which has had the benefit of years of experience in handling problems involving many technical requirements." It is sincerely to be hoped that the Godfrey bill will become a law.

Charles S. Sminck, in an interview in the Daily Press on Saturday night, summed up the situation with regard to schools in the east end of the city. As a possible solution of the problem, if it is found that a new school cannot be placed there on account of the expense, he suggested that some of the frills be eliminated at the High School, and the money thus spent be used for instructing little children in other sections of the city. Mr. Sminck certainly is right in his analysis of the situation, and he speaks for a very large number of residents in the East End. The demand for another school there is urgent, and it should be provided at the earliest possible moment.

We publish in our news columns tonight an article about the crying need for milk by the Belgian babies. The writer tells in a gripping way of the awful conditions which exist there now, and will exist for many months, and possibly for years. Belgium will be the battle ground until the war closes, and the people must not be allowed to starve. One dollar keeps two babies alive for a month and goes half way toward caring for a third. Send along your contribution if it is only a nickel. Every bit will help.

Does advertising pay? Ask some member of the Legislature about the hundreds of letters they have received from persons who have read the advertisements of the railroads who want the full crew law repealed. We said that the railroads would gain more by taking the people into their confidence than they would by hiring a army of lobbyists to work at Trenton, and the prediction has come true.

GAVE $300 CASH BAIL.

A friend of Frank Kreyst, of Summit, who was committed to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury, last week, on a charge of breaking and entering preferred against him by the local authorities, in default of $300 bail, called at police headquarters yesterday afternoon and produced the necessary "long green" to secure the release of the suspected robber. In the words of a minion of the law, the friend, who was evidently a foreigner, had a roll of bills "that would choke a horse" and a little eight-year-old boy with him counted out the necessary bills.

RECORD SNOWFALL FOR THE WINTER OVER THE WEEK-END

Gus Meyer and the rest of the soothsayers who were booming a blizzard over the week-end had their hopes sadly blighted this morning when a decided thaw set in. Despite the fact that seven inches of snow, the largest quantity of the winter, fell Saturday afternoon and night, bearing indications of a blizzard, the storm failed to reach the monstrous proportions predicted, and little, if any, damage was done. While it lasted the storm was similar in many respects to the blizzard of March 12, 1888, and March 1, 1914, except that the weather was milder and the wind less furious.

A number of trees were shorn of their limbs, train and trolley schedules were slightly in arrears, and pedestrians had their troubles attempting to navigate Saturday night, but the clearing weather yesterday morning put to rout the predictions of the wiseacres.

A large tree fell across the trolley tracks on East Fifth street, near Washington street, Saturday night, and it took a wrecking crew an hour to chop the huge trunk in half to clear the road for traffic.

A. L. FORCE CALLED BY DEATH

lem Lodge, No. 2, F. and A. M., and Plainfield Council, No. 11, Royal Arcanum. While he had never held political office, he always had the city's interest at heart, and in his later life was devoted to the work of the Reformed church of America. He was a memeber of the General Synod in 1911, and was also a member of the board of directors of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick.

Mr. Force's two brothers, William L. and James, were both prominent in Plainfield affairs, but have been dead many years. William L., his business partner, expired in 1895 as the result of injuries sustained by a kick from a horse. He is survived by one daughter, Miss Lillian A. Force, who had been his constant companion since the death of his wife in 1910, and one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Prescott, of Brooklyn. Another daughter, Miss Josephine Force, died about twenty-five years ago, and was one of the saddest blows of his life. Beside his daughter and sister, there are the following nephews and nieces surviving: John L. Force, of Rosine Park, and Will F. Dunn, of Berkeley, California; Mrs. Theodore Hardy, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Will R. Williams and Mrs. Ernest A. Millard, of this city.

The funeral will be held at Trinity Reformed church, Wednesday afternoon, at 3:30, and will be in charge of the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, assisted by Rev. Dr. Edward P. Johnson, of New Brunswick. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

DIVORCE DECREE GRANTED.

Mrs. Pauline Hamilton, of Bergen street has been granted a decree of divorce from her husband, John Hamilton, by Chancellor Walker. The divorce was obtained on the ground of desertion. Robert Newton Crane was counsel for the plaintiff. Mrs. Hamilton is awarded the custody of Edward Hamilton, the child of the marriage.

CANDIDATES LIST BEGINS TO GROW

First Publication of Vote Standing Brings Added Interest in Tour Contest.

STILL PLENTY OF ROOM

Although Number of Those Competing Has Increased, Many More Can Enter Lists for Splendid Trip to Panama Pacific Exposition.

Several new candidates for the free tours across the continent to the Pacific coast were added to the list Saturday, and they are candidates full of vim, sparkle and hustle, who will prove splendid contenders in the "race for the exposition" before the final balloting decides the winners in the district.

The opportunity for enrollment is open to all eligible women at any time during the contest. In Saturday's Press see the page showing the standing of the candidates, see what others are doing, consider what you could have already accomplished with little effort if you had but entered when you first thought of it, and then decide that not for another moment will you put it off, but come right down to the Tour Department in the Press office and enroll your name. Inaugurate your campaign, and you will be amazed to find how many people there are who are interested in the contest and just waiting for some candidate to approach them and get votes on their subscriptions.

Keep steadily at it, make the big advances that can be made by any candidate who puts forth the effort, and when the contest closes, you can be numbered among the winners.

Each day adds votes to the standing of nearly all those candidates who have notified their friends that they have entered the contest. Not a tremendous number of votes, but a goodly number, which bids fair to increase materially as the contest advances. It is those who do not let a day go by without some effort who are making the steady advances. It is the regular, earnest, steady workers who finally secure the trip.

As the contest advances the interest will increase and there are several of those one and two-year subscriptions to be had, too. Hundreds of votes for one of these, and a man called up on the 'phone Saturday and asked the tour department to give him the name of a candidate, as he was about to renew his subscription and he did not know for whom to vote. He was told that the tour department could not suggest anyone, but the manager called off the names of several candidates to him. After about the ninth name he asked the address of a certain candidate, and to her he gave his votes. "He had heard his wife speak of her," he said. There was one instance where several hundred votes awaited anyone who might have asked the subscriber. Those votes might just as well have been yours, you know.

The votes in profusion await the candidates. Why not start in and garner a harvest? It means a magnificent tour, taking in the grandest scenery in America, and attendance at the SanDiego Exposition and the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco.

About Dealers and Newsboys.

The management of the Press assures all newsdealers and newsboys that subscription secured by candidates will in no way affect their future business. All regulars readers of the Press who give their subscription to a candidate may rest assured that the same carrier will continue to deliver the Press and will receive the same percentage he has always received.

The above statement is made to settle for all time the argument some candidates report from people they have asked for their subscription; the people in many cases contend that they will either lose their carrier or that the carrier will lose his percentage, and the Press assures everybody that neither will happen.

Candidates May Work in Any Territory They Choose in Securing Subscriptions.

Candidates must be residents in the district from which they enter. They may go into any other district to get the ballots that are printed in the paper and to secure the paid-in-advance subscriptions on which votes in blocks are issued.

There are no conditions that do not apply to all alike. It is a fair field, where the ambitious candidates have an equal chance of winning. As many may enter as comply with the rules of the contest. When you enter, get a campaign manager, or, better still, two campaign managers. Get them to assist you in mapping out a plan of action. Get hold of all the coupons that appear in the Press that you can. Make a list of prospective subscribers. Have your friends use their influence with their friends, and before you know what has happened you will have an endless chain of workers in your behalf.

Careful systematic planning and effort is what will win the Press trips across the continent. A frequent counseling with your campaign managers will prevent misunderstanding of plans. The "everlastingly" at it will secure the trip for you.

If you are a woman over 16 years of age, married or single, you can learn how to make a twenty-three-day midsummer trip across the American continent at the expense of the Press.

One candidate wants to know if it is necessary for her personally to send in the subscriptions. Anyone may send in the subscriptions, but they must be sure to state that the votes are to be credited to whatever candidate they wish them given, and addressed to the contest department.

Everyone Wins.

The management of the Press has decided to be most liberal to the candidates who may enter this contest. In addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all those candidates who do not win trips, and remain active until the end of the contest, a commission of ten per cent. will be paid on new subscriptions, and a five per cent. commission will be paid on old subscriptions.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday until further notice.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

POOR GUARDING RESULTS IN PLAINFIELD'S DOWNFALL IN THIRD ONE-POINT DECISION IN NORTH PLAINFIELD SERIES

Locals Were Pace-setters From Start to Finish and Winners Were Outclassed—"Wren" Townley and "Ronnie" Conroy Played Rings Around Their Opponents.

Without being in the lead more than two seconds out of the 2,400 played, North Plainfield High School basketball players at last accomplished what appeared to be impossible on the Plainfield High School court, Saturday afternoon, taking the local athletes into camp by a [illegible] score. The victory could hardly be more remarkable. It is the third one point decision recorded by these combatants this season, North Plainfield having been on the shorter end in the previous engagements. Up to the time "Wren" Townley tossed the goal that pulled the boroughites from a 37 to 36 disadvantage, the locals had played rings around their foes

It was a game in which North Plainfield stock showed in spasmodic intervals and these stages were short and far between. But it happened to be in just one of these eras, in fact, the one in which the boroughites were the heavier factors, that the whistle, announcing the culmination of the struggle, sounded.

Plainfield played in whirlwind style in the opening period and nearly through the second and, although the pace was a gruelling one both aggregations held on to the bitter end. Plainfield was plainly the stronger, sensational shooting and better all-around playing featuring the local boys' battle. Plainfield was also lucky to escape with the least number of penalty infictions, although the red and blue athletes turned but few into pointers. Every foul called by Referee Leimer, however, was well deserved and his work was the subject for much favorable comment from those who knew the game.

"Wren" Townley and "Ronnie" Conroy, North Plainfield's shooting forwards, can easily be credited with winning the game. Their work was [illegible] out of marvellous and it was Townley's illusiveness in the final [illegible] seconds that baffled Peacock and sent the locals into oblivion. Peacock appeared bewildered throughout the greater part of the issue, Townley plainly keeping him in nervous straits. Wheelan did a little better, but his attempt to help his teammate through some tight places frequently resulted disastrously and his charge bagged a nifty collection of double-suckers.

Rapid fire passing coupled with excellent shooting featured Plainfield's battling and time and again the ball was manipulated around the playing arena without coming in contact with a single North Plainfield hand. The few easy shots allowed the Plainfield forwards by the borough goal preventers, who stuck like glue, were wasted, for the local shooters appeared to be inspired with a peculiar ability to garner sensational baskets and pass up the "sure ones."

When half time was called the locals led by a margin of 20 to 13. It was only right that they should lead for they outplayed the red and black combination by an even wider margin than the score indicates. Just before the curtain was rung down to end the first half North Plainfield engaged in one of its spasmodic revivals and copped a trio of nifty shots in a two-minute period.

Every man on the floor appeared to be in his best form. Each performed pugnaciously and kept up the pace until the last minute.

One regrettable feature of the combat was the divergence in the scores kept by the Plainfield and North Plainfield officials. Every scorekeeper had a different result to offer when the final whistle blew and some discussion followed. It was finally decided by the two captains to accept the verdict of 38 to 37, despite the fact that two other records claimed a tie score, and there the matter was left to rest. Informal arguments ensued, but nothing developed as far as actual protest was concerned.

Every bit of strategy known to the combating forces was brought into use during the fracas. Plainfield's commanding lead forced North Plainfield to assume the defensive and the boroughites appeared to be contented with their lot. The essence of defeat lurked in the momentary letup of the guards, Townley's twenty-five points being recorded for the most part on apparently easy attempts while he was left free under the basket. Rosenson was high man for Plainfield with sixteen tallies.

Unlike the records in previous games between these two teams, the result Saturday indicates that Plainfield was outscored in field goal tallying, the borough forces leading by a margin of 15 to 12.

SIDELINE COMMENT

Although we are well aware of the fact that it's folly to cry over spilt milk" and to "blow one's horn," we can only refer basketball followers to a prediction in the Daily Press sporting columns one day last week for a solution of Saturday's verdict. It read: "If the Plainfield High School guards do not change their style of play, North Plainfield will win out in the third game." The red and blue goal preventers thought they knew best and the result was a victory for the boroughites.

After playing rings around a foe from the start to within a few seconds of the end, and then experience a defeat is well nigh unbearable and you've got to hand it to those P. H. S. boys for the way they accepted their lot. There was not a single murmur of dissatisfaction and the vanquished players were the first ones to congratulate their conquerors.

As is often the case after a championship has been tucked away, the crowd at the game Saturday was far fewer in number than that of the preceding games. There was plenty to root for, however, in the latter stages and those who came got their money's worth and a little more.

"Wren" Townley snatched the individual crown for goal shooting Saturday afternoon, and demonstrated the fact that he's as good as they come in schoolboy circles. The youngster from over the brook rang up twenty-five counters and his aim was the most accurate yet seen in a league game this year.

Those "I told you so fans" will have plenty of material for fireside gossip now that N. P. H. S. came through with a win under a new official. Liemer was well qualified for the job and both sides got a square deal, probably the squarest they have experienced this year. Those few rabid followers who maintained that the penalties heretofore inflicted on their favorites were of the prejudiced variety, however, certainly got a rude bump.

Wonder if the success of the male forces will have any effect on the style of game played by the borough girls Wednesday

Plainfield High School forwards, Saturday, had the peculiar faculty of being able to ring up sensational field goals and pass up apparently easy attempts at double-deckers. If the locals had bagged as many easy tosses as they did hard ones the count would have been vastly different.

As far as fouls were concerned North Plainfield suffered just about twice as many inflictions as the losing side. A large majority were wasted by the shooters, however.

Here resteth the North Plainfield-Plainfield tale until another season blows around.

J. COFFROTH RANKS FITZSIMMONS FIRST AMONG RING CHAMPS OF ALL WEIGHTS

Bob Fitzsimmons, of Dunellen, and his son, Bob., Jr., will be the feature attraction at the charity boxing tournament which will be held tomorrow night in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, the proceeds of which will go for the relief of the poor families of New York.

The veteran fighter consented at once when he was asked to help the benefit by contributing an exhibition bout, but looked dubious when it was suggested that Bob, Jr., should be his opponent.

"Well, you see, the boy and I are on the outs," he said, "and I don't know whether he will be willing. But if he will, why you can just count on me. It isn't right, anyway, for a father and son to be acting like strangers, no matter what their difference of opinion may be, and personally I think we ought to shake hands and make up. That boy of mine is clever all right, and if he'd let me handle him I would make a champion out of him in no time."

"If that's the way dad feels," was the reply of Bob, Jr., when he got the message, "I feel the same way. We'll call the thing off, and I will be just as glad as I know he will be to go on Tuesday night and help along the benefit."

And so tomorrow night Bob and his junior will step into the middle of the "squared circle' and shake hands and forget their difference—at least until one of them lands, and then there may be a different kind of an exhibition, that of a father chastising his son. Of course, if junior is the "white hope" that dad thinks he is, there may be another story. Either way, the spectators will win.

The card for the boxing tournament was completed yesterday. It includes five smashing ring contests of six rounds each, and exhibitions by twenty-four of the world's best fighters of former and present days. In addition to the boxing contests there will be an exhibition of American jiujitsu by two member of the New York Police Department, one of whom—Sergeant Thomas Shaw—is the inventor.

There will also be fifteen minutes of wrestling between George Bothner and Young Hackenschmidt.

MULLIN WILL TAKE N. P. H. S. IN CHARGE

Former Leaguer Expects to Repeat Last Year's Success.

Tommy Mullin, who coached the North Plainfield High School basketball team through a championship season last year, has consented to take charge of the squad again this season. Tommy has decided to stay in this vicinity this year and play week-end ball, as the South has no more attraction for him. He intends taking the borough candidates in hand in about two weeks, and then have two weeks of preliminary practice before the first game is due.

Mullin and Captain Ralph Smalley held a conference Saturday night, and everything was arranged. If a suitable hall can be secured the pitchers will be called for practice within a few days, but only to toss the ball around and get the kinks out of their salary wings. The first game is scheduled for April 3, with Clinton, on the boroughites' field.

Hyde Oval will be used again this year, and with the slight alterations that the Borough Athletic Association is planning to make, the field should be in the best condition it has ever been in.

IMPORTANT GAMES ON THIS WEEK'S SCHEDULE

Both Interscholastic and City Titles Will be at Stake—P. H. S. Concerned.

Although the basketball season is just fading, court fans of this city will have their fill of the indoor game this week, when two important league matches are scheduled to be decided. The first comes Wednesday afternoon, and it will take place on Sengerbund Hall court, between the girls' teams of the Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools. It will be the second of the annual interscholastic matches for the feminine championship of the city. Plainfield already has one win tucked away, and only needs this one to retain the laurels won last season.

The boroughites have been practicing hard, and with their regular line-up, expect to tie-up the series and make a third game necessary. The other big game will take place in the Y. M. C. A. gym, when the association players meet the Plainfield High School team in the second game of the post season series for the championship of this city. The schoolboys also have one game to their credit, and the Y. M. C. A. aggregation must win to keep in the running for the Ritz trophy. This game will be played at night.

MASONIC LEAGUE DATES.

Three matches in the Masonic Bowling League will be played in Plainfield this week, Washington meeting Anchor on the Elk alleys tonight, Jerusalem playing Herrmann tomorrow night and Anchor rolling Essex Wednesday night. Two other matches will be rolled this week: Tyrian and Lafayette hooking up at Elizabeth and Orient playing Azure at Elizabeth Thursday.

CHAMPIONS COMING.

The Elizabeth Y. M. H. A. basketball five, who claim the Jewish State title, will appear in this city against the local Y. M. H. A. team tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. The game will be played in the T. A. B. S. Hall, on West Fourth street, and will undoubtedly be a good one. The locals played Elizabeth at that place the first part of the season and received a walloping.

BOROUGH BOWLING LIST.

The following schedule is announced for the borough one-man tourney this week: Tuesday, Mentzbach vs. Luthman, Connolly vs. M. Ferrero; Wednesday, G. Conover vs. V. Lee and Lewis vs. Miller; Thursday, Thorn vs. Kunzman and Voorhees. Ferrero has taken the place of Fred Baker in the tournament.

Y. W. C. A. WILL HOOK WITH TRENTONIANS

Game This Year Will Be Staged in Columbus Club Hall.

The annual basketball game which everyone connected with the Y. W. C. A. is looking forward to is the one scheduled for the evening of March 27, in Columbus Hall. The Y. W. C. A. girls will lineup against their Trenton rivals on that date in a double header attraction. Considerable interest is centered in the outcome of this game which is a yearly event with the locals and always looked forward to. Last month, the Plainfield aggregation was defeated by a narrow margin in a rough contest staged on the Trenton court, in which several of the Plainfielders were injured. In the second encounter the home maidens anticipate to reverse the final score and send the visitors home with a defeat.

The Trenton girls have given a fine account of themselves this year, winning the majority of their games. The local quintet's schedule included very few games, but a good showing was made in every contest.

"Dot" Hayes, the versatile forward on the Trenton team will again appear before the Plainfield public. Many will recall her spectacular shots in the game last year. Three of last year's players will appear in the lineup.

The Misses Ida and Helen Hummel will keep their usual positions at forward and everyone knows the wonderful combination these two sisters are in the basketball field. In the Misses Marion Mair and Clara Smith, Plainfield has two of the best guards in the State. Miss Ellen Doughty will have the jumping position on the home team.

The contest will be played in fifteen minute halves, one period being with lines and one without.

As a preliminary to the Trenton-Y. W. C. A. game two local sextets are being secured to appear on the floor. Tickets for the games are on sale and can be secured from any of the players or at the association.

NO MORE GAMES FOR HOPE CHAPEL TEAM

Manager Allan Snyder, of the Hope Chapel basketball team, has decided to cancel the remainder of the games on his schedule. Last week's spring weather evidently gave his crew the baseball fever, and they have become tired of the court game. Hope has played one of its longest schedules this season, scarcely missing a Saturday night or a holiday.

The team has also made a good record, winning the majority of its games. The city championship title was lost this season, but the Fourth street aggregation will go after it again next year. The members of the Hope association are already beginning baseball talk, and plans for the coming season will be made soon.

N. P. H. S. ON SCHEDULE.

North Plainfield appears twice on the baseball list of the Kearny High School, the first game to be played in Kearny on April 28. A return match is scheduled for Saturday, May 8. Westfield will open Kearny's season at Westfield, on April 10.

RED TEAM WINS OVER ORANGE COMBINATION

The Red and Orange teams, of the Y. M. C. A. Color League, hooked up the preliminary contest at the associa Saturday night, and the former took the game by the score of 33 to 13. The Orange players never had a chance to win the game, their opponents having a big lead at all times.

The first half ended with the score standing 11 to 7, but as soon as the second period started, Ricketts commenced to throw the ball in from all angles, and made six field goals in this half. The scores follow:

HIGH SCORE MADE BY Y. M. C. A. TEAM

Hope Chapel Five Unable to Stop Association Forwards Saturday Night.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team scored an easy victory over the Hope Chapel five on the Y. M. C. A. court Saturday night, and made its highest total count of the year. The final score was 82 to 21, both the team and individual high score marks being broken. The association players worked together the best they have this season, and Harry Moulton took the scoring honors, getting a total of 21 field goals and one foul for 43 points.

Moulton barely missed a shot in the second period, getting 15 goals from play. The entire Y. M. C. A. squad was put into the game, and all contributed to the score. The score follows:

TRAPSHOOTERS HOLD ANNUAL GATHERING

Log Cabin Gun Club Members at Banquet Held in the Queen City.

Members of the Log Cabin Gun Club held their annual meeting and banquet in the Queen City Hotel, Saturday night, the affair being one of the greatest successes ever held under that club's auspices. The dinner was largely attended and a thoroughly enjoyable program of informal entertainment, speeches and presentations was indulged in.

Reports for the year were submitted and the entire roster of officers responded to short toasts. "Trapshooting" appeared to be the keynote of discussion and considerable comment was evoked concerning this particular phase of the club's work. The president of the club, David G. Weems, made a short after-dinner speech and at the culmination of his talk he was presented with a trophy cabinet, in which were installed miniatures of the numerous prizes Mr Weems has won in various tourneys He is an expert with the gun and has captured many awards in local and State competition.

It was announced at the banquet that a return match had been arranged with the Baltusrol Gun Club, to be held on the local range, Saturday, March 20. The officers of the club are: President, David G.Weems, secretary, Marion Ackerman, treasurer, Harry Butler.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

By special arrangement for the Daily Press a photo-drama corresponding to the installments of "Runaway June," may now be seen at Proctor's Front Street Theatre each Thursday. By arrangement made with the Mutual Film Company it is not only possible to read "Runaway June" each week, but also afterward to see moving pictures illustrating our story.

EIGHTH EPISODE.

Her Husband's Enemies.

CHAPTER I.

THE beautiful runaway bride opened her eyes in dazed bewilderment to find herself gazing up into the dark, handsome face of the black Vandyked man. She was in his arms. She felt another clasp about her—the man with the white mustache. Gilbert Blye gently released his hold of her, and the white mustached man turned to carry her up the hill. Her eyes closed again.

Gilbert Blye, freed of his beautiful burden, hurried up the embankment to where his luxurious limousine stood by the side of the broken rail. As he jumped into the driver's seat and put his foot on the clutch and his hand on the brake he glanced down at the scene of the accident. The taxi leaned against a sturdy tree which had stopped it from a fatal tumble. Blye's chauffeur, the wide featured Scatti, was bringing up the unconscious driver of the taxi. The vivacious brunette and the heavy man with the thick lidded eyes were helping Mrs. Villard. That gentle faced woman had insisted upon walking, but she came with a painful limp, and her face was drawn and white. Blye started the car forward with a jerk, turned it dextrously in the narrow road and, jumping down, arranged the cushions with a swiftly certain hand.

When June again opened her eyes Blye was brushing back her soft brown hair from her pale forehead, but he was not holding her. She was in the luxurious limousine, with her head pillowed on the shoulder of the white mustached man, Orin Cunningham, and his arm was about her. She straightened as she became aware of that clasp, and Blye, his black eyes glowing down upon her, smiled reassuringly. The car started, and she turned to look at Mrs. Villard, who sat beside her with compressed lips. The injured taxi driver was up in front, supported by the heavy lidded man. The runaway bride closed her eyes again and sank back into the support which she so much detested.

Blye! How much he had been in her life since she had run away from Ned! And little did June know that Ned, through his detective, had obtained the number of the auto in which she had driven that day. The number was M007707.

Soon June lay in her little room in the hospital, her hair waving about her on the white pillow, and her friends were permitted to bid her good night. The vivacious Tommy Thomas sat at the head of her bed and stroked June's white hand; Orin Cunningham, a particularly debonair figure as he leaned against the window casing, smoothing his white mustache, twinkled over at her; T. J. Edwards, the heavy man with the thick eyelids and the round head with its absurdly short cropped gray hair, was gentle in his rough way. Gilbert Blye, over by the door, had not much to say, but he never removed his luminous gaze from the runaway bride, and when the pink cheeked nurse came to drive them out Blye was the last to make his adieus, and, bending over gracefully, he kissed her hand!

Honoria Blye received a telephone message from Bill Wolf a few hours after the time of the auto accident.

"You husband hez gone to his club," he said huskily.

The wife drove hastily to the club entrance. She met Wolf, who pointed to the chauffeur Scatti, saying:

"There's your husband's driver."

"I'd like to make you a little present," said Honoria in sugared accents, and, fumbling in her pocketbook, she produced a bill.

Scatti turned to her with alacrity, and every line in his broad, low face widened.

The line of his lips also thickened as he separated them in a grin of pleasure. He took the bill with joy, looked at its denomination in the light of one of his side lamps, flopped open his heavy driver's coat, shoved the bill deep in his trousers pocket and buttoned his coat tightly from top to bottom.

"Now, you'll tell me where Mr. Blye was this evening, won't you?" she wheedled.

The smile faded from Scatti's lines.

"Aren't you going to tell me?" And the voice rose another notch.

No answer.

"Give me back that money!" she screamed.

There were thirty-seven lights to be counted before the perspective merged in a blur. Scatti calmly inspected them all in deep absorption, but during the entire time that one narrow slit of an eye had a dancing gleam in it.

Honoria scowled back at the imposing entrance to the club. The doors stood wide open. Inside the tessellated vestibule were stiffly uniformed attendants. Beyond was a marble columned hall, and at the end of that, through an arched opening, was a paneled screen.

Suddenly Honoria dashed up the steps which no woman had ever trod and before any one could stop her had rounded the paneled screen and stood in the grill room, amid a wilderness of oaken tables, at nearly all of which sat men busy sending curling wreaths of incense toward the high gilded ceiling.

There were glasses before most of the men, and a dense and painful silence pervaded the place, although as Honoria had rushed through the hall she had heard the loud babble of animated conversation. The men in that club were turned to speechless clay at the sight of this fuming apparition.

"There you are!" she screamed, and as her gaze settled from its swift roving into a fixed direction one man came to life and rose—the black Vandyked Gilbert Blye. "There you are!" she screamed again and started to twist her way among the tables toward her long lost mate. "You will stay away from home, eh! You will run around with other women! You will"—

A door in the corner opened and closed, and Gilbert Blye was on the other side of it! A fat man laughed. Honoria Blye turned on them all and began to tell them just what she thought of their club. A half dozen attendants regained consciousness and crowded round her. One of them, indulging in soothing talk, accidentally laid his hand on her sleeve, and she left four red lines on his face. For the first time in its dignified history that club resounded with the shrill echoes of a confirmed scold. The chuckling fat man achieved an inspiration. He came up and said confidentially:

"Your husband is slipping out of the basement."

When Honoria reached the imposing entrance she was just in time to see Scatti slamming the door of the luxurious limousine, and as that brilliantly lighted car sped down the street with Gilbert Blye reclining comfortably amid the soft cushions a peal of laughter filled the block.

Honoria sprang into her electric coupe and, turning on all the "juice," wheeled down the street in mad pursuit. But at last she gave up the chase and went home.

The parrot was asleep, with its head tucked under its wing and the baleful eye closed. Honoria turned on the light and finished, to the parrot, the violent speech she had begun in her husband's club. The baleful eye opened, and the bird moved uneasily from foot to foot. Occasionally its neck feathers ruffled and its wing tips jerked, but it gave no other sign of wakefulness. In time, however, Honoria paused for breath, and the parrot slowly brought its shining round head into view. The head feathers were tousled and the eyes were sleepy as the familiar spirit of Honoria stretched its wings.

"Oh, shut up!" it hoarsely croaked.

A nurse with pink cheeks awakened June in the morning, and as the patient opened her eyes the two pretty girls smiled their appreciation of each other.

"How are you this morning?" asked the nurse, preparing to put a thermometer between June's red lips.

"Perfectly well, thank you," laughed June, tossing her waving brown hair back from her shoulders as she raised up. "How is Mrs. Villard?"

"A slight sprain," explained the nurse brightly. "She will be able to go home in time for dinner this evening. My, but you folks had a lucky accident! You must lie down until the doctor comes."

"I'm going to get up," announced June.

"Against orders. My dear, you must stay in bed until Dr. Remert says you may get up."

"Is he the one with the funny red sideburns?" and June looked down over the plain, coarse white nightgown in which she had been put to bed.

The Taxi Leaned Against a Tree.

"Where are my clothes?"

"You're not ready for them," and the pretty nurse smiled in triumph. "Come on!"

This last was in answer to a knock on the door, but before it could open June had hopped back into bed with one spring. She and the pretty nurse were laughing at each other in the sheer light heartedness of youth when the doctor with the funny red sideburns came in.

He was a jovial doctor, and a very nice doctor indeed. He felt June's pulse and looked at her tongue and prodded her a few times and examined her bones, talking to her all the while as if she were a little girl about ten years old.

"Now, I am going to get up," proclaimed June, as soon as the doctor had gone away, and she swung her pink feet out of bed again. "Where are my clothes?"

"I'll get them for you." And the pretty nurse turned cheerfully to go.

"Oh, no; wait a minute!" June's big eyes were sparkling. "Please let me try on one of your uniforms."

The pretty nurse dimpled as she admired her patient. June would look "fetching" in nurse's clothing. There could be no question of that, but she shook her head.

"I'm afraid it wouldn't be permitted."

"Just to try it on," begged June. "Let's ask the head nurse."

It seemed a tremendously daring thing to do.

"I wouldn't risk it." And the pretty nurse puckered her brows. Suddenly

"I'd like to make you a little present."

her face cleared. It was as if the sun had popped out on a rainy day. "Yes, I can! Mrs. Wade is on duty this morning. For a minute I thought it was Miss Simmons."

"Isn't she nice?" and June's round eyes softened sympathetically.

"She's an old cat!" The pretty nurse was very vehement about it. "Mrs. Wade's a dear, though," and, hurrying away, she brought the "dear" right back.

Mrs. Wade was a smiling woman—smiling lips, smiling eyes, and it seemed as if her hair smiled—but she was dubious about the uniform.

"It would be a radical infraction of the rules," she declared, with an absurd attempt at severity, "but we'll ask Dr. Remert not to tell."

They all three laughed at that, and within a few minutes June was in a stiff white uniform, with a prim little cap on her head, and was walking sedately into Mrs. Villard's room. She paused on the threshold. Gilbert Blye was there! As he caught sight of her June saw the glow of admiration leap into his black eyes. She half turned to go in her embarrassment, but Mrs. Villard stopped her.

"Come here, you pretty thing," she called, and as June shyly came to the bedside Mrs. Villard laughed, and Blye joined her.

Dr. Remert came in and expressed his profound astonishment at how grown up June looked in a uniform and tweaked the pink ear lobe which peeped from beneath the trim little cap. The head nurse and the nurse with the pink cheeks and the phenomenally thin nurse crowded in to admire June; then Dr. Remert scattered them so that Mrs. Villard should have some rest before her next bandaging, and he took June with him for a round of the wards. He gave her a thermometer to carry so she should look useful as well as ornamental.

She came back from that round of the wards rather thoughtfully. She had seen so much pain and sorrow and suffering, wan children and wan mothers and wan men who should have been strong, and in the light of all their woes her own problem seemed foolish and insignificant.

In Mrs. Villard's room as June approached the door she heard voices, among them Orin Cunningham's. She turned away and went across the hall to the room where the injured chauffeur lay. He was in considerable pain, the pretty nurse said, but he lay there smiling, with great cheerfulness upon his roughly molded countenance.

"I guess I'll be laid up for a week or ten days," he stated, with a grin.

"That's a long time to be confined in a narrow little room," sympathized June.

The head nurse brought her bit of sunshine into the room.

"How are you feeling?" she asked.

"Bully."

"Then you can probably stand a pleasant surprise," smiled Mrs. Wade. "You have a visitor."

"Oh!" The sunshine left the roughly molded face, but the grin was back in a minute. "Say, tell her the doctor says I ain't to be talked to long. And can't one of you nurses stay here to make it strong?"

His grin was so confiding that the head nurse grinned back at him. She was a woman of much experience.

"Of course you must not be talked to very long," she agreed. "And you should have a nurse with you to take care of you." She looked at June a moment; then her eyes twinkled. "I think I'll leave this one."

"Much obliged." And the man turned his cheerful grin to June, who sat down primly at the head of the bed.

The man sank back when the head nurse left and looked as feeble as he could. His nurse was smoothing the pillows when the door opened, and there came in a large, heavy jawed woman, with a long ostrich feather on her hat, half a dozen cheap rings on her fingers and two buttons hanging loosely on her coat, one by a single thread.

"Well, well, Joe!" she said in a heavy voice, and she stared at June. "Didn't I always tell you you'd get it?" She bent over and kissed her husband as a matter of propriety. "Hurt you much?"

"Something fierce!" huskily murmured Joe and half closed his eyes.

"Tough luck!" said the woman. "You wouldn't take out that accident insurance I wanted you to, and now I suppose I can starve."

"Oh, well, you ain't done it yet!" objected the man, his tone losing some of its feebleness. "I guess you can get along till I can get out of this. I give you every cent I ever make."

"I guess that's a lot!" And the woman sat down with a thump.

"Thirty dollars last week."

"And how much the week before?"

"Well, it was a rotten week." And the man turned his eyes toward June, who looked steadfastly out of the window. There being no help from that quarter, he proceeded in helping himself. "You got enough to run you for ten days. You know you have. Come on, Alice, be sociable."

"Oh, I can come on all right, and I can be sociable all right, but suppose you don't get out of here in ten days! Then what do I do? Starve, I guess! Say, how do you come to be in a private room?" She looked at June and sniffed. "And with a private nurse?"

"The good sport that picked us up put me here."

The woman surveyed the bare little room. There were no curtains at the windows, no upholstering, no softening graces of any kind on the white enameled fittings, but it had an immense superiority, the cause of which she could not fathom. It was absolutely clean, and she paid an unconscious tribute to that phenomenon.

"Why, it's better than I got it at home!" she complained. The man turned his head over and back again, but he said nothing.

"Say," the woman went on, "the fellow that spent the money for this room and the private nurse would have done better to let you go in the public ward and give you the money for your wife!"

June, at the window, moved impatiently.

"Nurse," said the man, "can you get me my pants?"

June opened the door of the tiny white enameled wardrobe in the corner and brought out the man's trousers, handing them down with the tips of her thumb and forefinger. The woman took them and deftly ran her hands into the pockets.

"Seven fifty-five," she reported and clicked the money into her purse. She hung the trousers in the wardrobe and shut the door. "That'll help a little. Did you get your pay for this drive?"

"Not yet, Alice."

"Well, you tell me who it was, and I'll go after it!" She had turned from the wardrobe and was regarding a tray which stood on its folding stand by the wall. She lifted the napkin. "My God!" she exploded. "A hothouse peach! And you didn't eat it all at that! You know what I had for my breakfast? Coffee and sinkers and hash! And here you are living on the fat of the land!"

"Looky here, Alice!" The man had raised up in bed, and there was a twitch of pain at the corners of his lips as he stretched out an oil blackened forefinger.

June whirled from the window with a snap of her big eyes. She still carried the thermometer which Dr. Remert had given her. Now she thrust it in the man's mouth, put a hand at the back of his neck and gently forced him down.

"The time's up," she crisply told the woman. Her voice was low and soft, and the visitor puzzled afterward as to how it could be so effective without shouting. June went to the door and opened it, aware that the eyes of Joe were fixed on her in undying gratitude.

The woman looked doubtfully at her husband, but the figure at the door was so inflexible that she succumbed to discipline.

June Was In a Stiff White Uniform.

"Well, so long, Joe," she said. "See if you can't get your money for that drive by the time I come again." She waved a wifely hand at him and stalked out. She turned to June in the hall. "If the fellow that's putting up for this room will give Joe the money instead we'll be a lot better off."

June was so shocked at the cold callousness of this speech that she could only dumbly nod her head, and she walked down to the nurses' little desk at the end of the hall, leaving the woman to find her way out alone. Joe, the chauffeur, lay, cheerfully grinning, with the thermometer in his mouth.

Again the everlasting problem—the man, the woman and the money! The runaway bride sat in the vacant chair at the little desk and pondered it all out. This person who nagged, who followed her husband even to the hospital to nag and whose husband welcomed the hospital as a relief from nagging—this woman was the outcome of the custom by which the man, earning, possessed all, and the money he gave to his wife was as a gift. A selfish woman and one without delicacy, such as this nagger, made it her business to get all she could, and the pursuit had become a passion with her. She was like those beggars who continue to beg after they have become rich by it, begging from the force of habit and from the love of the art of making people give and from the sordid desire to possess. It was wrong, all wrong, somewhere. June shuddered as she remembered this wife going through her husband's pockets, and then she recalled her dream of herself standing before Ned as a piteous pauper, holding out her hand for alms. She had been right, she decided, as she had decided time and again. She had acted wisely in running away before she had committed herself to charity and before any barriers had been set between their love. She must earn her own way—

"Seven fifty-five," she reported.

Mercy! June sprang from her chair and ran to the room of the chauffeur with a sudden violent wrench of her conscience. Joe lay there quite cheerfully with the thermometer still in his mouth, and he grinned as well as he could after twenty minutes of this exercise. When June removed the thermometer that side of his face remained twisted and puckered for some time, and it ached, but he was perfectly happy. He could be alone for twenty-four hours.

CHAPTER II.

THERE was a consultation in Mrs. Villard's room. Tommy Thomas sat at the head of Mrs. Villard's bed. T. J. Edwards, the heavy man with the thick lidded eyes, sat on the other side in stolid silence. Cunningham leaned negligently on the foot of the bed. Before Mrs. Villard lay a picture of June clipped from a Brynport paper on the day of her marriage to Ned Warner. Tommy Thomas had just found it and had brought it with her. Cunningham picked up the picture and looked at it with twinkling eyes, smoothing his white mustache complacently. Gilbert Blye, sitting in the far corner on the window sill, with his Vandyke in his long, lean white hand, suddenly rose and, walking over to Cunningham, took the picture from him and laid it on the bed.

The pretty nurse with the pink cheeks opened the door presently and heard these words in Blye's suave but forceful tones:

"The thing to do is to gain her confidence. There must be a complete change of method."

The voice stopped abruptly. Edwards, Cunningham, Tommy Thomas and Mrs. Villard were all listening intently. Mrs. Villard seemed troubled. Tommy Thomas, with deviltry in her eyes, was laughing at Cunningham, who seemed uncomfortable. The round headed Edwards sat slowly nodding as he looked at Blye. Mrs. Villard reached quietly forward and turned the piece of paper on the bed face downward. She seemed even sad.

"Beg pardon," said the pretty nurse. Noting the sudden silence and slipping in, she put her hand under the sheet and felt of Mrs. Villard's ankle. The entire group was motionless, and there was a strained tension in the room until the nurse went out. She saw Mrs. Villard reaching forward for the piece of paper as she closed the door, and as she walked away she heard Blye's smooth, even voice again.

When June came into Mrs. Villard's room the conversation again stopped abruptly, but the group moved immediately.

"Oh, see the pretty nursie!" hailed Cunningham. And June glanced down in embarrassment.

In that moment of her downcast eyes Tommy Thomas and Mrs. Villard, Blye and Edwards, all glared at Cunningham. He flushed and walked nervously over to the window.

"Really, the costume is quite becoming to you," he added in a tone he had never used to her before, one of extravagant respect.

"Indeed it is, dear," said Tommy Thomas. She slipped an arm around June's waist protectingly, and Mrs. Villard glanced up at her companion with moist eyes.

"Well, we'll see you later," said T. J. Edwards, with a clumsy attempt at heartiness, and, rising, he bowed to the ladies. "If there's anything I can do, let me know." His small eyes roved to June, but there was no patronizingly fatherly glance in them and no disposition to pat her on the shoulder.

June was puzzled. There seemed to be a distinct change in the attitude of all these people toward her. Yesterday they had pursued her with a mocking certainty, in which there was an underlying insolence, but now they seemed to have lost that note of over-familiarity, and she liked the change. Only Blye was the same. His black eyes glowed when they rested upon her, and he still wore his suave smile, though somehow he seemed more frank. June found herself suddenly liking this black Vandyked man. As she turned to smooth Mrs. Villard's pillows the three men exchanged glances, and the suavely smiling Gilbert Blye stroked his black Vandyke. They turned their eyes as by one accord of the beautiful runaway bride.

Ned Warner at the very moment in which Blye and his crowd had changed their tactics toward June was, after interminable red tape, securing the address of the owner of car No. M007707, and, that secured, he hurried out to the beautiful home of Mrs. Villard up the Hudson. He came to it by the lower road, and as he approached the house he saw Marie in the sloping hillside garden. He stepped in the shelter of the wall to consider. A few days ago his first impulse would have been to rush up to Marie and seize her and compel her to tell what she knew, but Marie had proved herself to be a slippery customer. She had denied knowing Ned on his first meeting with her after the runaway. She had denied knowing earnest and eager and black Aunt Debby when that faithful servant of June's mother had happened upon Marie in the market, and only yesterday Marie had run away from the entire family, taking June's collie, Bouncer, with her. There was little to be gained from Marie. If Ned were able to force himself in and search the house June would be hidden by some one or be helped to escape, as had happened yesterday at the Widow O'Keefe's and also at the Bond Securities building and everywhere else. So there was but one thing to do—to conceal himself about the grounds until June herself should appear. He adopted that course, and the weary hours dragged on, noon, afternoon, evening.

With the dusk the luxurious limousine of Gilbert Blye left the hospital, and in its brilliantly lighted comfort sat the precious June and Mrs. Villard, Tommy Thomas, Orin Cunningham and Gilbert Blye. Strange what a difference this day had made in June's feeling toward these people. They liked her. If their views of life were not her views she could keep her own. They seemed to have discovered that she meant to retain her ways of thinking and living, and it was so much nicer since they had apparently acknowledged this. Now her work as companion to Mrs. Villard would be much more pleasant. They were chatting in gay comradeship as they drew near the Villard home.

Ned Warner as the shades of night drew in ventured into the Villard garden and nearer the house. As he crept up toward the back porch the door opened and June's collie came bounding out for an evening run. Bouncer had no sooner hit the open than he gave a loud yelp and came tearing straight in Ned's direction. He jumped mad circles around Ned, leaped upon him, barking his loudest welcome, ran halfway up to the house, ran back to bark his joy at Ned again and started to bring Marie!

He had no need to go all the way. Marie had come out on the rear porch to see what was the matter with Miss June's pet, and the lights from the house glistened on her high cheek bones and her liberal supply of gums.

Ned had stepped back among the bushes with the hope of edging himself over to the wall before Marie could arrive. To his surprise, however, Marie, though she looked down in that direction, did not come. She called Bouncer, and together they went into the house. Ned took advantage of Marie's indifference and of Bouncer's confinement to slip closer and look in at the windows, front, side and rear. The lower floor was brightly illuminated, the front porch light being lit, as if some one were expected. June! Some instinct told Ned that she was coming. He concealed himself behind the shrubbery near the porte-cochere and waited.

Suddenly he involuntarily tensed himself. Wheels were approaching. Then a brilliantly lighted limousine sped into sight, and as it turned the curve Ned saw in it his beautiful runaway bride. Over her was bending the dark, handsome face of the black Vandyked Gilbert Blye, his eyes glowing and on his lips that despicable smile.

With an oath Ned stepped forward. At last his moment had arrived. Within another instant as Gilbert Blye helped June from the limousine Ned would have the scoundrel by the throat.

PEG O' MY HEART

CHAPTER XXVI.

Alaric, Peg and Mr. Hawkes.

"COUSIN," said Alaric to Peg, and his voice dropped to the caressing note of a woo'r. "cousin, do you know, I am going to do something now I've never done before?"

He paused to let the full force of what was to come have its real value.

"What is it, Alaric?" Peg asked, all unconscious of the drama that was taking place in her cousin's heart. "Sure, what is it? Ye're not goin' to do somethin' useful, are ye?'

He braced himself and went on: "I am going to ask a very charming young lady to marry me. Eh?"

"Are ye?"

"I am."

"What do ye think o' that, now!"

"And—who—do—you—think—it—is?"

He waited, wondering if she would guess correctly. It would be so helpful if only she could.

But she was so unexpected.

"I couldn't guess it in a hundred years, Alaric—rale'y I couldn't."

"Oh, try! Do try!" he urged.

"I couldn't think who'd marry you—indade I couldn't. Mebbe the poor girl's blind. Is that it?"

"Can't you guess? No? Really?"

"No, I'm tellin' ye. Who is it?"

"You!"

Then she leaned back against the balustrade and laughed long and unrestrainedly. She laughed until the tears came coursing down her cheeks.

Alaric was at first nonplused. Then he grasped the situation in its full significance. It was just a touch of hysteria. He joined her and laughed heartily as well.

"Aha!" he cried between laughs. "That's a splendid sign. Splendid! I've always been told that girls cry when they're proposed to."

"Sure, that's what I'm doin'," gasped Peg. "I'm cryin'—laughin'. Sure, I think I'd rather have Michael, my terrier—if you don't mind."

He started forward. "Oh, come, I say! You don't mean that! Think—just for one moment—of the advantages!".

"If ye don't mind," replied Peg meekly.

To her amazement the gloom lifted from her cousin's countenance. He took a deep breath, looked at her in genuine relief and cried out heartily: "I say! You're a brick! It's really awfully good of you. Some girls in your position would have jumped at me—positively jumped! But you—why, you're a genuine little hall marked A1 brick! I'm extremely obliged to you."

He took her little hand and shook it warmly.

"You're a plucky little girl, that's what you are—a plucky—little—girl. I'll never forget it—never. If there is anything I can do—at any time—anywhere—call on me. I'll be there—right on the spot.

"Bless you, cousin. You've taken an awful load off my mind. I was really worried. I had to ask you. I promised to. See you before you go!"

* * * * * * *

On the 30th day of June Mr. Montgomery Hawkes glanced at his appointments for the following day and found the entry, "Mrs. Chichester, Scarboro—in re Margaret O'Connell."

He accordingly sent a telegram to Mrs. Chichester, acquainting her with the pleasant news that she might expect that distinguished lawyer on July 1 to render an account of her stewardship of the Irish agitator's child.

He was shown into the music room and was admiring a genuine Greuze when Mrs. Chichester came in.

She greeted him tragically and motioned him to a seat beside her.

"Well?" he smiled cheerfully. "And how is our little protegee?"

"Sit down," replied Mrs. Chichester somberly.

"Thank you."

He sat beside her, waited a moment, then, with some sense of misgiving, asked, "Everything going well, I hope?"

"Far from it." And Mrs. Chichester shook her head sadly. "She wants to leave us today. She has ordered a cab. She is packing now."

"Dear, dear!" ejaculated the bewildered solicitor. "Where is she going?"

"Back to her father."

"How perfectly ridiculous!"

"But don't be uneasy," he replied easily; "she will stay. May I see her?"

Mrs. Chichester rose, crossed over to the bell and rang it.

"There is one thing you must know, Mr. Hawkes. My son is in love with her," she said, as though in a burst of confidence.

"What? Your son?"

"Yes," she sighed. "Of course she is hardly a suitable match for Alaric—as yet. But by the time she is of age"—

Hawkes was moving restlessly about the room. He stopped in front of Mrs. Chichester as Jarvis disappeared to notify Peg.

"I am afraid, madam, that such a marriage would be out of the question. As one of the executors of the late Mr. Kingsnorth's will, in my opinion, it would be defeating the object of the dead man's legacy."

Mrs. Chichester retorted heatedly:

"He desires her to be trained. What training is better than marriage?"

"Almost any," replied Mr. Hawkes. "Marriage should be the union of two formed characters. Marriage between the young is one of my pet objections. It is a condition of life essentially for those who have reached maturity in nature and in character. I am preparing a paper on it for the Croydon Ethical society and"—

Whatever else Mr. Hawkes might have said in continuation of another of his pet subjects was cut abruptly short by the appearance of Peg. She was still dressed in one of Mrs. Chichester's gifts. She had not had an opportunity to change into her little traveling suit.

"Well, well! What an improvement!" he said.

"I'm glad you've come, Mr. Hawkes."

"Why, you're a young lady!" cried the astonished solicitor.

"Am I? Ask me aunt about that!" replied Peg somewhat bitterly.

"Now, my dear Miss Margaret O'Connell"— began the lawyer.

"Will ye let me have £20?' suddenly asked Peg.

"Certainly. Now?" and he took out his pocketbook.

"This minit," replied Peg positively.

"With pleasure," said Mr. Hawkes as he began to count the banknotes.

"And I want ye to get a passage on the first ship to America, this afternoon if there's one!" cried Peg earnestly.

"Oh, come, come," remonstrated the lawyer.

"The £20 I want to buy somethin' for me father—just to remember England by. If ye think me uncle wouldn't like me to have it because I'm lavin', why, then me father'll pay ye back. It may take him a long time, but he'll pay it."

"Now, listen"— interrupted Mr. Hawkes.

"Mebbe it'll only be a few dollars a week, but father always pays his debts—in time. That's all he ever needs—time."

"What's all this nonsense about going away?"

"It isn't nonsense. I'm goin' to me father," answered Peg resolutely.

Hawkes hunted through his mind for the cause of this upheaval in the Chichester home. He remembered Mrs. Chichester's statement about Alaric's affection for his young cousin. Could the trouble have arisen from that? It gave him a clew to work on. He grasped it.

"Answer me one question truthfully, Miss O'Connell. Is there an affair of the heart?"

Peg looked down on the ground mournfully and replied:

"Me heart is in New York—with me father."

"Has any one made love to you since you have been here?"

Peg looked up at him sadly and shook her head. A moment later a mischievous look came into her eyes, and she said, with a roguish laugh:

"Sure one man wanted to kiss me, an' I boxed his ears, an' another—almost man—asked me to marry him."

"Oh!" ejaculated the lawyer.

"Me Cousin Alaric."

"And what did you say?" questioned Hawkes.

"I towld him I'd rather have Michael."

He looked at her in open bewilderment and repeated:

"Michael?"

"Me dog," explained Peg, and her eyes danced with merriment.

Hawkes laughed heartily and relievedly.

As Hawkes looked at her, radiant in her springlike beauty, her clear, healthy complexion, her dazzling teeth, her red-gold hair, he felt a sudden thrill go through him. His life had been so full, so concentrated on the development of his career, that he had never permitted the feminine note to obtrude itself on his life. His effort had been rewarded by an unusually large circle of influential clients who yielded him an exceedingly handsome revenue. He had heard whispers of a magistracy. His public future was assured.

But his private life was arid. The handsome villa in Pelham crescent had no one to grace the head of the table, save on the occasional visits of his aged mother or the still rarer ones of a married sister.

And here was he in the full prime of life.

Yielding to some uncontrollable impulse, he took her little hand in both of his own.

Hawkes was not to be denied now. He went on in his softest and most persuasive accents:

"I know one who would give you all these—a man who has reached the years of discretion, one in whom the follies of youth have merged into the knowledge and reserve of early middle age; a man of position and of means; a man who can protect you, care for you, admire you—and be proud to marry you.

"Miss O'Connell—may I say Margaret?—I was your uncle's adviser, his warm personal friend. We spoke freely of you for many weeks before he died. It was his desire to do something for you that would change your whole life and make it full and happy and contented. Were your uncle alive I know of nothing that would give him greater pleasure than for his old friend to take you, your young life, into his care. Miss O'Connell, I am the man!"

"Stop it!" she cried. "What's the matther with you men this mornin'? Ye'd think I was some great lady the way ye're all offerin' me yer hands an' yer names an' yer influences an' yer dignities. Stop it! Give me that money an' let me go."

Hawkes paused.

"Don't give your answer too hastily. I know it must seem abrupt—one might almost say brutal. But I am alone in the world; you are alone. Neither of us has contracted a regard for any one else. And, in addition to that, there would be no occasion to marry until you are twenty-one. There!"

Peg suddenly burst into a paroxysm of laughter.

"Am I to consider that a refusal?"

"Ye-may. What would I be doin' marryin' the likes of you? Answer me that?"

"That is final?" he queried.

"Absolutely, completely an' entirely final. Thank ye very much, sir," she added. "An' may I have the £20."

"Certainly. Here it is." And he handed her the money.

"I'm much obliged to ye. An' I'm sorry if I hurt ye by laughin' just now. But I thought ye were jokin', I did."

She hurried across the room to the staircase. When she was halfway up the stairs Jarvis entered and was immediately followed by Jerry.

"Peg!" he said gently, looking up at her.

"I'm goin' back to me father in half an hour!" And she went on up the stairs.

As Jerry moved slowly away from the staircase he met Montgomery Hawkes.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Poverty is hard, George, but it would be easier to bear if you would talk things over and show some affection."

Mrs. Pitt rose and, going round to her husband's side, laid an appealing hand on his shoulder. "When you shut me out of your heart, I am alone indeed."

Her husband seemed fairly to hold his breath to keep from answering. His habit of unrevealing silence was the hardest thing she had to bear. A suffocating numbness was creeping over her, smothering her. "Oh, George, speak to me," she pleaded, "I can't stand this."

"Don't you think," he asked, rising, "that I have enough to bear without your adding hysterics to my load?"

"I know it is too bad—the death of the horse. It cost so much and wasn't paid for. Oh, let's leave this dreadful place and go back to my home in Wyoming. I am sure we could do better. There is no market for anything here."

He stood looking at her a moment in stony silence; then left the room. She sank down in a chair and buried her face in her hands.

"What can I do? I must get away for a little while," she thought. "On this road dwells madness."

Catching up her shawl, she started out across the fields to her nearest neighbor, three-quarters of a mile away. A white-haired, placid woman opened the door to her knock.

"Come in, Mrs. Pitt; I am all alone."

"Dear Mrs. Silber," cried the visitor, "I have come over here for advice. It looks as if not only the horse was dead, but love and hope as well." She sank into a chair and dropped the shawl off her shoulders.

"Surely not so bad as that," said the older woman kindly, drawing up a chair and taking the young woman's hand in hers. "Tell me all about it. Perhaps that is what I am here for, to help you. I hope so."

The pent-up despair rushed from the girl's lips in a torrent—their poverty, the cold, stony silence of her husband, and her bitter resentment of his treatment. "It's awful to tell you all this," she ended, "but I shall die if I don't get help some way."

Mrs. Silber softly stroked the girl's hands. "Dear child, life is very difficult for most of us. Marriage sets two souls in such awful nearness that they obstruct one another's vision. You two are so utterly different that real comradeship may never be attained, but something can be done. Your husband is so much older, so set in his ways, that I tell you frankly I am afraid you will have to do most of the adjusting. You have been trying to take this citadel by assault; it cannot be done. You will dash yourself to pieces to no purpose. You might lay siege to this fortress. Let nothing escape you that will help to give the key to the situation. You want to learn to fit into his life by learning his springs of action."

"Oh, he doesn't love me," said the girl, beginning to sob.

"He had a comfortable home; he never would have married you if he had not loved you. Your good sense and desire to do right will help you solve your hard problem," and the kindly woman kissed the weeping girl.

"Thank you for giving me some hope," said Mrs. Pitt, rising and drawing her shawl over her head.

"Come over whenever I can help you."

"Goodby," and Mrs. Pitt closed the door and started across the fields.

SHEER BODICES GIVE NEW SILK FROCKS SUMMERY COOLNESS.

Rarely does silk form the entire frock now, the bodice being most often of airy fabric partly covered by a bolero or some other arrangement of the silk. This new spring model is of flowered pussy willow taffeta and straps of the pretty silk are carried over the bodice of dark chiffon, laid over flesh pink chiffon. The double pleatings which edge collar and cuff are modish and effective trimmings.

Household Hints

WITCH YEAST

One cup sugar, one cup salt, one quart potatoes (after peeled), one pint flour.

Boil potatoes until tender. Put sugar, salt and flour in crock, place colander in top of crock, pour hot potatoes and boiling water in which they were cooked into colander, mashing potatoes and pressing them through colander. Scald all together and beat until smooth and nice.

Let cool, then add a pint of good yeast. Add water to make about two gallons. Keep in warm place for a day or two, then remove to where it is cool, but do not allow to freeze.

When you want to make bread, take one pint of this yeast for each loaf of bread you wish to make. Warm it by putting in a vessel and setting it in warm water, stirring all the time, being careful to let it get only milk warm; then add flour and proceed as with other bread.

The nice part about this is, it is always ready and bread can be made with it on short notice.

When you wish to make it again, save one pint of the yeast to start with.

POTATO DISHES

Potato Omelet—One cup mashed potatoes, one cup sweet milk, two eggs beaten separately until very light; add a little salt and a little flour; mix and beat all together; fry in butter until brown.

Potato Croquettes—Two cups cold mashed potatoes, season with pinch of salt, pepper and a tablespoon butter. Beat whites of two eggs and work all together thoroughly; make into small balls slightly flattened, dip in beaten yolks of eggs, then roll either in flour or cracker crumbs. Fry same as fish balls.

Potato Soup—Six medium-sized potatoes; peel and cut in small dice, cook done with water enough to serve as many as eight persons. Brown some lard and flour in a spider, stir into the potatoes; pepper, salt.

Potato Ribbons—Cut potato in strips. Have pan hot and put in tablespoon of butter. Brain the potatoes, roll in flour, fry brown.

Potato Pie—Peel and slice potatoes as you would to fry enough to fill a pudding pan; take a layer of potatoes, then a layer of fat meat scraps; pepper and salt; then potatoes and meat till pan is full. Line pan first with biscuit dough and put dough on top as for pie. Add water (one-half cup), bake till potatoes are done. Can add an onion if liked. Serve with a brown gravy.

Browned Potatoes With Roast—Peel, cook and mash required quantity, adding while hot a little chopped onion, pepper and salt. Form into small oval balls and dredge with flour, then place around meat about twenty minutes before it is taken from oven. When nicely browned, drain dry and serve hot with meat.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Potatoes Hungarian Style—Chop fine one onion and fry it in one ounce of butter with half teaspoonful paprika. Add one good-sized tomato, peeled and free from seed, and cut rather small. Use six medium-sized peeled raw potatoes, cut into somewhat thick slices. Moisten with light stock or water, just enough to cover. Salt and cook over brisk fire, almost reducing the liquid entirely. Sprinkle with chopped parsley when serving.

Stuffed Sweet Potatoes—Bake potatoes, then cut off a slice lengthwise, scoop out pulp, mash and season with butter and salt, adding the stiffly beaten white of one egg; refill shells, dot with a little butter, place on dripping pan in oven ten or fifteen minutes.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Illness of Chauncey Cat.

Young Chauncey Cat was poorly—said he, "I think I will Send 'round for good old Doctor Rat, because I am so ill.
I have so many symptoms, they are alarming quite;
I fear if I keep this way I'll lose my appetite."

Now Chauncey Cat was very fond of having things to eat,
And one thing that he cared for most was delicate mouse meat.
His mother often said to him, "My son, you ought to diet;
It would be better for your health; I really wish you'd try it."

But Chauncey Cat said, "Fiddlesticks! I'm feeling very well."
Until one day quite suddenly he had this poorly spell.
And so when Doctor Rat came in he gravely shook his head.
Then said to Chauncey, "You will have to spend a week in bed."

"I find on looking at your tongue it's coated quite a bit,
I really think you're threatened with a cataleptic fit."
"You must be careful what you eat for quite a while," said he;
"In fact, you mustn't have a thing except some catnip tea."

Said Chauncey Cat, "Ridiculous! I'll have to have some meat."
"Oh, no!" said Dr. Rat, "that is the worst thing you could eat."
That angered Chauncey and he said, "I know that isn't true,
And just to prove that you are wrong I'm going to eat you."

Before old Doctor Rat had time to think or to turn pale,
Young Chauncey Cat devoured him from his whiskers to his tail.
I wish that I might stop right in the middle of this verse;
What's gone before is bad enough; what follows is yet worse.

That night in Chauncey's neighborhood they heard a dreadful sound,
And the next morning Chauncey Cat was nowhere to be found.
And no one's ever heard of him since that eventful night,
From which I'd say it's better to control one's appetite.

COMMUNITY USE OF SCHOOL BLDGS.

Dr. H. M. Maxson Gives Interesting Resume of Work in This City.

VARIED AMUSEMENTS

The Public is Encouraged to Use the Schools for Social as Well as Educational Purposes—Charges Cover Only Actual Expenses.

The following description of the community use of school buildings in Plainfield is furnished, upon request, by Dr. H. M. Maxson, superintendent of schools: Evening use of buildings in Plainfield is at present carried on in four different fields.

In co-operation with the Public Library, a number of schools are opened once a week as library substations.

Two or more buildings are used for free entertainments, lectures, etc., and for evening High School and evening elementary schools.

The public are encouraged to use our buildings for various social purposes, schoolrooms being furnished to clubs or individuals quite freely at a price that will cover the cost of opening—janitor service, heat and light.

Evening recreation in lines other than educational in the strict sense are offered under the direction and stimulus of two paid secretaries, who devote their whole time, day and evening, to this work.

In a general way we are trying to foster the following classes of activities:

Popular courses: orchestra, band, banjo club, glee club and musical organizations, by offering rooms, finding suitable leaders and bringing together those who are interested in these things.

Athletic interests: gymnasium classes, athletic games, basketball, folk dancing, etc.

Promotion of clubs of all sorts, particularly for young people; dramatics, debating, literary, social, civic, handicraft, domestic arts, etc.

Amusement: organizing and chaperoning dances, arranging for social meetings, receptions, etc., lectures, motion picture shows and entertainments.

Reading rooms and game rooms, etc.

Some of the specific aims we are striving for are:

Creation of the taste for and enjoyment of higher ideals of pleasure and entertainment.

Self-culture, by attaining information and skill and developing self-respect.

Building up a social sense or feeling, mixing people together on terms of sociability and goodwill.

Co-operation, team play, united work for some end which leads up ultimately to union for general public purposes.

Self-direction, self-control, individually and in club and group activities.

Development of initiative and leadership by throwing the direction and control of activities into the hands of the people concerned, as fas as is practicable.

Self-support by means of club dues, although keeping them down so as not to exclude those who would be drawn into this work.

Protection of young people, particularly girls, by giving them pure enjoyment under healthy conditions. The evening dances are justified on this basis alone, since they have provided dancing under good chaperonage and under strict moral conditions for the young men and women.

Five buildings are being used several evenings a week in this work. In one school we are trying to build up a social center for Italians, forming social clubs, athletic clubs, dramatic clubs, etc., that shall interest them and bring them together for common social purposes. In another school we are developing a similar center for work with the colored people. In still another building we are developing a musical center. On one night a week we have a municipal orchestra, on another evening a choral society of some 200 members, both organizations being under the leadership and instruction of a paid professional.

In another school, on Friday night of each week, we have a public dance for the colored people, and on Saturday evening a municipal dance for the white people. An incidental effect of these two dances is to kill the ordinary dance hall.

In the High School the stage of the auditorium is being used regularly by the Thespian Society, for rehearsals for dramatics. The gymnasium is used by groups of men and women for gymnasium practice, for physical training and athletic games. A business men's class uses the gymnasium twice a week. The swimming pool is being used for classes of men and women at various hours for the instruction and practice of the art of swimming.

On various afternoons children in the higher grades are gathered in "Guilds of Play," partly for social enjoyment, partly to give them right ideals in regard to recreation, partly to train them in pageants and public representations of a similar nature, and particularly to train them up to understand and participate in public recreation as men and women. These guilds have recently given an evening performance of "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," all the garments and stage paraphernalia being made by the children with the help of the instructor or in the home. In the spring they will probably give a pageant of some sort.

The choral society and the orchestra combined have recently given Handel's "Messiah," in most creditable fashion. They are now working on "Elijah," for public performance in April.

Each of these public performances was attended by an audience of 1,000 people.

In nearly all the clubs and gatherings a "membership fee" of five or ten cents per evening is charged, partly to make them self-supporting, partly to add dignity and importance to the occasion.

The whole movement is under the management of a Public Recreation Committee of influential citizens, who work in close co-operation with the superintendent of schools. The funds for the support of the work come from three sources: a grant from the City Council, a grant from the Board of Education, and the fees charged at the various occasions.

During the past year this evening recreation movement has entertained 25,000 people.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"On Trial," the most brillian melodramatic success of the past decade, will be the attraction at the Plainfield Theatre tonight. The advance sale of seats indicates a capacity audience. "On Trial" comes direct from New York where it has had an unprecedented run for the past year. The play is elaborately mounted and presented by a carefully selected cast of twenty-seven people. Tomorrow's attraction at the Plainfield Theatre will be the photographic conception of James Montgomery Flagg's charming story, "The Adventures of Kitty Cobb." Miss Marian Swayne's charming and refined impersonation of Kitty makes this the most delightful picture ever produced, while Jack Hopkins' clever and brilliant support of Miss Swayne contributes to the film's artistic perfection. Another big movie success will be seen at the theatre Thursday afternoon and night, when George M. Cohan's great farce "Officer 666," is presented. There is a laugh every minute and when "Officer 666" is shown the audience generally leaves at the finish with sore and aching sides. Hal Caine's story of "The Christian" has been announced as the feature photo attraction at the Plainfield Theatre for Friday and Saturday. The serial film, "The Master Key" is shown each Tuesday and "The Trey of Hearts" every Friday.

One of the really important and interesting bookings of the local theatrical season is Margaret Anglin, in Oscar Wilde's greatest play, "Lady Wildermere's Fan," which is scheduled for an engagement at the Plainfield Theatre, on Wednesday. In the company supporting Miss Anglin are Ruth Holt-Boucicault, Stanley Dark, Catherine Aineley, Florence Carpenter, Sidney Greenstreet, Wallace Widdecombe, Louise Gilmore, Harry Redding, Virginia Palmer, Harry Barfoot, Carolyn Darling, Donald Cameron, Brandon Peters, Roy Porter, Leonard Willieu and others. The play will be shown here exactly as presented during its long run in New York last season.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The World Film Corporation offers the five-part photoplay "Old Dutch," with Lew Fields as Ludwig Streusand, and Vivian Martin as his daughter, Violet, to be shown at Proctor's Theatre today and tomorrow. The story of the comedy-drama, too, is so tenderly human and pathetic, that it won the affections of a sentiment loving public. "Old Dutch" contains the one touch of nature that makes the whole world kin; and as an offering the World Film Corporation feels that it will be widely appreciated on that account, even omitting the fame and personality of Lew Fields, who as the titular half of Weber and Fields was well in the public eye on the American stage for decades.

Scene from "Old Dutch," with Lew Fields, at Proctor's Theatre, Today and Tomorrow.

A Plainfield vs. A New York Account

The advantages to residents of Plainfield and vicinity of maintaining a bank account in The State Trust Company are so numerous that no argument should be necessary to convince those who are now keeping their accounts in New York. Liberal interest rates (3% and 4%), the free collection of out of town checks and New York checking privileges are but a few of the many advantages that such an account affords. On the other hand a New York account means inconvenience in making deposits, charges on out of town checks and in many instances no interest on balances.

We offer our splendid facilities to any one who is willing to overcome habit and profit thereby.

COUNCIL ACCEPTS OFFER FOR SURVEY

Mayor Calkins Presents Proposition of Taxpayers in Special Message.

THE PLAN IS APPROVED

It is Proposed to Have the Work Performed by the Municipal Bureau of Research of New York if Necessary Funds Can Be Raised.

Mayor Leighton Calkins in a special message to the Common Council, last night, presented a plan whereby his suggested expert administrative survey of the various departments of the city will no doubt soon be started. Accompanying the message was a letter from R. Henry Depew, president of the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association, in which that body proposed, with the consent of the Mayor and Council, to have the survey made by the Bureau of Municipal Research of New York, at its own expense.

Mayor Calkins in his message recommended the adoption of the plan and the acceptance of the association's offer and after it was read to the Council that body adopted a resolution offered by Councilman Thomas F. Hylan, accepting the proposition on behalf of the Council and thanking the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association for its offer. This resolution also requested that the heads of all city departments co-operate with the Municipal Bureau of Research in its proposed work in Plainfield.

As stated in the Mayor's message, the purpose of this survey is to gath

ANNUAL INSPECTION OF COMPANY K

Army Officers Pleased With Fine Showing of Local Militiamen.

The annual inspection of Co. K was held in the West Front street armory last night, being in charge of Lieut. Elliott and Sergeant John, of the 27th U. S. Infantry of this State. Captain Charles Peterson and Lieutenants Conklin and Phillips assisted at the inspection.

The army officers made a thorough inspection of the company and its equipment and expressed themselves as being well pleased with the fine showing made by the local militiamen. The bayonet and company drills were given and the soldier boys gave every evidence of being well drilled. The inspection was witnessed by a number of visitors.

"ON TRIAL" PROVES TO BE SEASON'S DRAMATIC TREAT

A capacity audience at the Plainfield Theatre, last night, was almost unanimous in its verdict that "On Trial," was one of the dramatic treats of the present season. The absolute originality of Elmer Reizenstein's plot and the oddity of the stage procedure kept the spectators in breathless suspense from start to finish. Miss Florence Moore, a child actress, carried off the individual honors with her portrayal of the hero's nine-year-old daughter and the work of Charles Darrah as the defendant also met with favor. The cast was comprised of twenty-seven people and the scenic equipment was in keeping with the action. The management of the Plainfield Theatre is to be congratulated upon its procurement of such plays as "On Trial."

STOCKTON APPOINTED.

Governor Fielder, last night, sent to the Senate the name of Richard Stockton, Democrat, of Trenton, to be State Commissioner of Charities and Corrections to succeed Joseph P. Byers, Republican. The salary is $4,000 and the term of office is three years. Mr. Stockton is a Newark lawyer and is counsel for Mrs. Florence Roundey, of this city, in her alienation suit for $25,000 against Mrs. Elmer K. Poinier.

HURT IN RUNAWAY.

A wagon owned and driven by Michael Mango, in which were his three-year-old daughter and Michael Russo, was hit by a taxicab driven by a man named Pierson, at East Second and Washington streets, yesterday afternoon. The horse became frightened and in the runaway which followed the occupants were thrown out, the children being slightly injured.

SALE RESEMBLED A COUNTY FAIR

Hundreds of Bargain Hunters Attend Public Vendue of Wm. Heath's Goods.

What is familiarly known as the Dixon farm on the Berkeley Heights road adjoining the Bonnie Burn grounds was the mecca for hundreds of people from all about this section, yesterday afternoon. The drawing power was the auction sale of household goods and farm utensils belonging to William Heath, once the possessor of a fortune of $93,000, but now reduced to the garden variety of citizen. The farm property was taken from him under foreclosure proceedings a few weeks since and the owners of a chattel mortgage closed in on his other belongings.

The idea that bargains might be secured drew a crowd of nearly 1,000 people to the premises. One "oldest inhabitant" declared that it was the nearest thing to a country fair that he had ever seen in his ninety odd years of life. They poured in by automobiles, buggy, runabout, bicycle and on foot. John C. Cooper, of Warrenville, was the central figure as auctioneer and praised the goods in glowing terms but a feeling of reticence seemed to pervade the throng. They had the hope of "something for nothing" idea deep in their breast and all John's oratory couldn't separate them from it. A Circassian walnut dining room suite that cost $985 cash about two years ago was sold for $205. Other articles in the house brought corresponding prices and the farming utensils went at fairly good figures as the people who use them always know how much they are worth and are willing to give it. Two hundred choice fowls went for $1.05 a piece. The chattel mortgage was for about $1,600 and although the returns are not all in it is believed the sale will bring in the neighborhood of $2,000.

Heath bought the farm property with the idea of raising fancy poultry and selected eggs. Things didn't pan out right and the ground and buildings were sold under a Court of Chancery sale a short time ago. The place cost Heath about $15,000. His big fortune is said to have entirely disappeared and if there is enough left after the expenses of yesterday's sale are paid he will purchase tickets to California to begin life anew.

PARK GOLF CLUB'S ANNUAL MEETING

Veteran Officers Are Succeeded by Younger Men in the Organization.

OUTLOOK PROMISING

H. L. Moodey Chosen President, C. W. McCutchen Retiring—Committees Are Named—Club Establishes a Junior Class—Other Plans.

The annual meeting of the Park Golf Club held at the Park Club last night was marked by the retirement of all the veteran officers and the election of young men who are enthusiastic over the future success of the organization. The change was made with the unanimous consent of the older members who have guided the destinies of the club from the first, they believing that the time was ripe for the young men to assume the responsibilities.

Charles W. McCutchen, who has been president of the club since it was organized, and to whom the members are indebted for his help and unceasing interest, was succeeded by H. L. Moodey, while J. A. Wilson was chosen vice-president; Walter E. Lough was elected secretary and H. H. Woodland treasurer, the last named succeeding Charles B. Morse, who has also given much of his time and effort to the success of the club. The new trustees comprise Chauncey B. Koons, Frank W. Thompson, Walter Whitehead, Charles B. Morse, Walter E. Lough and Royle T. Phillips.

President Moodey then named the following heads of committees: Tennis, Chauncey B. Koons; finance, Frank W. Thompson; house, Walter Whitehead; membership, J. A. Wilson; greens, Royle T. Phillips.

The report of the treasurer showed that all bills are paid and there is a small balance on hand, the prospects for the coming year being unusually bright. Twelve new applications for membership were received and more are expected soon. The club decided to abolish the initiation fee of $10 a year until the active membership reaches 100. There are now eighty-five active members, the total enrollment, all classes, being 135. The club also decided to establish a junior class for young men between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one years of age. This promises to be a popular feature.

The committee plans to get busy early in its preparation of a golf and tennis schedule for the coming season and a number of attractive competitions will be arranged.

PROSECUTOR STINE TO RE-OPEN BROKAW CASE

Prosecutor A. H. Stine, at tomorrow's session of the Union County Court, will move to open another case against Clarence Brokaw, formerly of North Plainfield, who has undergone considerable litigation as the result of running down Mrs. Noble Beatty, of Elizabeth, as he was driving his automobile through Westfield avenue, that city, in January, 1912. Brokaw was first arrested on a criminal charge and after being freed of this, Mrs. Beatty secured a verdict of $3,500 against him on a civil suit. The defendant in the meantime went into bankruptcy.

According to a decision of the Supreme Court in connection with a Hudson county case a few weeks ago, a person who runs down another while running an automobile can be arrested on a charge of atrocious assault and battery, in other words, the actual collision can be construed as a direct act of the persoon operating it. It is on this decision, that Prosecutor Stine will again take up the Brokaw case and the charge of atrocious assault and battery will be made when the court is asked to begin proceedings.

URGED COURSES TO FIT PEOPLE

Professor Bonser, of Teachers' College, Dwelt on "Industrial Training."

REMEDIES SUGGESTED

Speaker Appearing Before Monday Afternoon Club Urges Municipalities to Study the Needs of the Populace—Miss Philips Speaks.

Dwelling on the application of present-day public school education to every day life, Professor Bonser, head of the Industrial and Vocational Training Department of the Teachers' College, of New York city, entertained the members of the Monday Afternoon Club, yesterday, in the parish house of the Congregational church, with a thoroughly interesting and practical treatise of the subject. He took for his topic "Industrial Training," and commented particularly on its affiliation with public school education in municipalities of Plainfield's size. He declared that the common complaint at the present time regarding the scarcity of work was unwarranted, but that there were so many "misfits" that many of the jobs have gone begging. This is the direct result of unclassified and not well adapted education in the schools, according to Professor Bonser, who advocated a community specialization in the departments of culture particularly adapted to the individual to be benefitted.

The speaker stated that the reason for a large majority of school children leaving the institutions of learning as soon as they are eligible to take out working papers was the lack of training fitted to the traits of the individual. Statistics and charts presented by the lecturer indicated that but one-fourth of the children who discontinued courses in New York public schools last year left because their families were in need of financial assistance from them.

In the opinion of Professor Bonser, the children quit at early stages in their career because it is not worth their while staying. They waste their time in the schools because they are not fitted to pursue subjects taught there and yearn for an opportunity to expand their individual talents. In many municipalities, according to the speaker, agriculture and manual training are not even hinted at in the educational courses and the pupils drop out because they yearn for these branches.

He stated that the school population grows less as the higher grades are reached and showed in one instance where but eleven out of 14,000 pupils completed four years of High School work.

Other statistics showed that out of ninety-five pupils who left a school twenty quit because they were compelled to aid their families; thirty-three because they were induced to do so by thir parents, and forty-two because of personal feelings.

He concluded his talk by urging a survey in each community of what is needed along educational lines and what the people are equipped for. He decried the practice of forcing elementary studies on persons who had a natural tendency toward mechanism and other trades.

Miss Mabelle Phillips, secretary of the local Charity Organization, gave a short talk on her work, presenting a number of statistics and other valuable information.

"SUGARING OFF" PARTY IS ENJOYED BY MANY

The "sugaring off" party given in the parish house of the Congregational church, last night, by the members of Everett Morgan's Sunday-school class, was a great success and there were a large number of persons present to enjoy the affair. Both old and young people were present and besides enjoying maple sugar, games were played and there was a general social time.

Large quantities of Vermont maple syrup were boiled down until it was ready to sugar and then each of the guests was served. The hot syrup was placed in a panful of snow which quickly formed into candy. It was then eaten with crullers and pickles. Miss Alice Morgan had charge of the games while Mr. and Mrs. Everett Morgan and Dr. and Mrs. H. V. Hubbard had charge of the social generally.

United in Mariage This Afternoon to James William Aughiltree.

In the presence of a small gathering of relatives and intimate friends, Miss Ruth Potter Maxson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, was united in marriage this afternoon to James William Aughiltree, son of Mrs. James W. Aughiltree, of Third place. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents on West Seventh street by Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-day Baptist church. The parlor, where the bridal party gathered, was tastefully decorated with palms and plants, interspersed with daffodils. In all the other rooms, daffodils predominated.

Miss Maxson was attired in a becoming gown of ivory satin with Georgiette crepe and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas. Her only attendant was her cousin, Miss Ethel Titsworth, of this city, who acted as bridesmaid. She wore a gown of pale green faille and chiffon. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of spring flowers. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Maxson's gown was of crepe meteor trimmed with silver lace, while Mrs. Aughiltree, Sr., wore a gown of gray silk trimmed with real lace. There were no other participants in the ceremony and the idea throughout was one of simplicity.

A reception followed the nuptial event during which Mr. and Mrs. Aughiltree were showered with congratulations. They took their departure later for a wedding trip, the destination of which was not made known. On returning they will make their home at Morris Park, Long Island. Both bride and bridegroom were the recipients of numerous handsome presents, articles of silver, cut glass, bric a brac and furniture being plentiful in the array. The guests in attendance were from Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Westerly, R. I. and this city.

Mr. Aughiltree is a native of Brooklyn but has been a resident of Plainfield for many years. He was prominent in the formation of the Plainfield Boy Scout patrols and at the present time is third deputy commissioner. He has many friends in both Plainfield and New York, his business being in the latter city with the Vacuum Oil Company. Mrs. Aughiltree is one of Plainfield's best known young women having lived here practically all her life. She was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1900 and from Smith College five years later. For several years she was engaged in the efficiency work of the Plainfield schools of which her father is superintendent. During the last year she had been connected with a similar department in the schools at Rahway.

BARBER OVERSLEPT; ROW FOLLOWED OVER WAGES

Considerable excitement was occasioned on North avenue at 11 o'clock yesterday morning by the rumor that a fight was being waged to the finish in the tonsorial parlors of Vincengo Tozze by Mr. Tozze himself and Vincent Della Badi, an assistant, who hails from East View, N. Y. A large crowd quickly assembled at the point of interest and that a terrific struggle was being waged within the Tozze establishment was evident to those who couldn't obtain a view of the interior. When the fight was at its height Marshal W. H. Snyder entered the front door of the establishment as Vincent Della Badi dashed out of the rear. A lively chase ensued.

While the marshal is not as young as he used to be he can surely run some and after a short but stiff chase he overtook Della Badi, who had his eye as his short legs sped over the ground, focused on neighboring mountain and freedom.

When arraigned in court with Tozze, before Recorder David A. Campbell, Della Badi testified that the trouble had arisen over his arriving in the tonsorial establishment to pursue his duties of the day at the late hour of 10.30. Tozze lectured his man upon his late appearance, whereupon Della Badi independently replied, "If you don't like you can getta da new workman and I will getta da new job."

A dispute then ensued as to the amount of salary due Della Badi, which it is said culminated in Tozze lunging out and striking his man. The case was disposed of by Recorder Campbell getting Tozze and Della Badi to agree upon the amount due and then ordering that the sum be paid.

New Styles for Spring

The Important Fashion Features for the Coming Season Are Revealed In the Interesting Display We Present Tomorrow

Seldom have the styles of a new season been so eagerly awaited as they have this Spring; and seldom, indeed, have they better deserved such extraordinary interest. To American designers is due chief credit for the smart and lovely fashions that will be worn the coming season; though it is only fair to admit that the inspiration for them came in large degree from Paris.

The styles for Spring are fixed and there is not likely to be any important change later on. There is a wide variety of fashions but the basic motive of all is about the same. How much better than in previous seasons when styles of many sorts were in vogue, and when fashions changed and fluctuated almost to the season's close!

We are sure that you will find this first general display of Spring fashions sufficiently interesting to visit!

The New Spring Suits and Coats

The "smartness" which well-dressed American women strive for is exemplified in these handsome new Spring suits and coats. The important features are widely flaring skirts and short coats in the suits, and flare at bottom and belted effects in separate coats.

Waists Show the Military Influence

The high collars which fit closely about the neck are noted on many of the prettiest styles; sleeves are mostly of the set-in type, and are long and closely-fitting. V neck styles, too, are shown here in large numbers. There is ample variety to suit the taste of every woman.

A Dislay of the New Wash Goods

A very large variety of new weaves, colorings and patterns is represented in this assortment, as well as the plain wash materials that are always needed for Spring apparel. Qualities are of the best, and prices are a shade lower than normal, due to the low price of cotton.

The New Spring Millinery Is Exceedingly Lovely

Small hats which set on the head in such a manner as to reveal the back hair are most in evidence. There is a great variety of styles, shapes and trimmings. The high lustred straws are popular, and of them we are showing a particularly large number.

The New Dresses Are Superb

Circular skirts are noted on most of the new models. Quaint and pretty are some of the styles which show one puffed band at the edge of a full flare skirt—a fashion that was in vogue nearly a century ago. White is most popular, though black and white and many new colors are also seen.

ANOTHER ARGOSY.

American young folks have an opportunity to contribute to an Argosy fund, one of the finest causes that the nation has ever been asked to support. "Easter Argosy—a ship of life and love," is the name which the American Commission for Relief in Belgium has bestowed upon a vessel which soon will sail with a load of things to make the lives of the Belgian children happy at the Easter-tide. Not only will there be necessities, but some sweets and goodies, such as were sent in the Christmas ship, will be included.

The cargo is to be a birthday gift for little nine year old Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, daughter of King Albert and Queen Elizabeth, and the load will be distributed among the thousands of needy little ones by the relief fund.

This gives an opportunity for the younger generation in this country to share in the relief of the poor children who have to suffer with their parents in Belgium because they have been deprived of their homes and are entirely dependent upon the charity of America.

By sending ten cents or more each, American children can make the little Belgians very happy. The money will all be spent in America to buy foods andsweets for the Argosy ship. Every one who contributes twenty-five cents or more will receive a Marie Jose Argosy card with a picture of the princess and an acknowledgement of the Easter gift.

There can be no abatement of the relief work in Belgium, as an exchange says; the conditions are appalling and seven millions of people, comprising helpless women and children, are entirely dependent upon continued charity to which more than 50,000 people in America have contributed and which has availed to keep this unfortunate and desperate population of Belgium alive for many weary weeks and months.

Down at Asbury Park the Evening Press makes the same complaint that is being heard in Plainfield. One of the oldest and ablest men and a captain on the police force in the shore city has been kept on night desk duty for months, as has been the case with Captain John Flynn in Plainfield. It seems a shame that a man who has spent years on outside work in plain clothes, and has been efficient, without a single blot on his record in all that time, should be compelled to do work that any policeman could do, even though he had been on the force but a few days. It's all well enough to have an officer on the job, but the Captain is not needed.

The employers' liability law is a good thing, but like every other good thing injustice may come from it. An evidence that injustice can be worked by it comes in the case of a Newark upholsterer, who held tacks in his mouth while hanging shades. One of them pricked his tongue and cancer developed, the man dying under an operation. The court decided that the employing firm must pay the man's widow $9 a week for 300 weeks. If he had scratched his tongue on a bone in a chicken sandwich while eating his lunch at the noon hour, we suppose the employed would have been equally liable in case cancer had developed.

The supervising principal of the Trenton public schools has made a report to the Board of Education that there are at least 700 children attending school there who are improperly fed. The Trenton people would do well to come to Plainfield and take a leaf out of the book in this city, where the penny lunches have solved a serious problem.

The telephone Company has voluntarily reduced its revenue $3,000,000 per year in New York city. If it can be done there, could not rates be reduced in proportion in New Jersey? It's nearly time for some citizen with backbone to get busy, and start the Public Utilities Commission investigating the prices charged in New Jersey.

A Washington man has sued a theatrical manager because he was kissed by a chorus girl. We'll bet his wife was sitting alongside of him when the fair one descended from the stage and planted the alleged objectional print upon his check.

If a popular subscription would make it possible to restore the fire whistle in this city the money would be forthcoming in a very few days. It is missed more than anything that has gone out of the life of the people.

They are nearly as long putting the new fire apparatus at the Netherwood House into use as they were originally getting it here.

Governor Fielder has signed a bill making it possible to appoint women police officers. One would be a good thing for Plainfield.

THE FORUM

APROACHING ARMAGEDDON.
The Meaning of This World War.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

What is the meaning of this cataclysm of the nations? What means the beating of this flail of death on the quivering flesh of civilization? Is it only a step in human evolution? Is it the wreck of civilization? Is it the long-expected Armageddon of Biblical prophecy?

Yesterday this world was a neighborhood; today it is a slaughterhouse, a charnel, a cyclone, a cemetery. Yesterday there was comparative peace and prosperity, confidence, friendly intercourse, and kindly ministration; today there is turmoil and famine, distrust, hatred, malevolence, ruin dismay and a mutual desire to injure and to kill. Does it mean nothing to this race but the changing of a few rulers and the making of new boundary lines?

It means much more. Civilization as a guarantor of peace has proved itself a broken reed. The hand that leaned upon it has been pierced by it, and the innocent of that trust are watering the storm-swept soil with their tears and their blood.

Centuries ago this world was warned that a time would come when the call to war would go ringing through the earth, and the nations would respond.

Certain religious leaders have been teaching the world for years that we were soon to enter upon a millennium of peace. They have deluded themselves and their hearers with the belief that some of the wishes of the human heart are the very oracles of God. They have wanted wars to cease, and have declared that they would cease. God has recorded their declaration; and then they have declared that God's record of their declaration in this matter was God's own declaration to the human race of what he purposed should be. This utterance from Isaiah they have thus interpreted:

"And he (God) shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isaiah 2:4.

It is essential that we know who is saying this. The verse immediately preceding the one quoted reads:

"And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."

Who says it?—Many people." And they are saying it now. And what else are they saying?—That "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks;" and that "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." When are they saying it? The second verse of the same chapter tells us that "it shall come to pass in the last days," etc.

Then "in the last days" we are to hear much talk of an epoch of peace, tranquility and prosperity; much talk of regulating all human conduct by divine law; much talk of the church regulating all the affairs of the world; much talk of the speedy and perpetual elimination of war from the activities of this world. If we had no other proof that we are living in the last days, present-day facts fulfilling that prophecy would be proof enough. That scripture describes our times, and our times fulfill that scripture.

Now what is the truth of the matter? In the same chapter we learn what the true conditions will be in the last days. It portrays a condition of terror in the world:

"Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of His Majesty. The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. For the day of the Lord of hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up; and he shall be brought low . . . And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of His Majesty, when He ariseth to shake the terrible earth." Isaiah 2:10-21.

A very different condition of things is this from the condition which "many people" are looking for; but that scripture agrees perfectly with what our Saviour himself declared would be.

There is no promise there of any epoch of peace and safety. It is a time of distress and perplexity and fear and terror, and it leads right into the coming of the Son of God, the destruction of the wicked and the reward of the righteous.

Since Turkey has decided to throw herself into this fray, there is every possibility that this terrible grapple of the nations of the world is leading straight on toward Armageddon. While Turkey kept out and the war was confined to Europe, Armageddon did not seem so near. That old battle ground of the ancient nations is located in Palestine, at the foot of Mt. Megiddo, in the plain of Esdraelon, north of Jerusalem, accessible from north and south and from the sea. That is to be the gathering place of the hosts of the nations in the last mighty battles of this world.

The reason for the assembly of the nations at Armageddon seems plain when we consider the logical result of Turkey's entrance into this war. If she is driven out of Europe and forced out of western Asia Minor, it would seem she must withdraw into Palestine. When Islam and other heathen religionists come to grips with armed Christendom in the Holy Land, we shall have Armageddon. The door is now flung wide open for just such a denouement. And will peace follow it? Nay, verily; and there will be no battles fought after that, for there will be no one left to fight them. That closes the history of this present world, and leaves the wicked slain upon the earth and the righteous on their way with angelic escort to the place of their reward.

Very sincerely yours,
C. E. GULICK,
Elder of the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

CURT REPLY STIRS STATE DEPARTMENT

Two First Class Battleships Are On Their Way to Vera Cruz.

Washington, March 9—Some irritation was aparent in the State Department over the fact that General Carranza merely acknowledged in somewhat curt fashion the receipt of the note of this Government with the declaration that he would make a reply later. The note was almost peremptory in tone and in the opinion of officials here called for an immediate and specific answer. Monterey has fallen before the Carranzista troops, a despatch to the Constitutionalist agency here today reported. The despatch reads: "Monterey was captured by Gen. Pablo Gonzales yesterday morning and many prisoners and a large amount of war supplies were taken. Gen. Gonzales has sent 2,000 troops to reinforce Gen. Maclovio Herrera at Sabinas. They arrived at Monclova last night."

Two first-class battleships from the fleet now off Guantanamo, Cuba, have been ordered to proceed at once to Vera Cruz. The order was wirelessed today to Rear Admiral Fletcher by Secretary of the Navy Daniels. The selection of the ships for the service was left to the discretion of Admiral Fletcher. The vessels will be in command of a flag officer.

Admiral Fletcher wired the Navy Department today, that he had sent Rear Admiral Caperton on board the cruiser Washington, accompanied by the battleship Georgia, to reinforce the ships now at Vera Cruz.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

There will be a special service conducted by Mrs. Adjutant Wall in the Salvation Army Hall on East Second street tonight. Adjutant and Mrs. Wall were formerly in charge of the work in this city and their many friends will be pleased at this opportunity of hearing Mrs. Wall again.

A meeting of the Tomlinson "Y" will be held at the home of Frederick Colin, 835 Kensington avenue, tonight at 8 o'clock. It is urged that a good number shall attend this meeting as a subject of much importance will be discussed, and it is necessary that the society shall have a large atendance. After the business meeting a social period will be enjoyed.

FOUR SEATS WAIT FOR THE WINNERS

A Little Hustling is all That is Needed to Visit Panama Fair.

ROOM FOR ENTRANTS

See Contest Manager Now and Put Yourself in a Position to Win One of These Splendid Trips at the Expense of the Press.

Speculation is already rife as to who will enter the charmed circle of four at the close of the contest for the free tours across the continent.

The different candidates are already watching the other candidates in their district, and all are planning ways and means to secure substantial returns in votes and corresponding rapid advances.

One thing is certain, no mysticism, charm of legerdemain will enter into their success. Planning their campaign by the light of the moon, while it is shining over their left shoulder, or carrying the left hind foot of a rabbit captured in a graveyard, will not further their interests. There is no luck about this campaign. The moon and the seven stars, the groundhog and his shadow, a black cat, Friday and the thirteenth, crossing your fingers behind your back, or throwing salt over your right shoulder, none of these has any part in the making of the success of those who accumulate the necessary number of votes to secure the honors from their district.

The open sesame that will throw wide the doors of success is just energy, determined and undismayed. It is energy that will push your standing far ahead and the lack of energy that will cause you to fall back.

If there ever was incentive to work it is for those candidates fortunate enough to have enrolled their names so early in the contest. They have an advantage which will cease to be of any use unless they avail themselves of it by reaping the first harvest of votes which lies about them in such profusion.

There are opportunities now that will be gone later. Perhaps some candidate from another district is planning to write postcards into your district, asking support from those people you are depending on, but have neglected seeing.

The real interest the active candidates and their friends are taking in the race is becoming apparent, and a number of letters have been received from prospective candidates who are anxious to know whether it is "Too late to enter the contest."

The question is easily answered. The contest has hardly started, and anyone can enter at any time during the contest.

There is no doubt that some of those who are making good progress were just as skeptical of success as are many who will hesitate to enter. Generally the candidates who deliberate well on their chances of winning before enrolling are the ones who are victorious at the end.

A feeling of timidity and hesitation oftens goes before great achievements.

Most certainly there is no sense in acknowledging yourself defeated before you begin. Many will say, "Oh, I would just hate to enter and then not win." But how are you to tell you will not win? What reason is there for you to believe that you should not be among the fortunate ones?

Being skeptical of success in any venture you know your effort will bring success is many times the incentive to greater effort, and the consequent accomplishment of what you start out to do. Timidity, however, is reprehensible.

The trip will be a glorious one, and it would really be a great pity if you were to lose it through a little timidity or sense of false pride.

Write the Contest Manager or 'phone him and give him an opportunity to have a personal chat with you. The Contest Department will be kept open every evening between 7 and 8 o'clock, except Sunday, particularly for the convenience of candidates who find it impossible to call during the day. Every candidate should call at this office and receive instructions as well as all the printed forms which are necessary for the carrying on of a successful campaign.

The next publication of standing of candidates will appear in Thursday's Press; also all additional names of candidates which are received by 6 o'clock this evening. Votes to count in Thursday's publication of the list must be in the ballot box at the Contest Department by 6 o'clock this evening.

Everyone Wins.

The management of the Press has decided to be most liberal to the candidates who may enter this contest. In addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all those candidates who do not win trips, and remain active until the end of the contest, a commission of ten per cent. will be paid on new subscriptions, and a five per cent. commission will be paid on old subscriptions.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday until further notice.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

In order to set aside misapprehensions, it is stated for the benefit of the local moving picture patrons that the Plainfield Theatre has the exclusive right to the first "run" of films put out by the Paramount Agency. Under the contract, all new Paramount pictures come direct to the Plainfield Theatre and they can not be shown in this city, until after thirty days have elapsed from the time of their presentation. The Paramount service includes all productions by the Famous Players Company, Jesse Lasky, the Kleine Company, and many others. These concerns are issuing successful five-part photo-plays every week and the only place to see them before they have gotten old and "jumpy" is at the Second street play-house. The attraction at the theatre today, in addition to the serial film, "The Master Key," is the screen version of James Montgomery Flaggs' charming story, "The Adventures of Kitty Cobb." Thursday afternoon and night the photo production of George M. Cohen's successful farce, "Officer 666" will be shown, and on Friday and Saturday the management will present one of the most elaborate and costly picture productions of the day, Hal Caine's dramatic masterpiece, "The Christian." All these are examples of what the first "run" of Paramount pictures mean and they are provided for the Plainfield Theatre patrons, both matinee and night, at popular prices.

One of the most notable events of the theatrical season will be Margaret Anglin's engagement in Oscar Wilde's brilliant comedy-drama, "Lady Windemere's Fan," who appears at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow night. Previous to Miss Anglin's revival of the play in New York last season where it ran for three months at the Hudson and Liberty theatres, "Lady Windermere's Fan" had not been seen in this country since the hey-day of its success more than twenty years ago. "Lady Windermere's Fan" was the first of the society comedies by Oscar Wilde, and now after more than twenty years it remains the best of the plays of this writer. It is overlaid with a brilliance of dialogue that makes its revival worth while. The smart talk of the late Victorian drawing rooms, polished up for the theatre, the nonchalant satire, the languid cynicism, the flashing epigrams—these are the attractions of "Lady Windermere's Fan" as a play.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Proctor's Theatre has the honor this week of having on it's bill a man who was acting mayor of New York during the administration of the late William Gaynor. The personage in question is Hon. Francis P. Bent, for many years prominent in Manhattan politics, and widely known as a traveler and lecturer. He is included in the theatre's program, giving for the first three days of this week a timely travelogue on Mexico, illustrated by scores of beautiful views taken personally, together with a number depicting the cities and scenes so frequently mentioned in the despatches since the present rebellious conditions began. For the last half of the week, commencing Thursday, Mr Bent will talk on Alaska, a territory in which he has spent many years both as a traveler and government investigator. Mr. Bent's style of lecturing is the "rapid-fire" kind, speaking quickly and preceding from one description without the loss of a second. Dryness is an unknown quality and he has a subtle humor that is all his own, producing numerous laughs at the right time. His voice is distinct and the anunciation of the most pleasing kind. Mr. Bent is a personal friend of both Mr. Proctor and Mr. Sanderson, and during yesterday's performances gave an additional talk in which he spoke of the policy of the Proctor houses. He stated it is the intention of the two proprietors to give Plainfield at least one big feature act on every vaudeville bill, citing several head-line artists who are to appear in the near future. The management is able to do this, he said by reason of the fact that Mr. Proctor is vice-president of the United Booking Office which supplies the acts for 900 theatres in the United States and Canada and that artists are willing to play the Plainfield Proctor's on concessions if given the full time on the big circuit.

STRICT MEASURES WILL BE ENFORCED

Principal Earley, of North Plainfield High School, Investigates Conditions.

Serious objection has been lodged by those interested in the welfare of Plainfield and North Plainfield school children to conditions existing in Saengerbund Hall where an interscholastic girls' basketball game between teams representing the local and borough institutions will be played tomorrow afternoon. Urgent protests have led Principal Albert Earley, of North Plainfield High School, to personally investigate the circumstances complained of and has formulated certain rules that will be strictly enforced on that occasion.

Mr. Earley announced this morning that the attendance would not be limited but that persons not interested in an official capacity would be kept off the ground floor of the hall, or the playing arena. A limit has been placed on the gallery capacity and those coming late must expect to be turned away. Everything possible will be done by Mr. Earley and a corps of competent officials to establish every precaution against the possible outbreak of fire.

These games are productive of considerable enthusiasm and it is a difficult proposition to keep the conorts of the contending forces from giving vent to their exhuberance by stamping on the gallery and leaning against the none-too-strong rails around the gallery.

WEEKLY B. B. GAMES.

The Columbus Club basketball team will play its weekly contest Thursday night in the Columbus Club auditorium against the St. Joseph's five of North Plainfield.

ACCEPTS OFFER FOR SURVEY

er data so that modern and accepted standards of successful municipal buiness may be presented to the Council for consideration.

The Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association has been busily engaged for sometime getting information especially as to matters on taxation, and it now proposes to raise the necessary funds to conduct the survey which will be a thorough one in every detail. The Mayor's message and the accompanying letter from Mr. Depew as presented to the Council, last night, is as follows:

"A resolution was adopted by your honorable body on January 25th expressing your concurrence with me that an expert administrative survey of the various departments is desirable for the purpose of ascertaining whether we are organized for efficiency and economy in the administration of our public affairs according to modern and accepted standards of municipal business, and requesting me to submit to you an plan for a survey that might be presented to me by the organization of public-spirited citizens referred to in my message of January 1st as desirous of furnishing at least in part the necessary funds.

"Accordingly, on January 30th, I advised the Plainfield Taxpayers Protective Association, the organization above referred to, of your endorsement of the principle of a survey and of your said request.

"I am pleased to be able to advise you that I am now in receipt of the following communication from the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association:

"New York, March 2, 1915.

"Leighton Calkins, Mayor,
North Avenue,
Plainfield, N. J.

"Dear sir: Referring to your letter of January 30, 1915, I beg to advise you that, subject to the approval of yourself and the Common Council, this Association proposes to have a general survey of the various departments of the city made by the Bureau of Municipal Research of New York, at our expense if the necessary funds can be raised by us.

"Will you kindly advise me whether this meets with the approval of yourself and the Council, and oblige,

"Yours very truly,
"R. HENRY DEPEW,
"President.

"Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association."

"I recommend the adoption by your honorable body of a resolution approving the plan of the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association and offering, in every way consistent with the requirements of the public service, to facilitate the work of said survey by placing all city departments under your control at the disposition of the experts to be employed. As I have heretofore pointed out, we may assume that all city officials without exception will welcome an analysis of methods undertaken solely for the purpose of getting at the facts, so that they may be studied with reference to the experience of other cities, and so modern and accepted standards of successful municipal business may be presented to us for our consideration.

"LEIGHTON CALKINS,
"Mayor.

PEG O' MY HEART

By J. Hartley Manners

CHAPTER XXVII.

New Revelations.

"WHY, how do you do, Sir Gerald?" and Hawkes went across quickly with outstretched hand.

"Hello, Hawkes," replied Jerry, too preoccupied to return the act of salutation. Instead he nodded in the direction Peg had gone and questioned:

"What does she mean—going in a few minutes?"

"She is returning to America. Our term of guardianship is over. She absolutely refuses to stay here any longer. My duties in regard to her, outside of the annual payment provided by her late uncle, end today," replied the lawyer.

"I think not, Hawkes."

"I beg your pardon?"

"As the chief executor of the late Mr. Kingsnorth's will I must be satisfied that its conditions are complied with in the spirit as well as to the letter," said Jerry authoritatively.

"Mr. Kingsnorth expressly stipulated that a year was to elapse before any definite conclusion was arrived at. So far only a month has passed."

"But she insists on returning to her father," protested Mr. Hawkes.

"Have you told her the conditions of the will?"

"Certainly not. Mr. Kingsnorth distinctly stated she was not to know them."

"Except under exceptional circumstances. I consider the circumstances most exceptional."

"I am afraid I cannot agree with you, Sir Gerald."

"That is a pity. But it doesn't alter my intention."

"And may I ask what that intention is?"

"To carry out the spirit of Mr. Kingsnorth's bequest."

"And what do you consider the spirit?"

"I think we will best carry out Mr. Kingsnorth's last wishes by making known the conditions of his bequest to Miss O'Connell and then let her decide whether she wishes to abide by them or not."

Mrs. Chichester came into the room and went straight to Jerry. At the same time Alaric burst in through the garden and greeted Jerry and Hawkes.

"I heard you were here"— began Mrs. Chichester.

Jerry interrupted her anxiously. "Mrs. Chichester, I was entirely to blame for last night's unfortunate business. Don't visit your displeasure on the poor little child. Please don't!"

Jarvis came down the stairs with a pained, not to say mortified, expression on his face. Underneath his left arm he held tightly a shabby little bag and a freshly wrapped up parcel. In his right hand, held far away from his body, was the melancholy and picturesque terrier, Michael.

Mrs. Chichester looked at him in horror.

"Where are you going with those—things?" she gasped.

"To put them in a cab, madam," answered the humiliated footman. "Your niece's orders."

"Put those articles in a traveling bag. Use one of my daughter's," ordered the old lady.

"Your niece objects, madam. She sez she'll take nothing away she didn't bring with her."

The grief stricken woman turned away as Jarvis passed out. Alaric tried to comfort her. But the strain of the morning had been too great. He looked cheerfully at Jerry and smiled as he said:

"I even offered to marry her if she'd stay. Couldn't do more than that, could I?"

Jerry returned Alaric's smile as he asked:

"You offered to marry her?"

Alaric nodded.

"Poor little wretch!"

Down the stairs came Peg and Ethel. Mrs. Chichester looked at Peg through misty eyes and said reproachfully:

"Why that old black dress? Why not one of the dresses I gave you?"

"This is the way I left me father, an' this is the way I'm goin' back to him!" replied Peg stubbily.

"You're not going, Peg," said Jerry quietly and positively.

"Who's goin' to stop me?"

"The chief executor of the late Mr. Kingsnorth's will."

"An' who is that?"

"Mr. Jerry, Peg!"

"You an executor?"

"I am. Sit down—here in our midst—and know why you have been here all the past month."

He forced Peg gently into a chair.

"Have you ever wondered at the real reason you were brought here to this house and the extraordinary interest taken in you by relations who until a month ago had never even bothered about your existence?"

"I have, indade," Peg answered. "But whenever I've asked any one I've always been told it was me uncle's wish."

"And it was. Indeed, his keenest desire just before his death was to atone in some way for his unkindness to your mother."

"Nothin' could do that," and Peg's lips tightened.

"That was why he sent for you."

"Sendin' for me won't bring me poor mother back to life, will it?"

"At least we must respect his intentions. He desired that you should be given the advantages your mother had when she was a girl.

"In justice to yourself," proceeded Jerry, "you must know that he set aside the sum of £1,000 a year to be paid to the lady who would undertake your training."

Peg sprang up and walked across to her aunt and looked down at her.

"A thousand pounds a year!" She turned to Jerry and asked: "Does she get a thousand a year for abusin' me? Well, what do ye think of that?" cried Peg, gazing curiously at Mrs. Chichester. "A thousand pounds a year for makin' me miserable, an' the poor dead man thinkin' he was doin' me a favor!"

"I tell you this," went on Jerry, "because I don't want you to feel that you have been living on charity. You have not."

Peg suddenly blazed up:

"Well, I've been made to feel it," and she glared passionately at her aunt.

Peg's anger gave place to just as sudden a twinge of regret as she caught sight of Ethel, white faced and staring at her compassionately. She went across to Ethel and buried her face on her shoulder and wept as she wailed:

"Why wasn't I told? I'd never have stayed! Why wasn't I told?"

And Ethel comforted her.

"Don't cry, dear," she whispered. "Don't. The day you came here we were beggars. You have literally fed and housed us for the last month."

Poor Mrs. Chichester looked at her daughter reproachfully.

Peg grasped the full meaning of Ethel's words:

"And will ye have nothin' if I go away?"

Peg persisted:

"Tell me—are ye raiely dependin' on me? Spake to me. Because if ye are I won't go. I'll stay with ye. I wouldn't see ye beggars for the wurrid. I've been brought up amongst them, an' I know what it is."

Suddenly she took Ethel by the shoulders and asked in a voice so low that none of the others heard her:

"Was that the reason ye were goin' last night?"

Ethel tried to stop her.

The truth illumined Ethel's face, and Peg saw it and knew.

"Holy Mary!" she cried. "And it was I was drivin' ye to it. Ye felt the insult of it every time ye met me, as ye said last night. Sure, if I'd known, dear, I'd never have hurt ye, I wouldn't. Indade I wouldn't!"

She turned to the others.

"There, it's all settled. I'll stay with ye, aunt, an' ye can tache me anything ye like. Will some one ask Jarvis to bring back my bundles an' Michael? I'm goin' to stay!"

Jerry smiled approvingly at her. Then he said:

"That is just what I would have expected you to do; but, my dear Peg, there's no need for such a sacrifice."

"Sure, why not?" cried Peg excitedly. "Let me sacrifice meself. I feel like it this minit."

"There is no occasion."

He walked over to Mrs. Chichester and addressed her:

"I came here this morning with some very good news for you. I happen to be one of the directors of Gifford's bank, and I am happy to say that it will shortly reopen its doors, and all the depositors' money will be available for them in a little while."

Mrs. Chichester gave a cry of joy.

"Oh, Alaric!" she exclaimed. "My darling Ethel!"

"A panic in American securities, in which we were heavily interested, caused the suspension of business," explained Jerry. "The panic is over. The securities are rising every day. We'll soon be on easy street again."

Jerry looked at Peg. She caught his eye and smiled, but it had a sad wistfulness behind it.

"Sure, they don't want me now. I'd better take me cab. Good day to ye." And she started quickly for the door.

Jerry stopped her.

"There is just one more condition of Mr. Kingsnorth's will that you must know. Should you go through your course of training satisfactorily to the age of twenty-one you will inherit the sum of £5,000 a year."

"When I'm twenty-one I get £5,000 a year?" gasped Peg.

"If you carry out certain conditions."

"An' what are they?"

"Satisfy the executors that you are worthy of the legacy."

"Satisfy you?"

"And Mr. Hawkes."

Peg looked at the somewhat uncomfortable lawyer.

"Mr. Hawkes! Oh-o! Indade!" She turned back to Jerry. "Did he know about the five thousand? When I'm twenty-one?"

"He drew the will at Mr. Kingsnorth's dictation," replied Jerry.

"Was that why ye wanted me to be engaged to ye until I was twenty-one?" she asked the unhappy lawyer.

"Come, come, Miss O'Connell," said Hawkes. "What nonsense?"

"Did you propose to Miss Margaret?" queried Jerry.

"Well," hesitated the embarrassed lawyer—"in a measure—yes."

"That's what it was," cried Peg, with a laugh. "It was very measured. No wonder the men were crazy to kape me here an' to marry me."

Then Jerry spoke to the others. "Now may I have a few moment alone with my ward?"

Peg stared at Jerry incredulously.

"Ward? Is that me?"

"Yes, Peg. I am your legal guardian—appointed by Mr. Kingsnorth."

"You're the director of a bank, the executor of an estate, an' now ye're me guardian. What do ye do with yer spare time?"

Jerry smiled and appealed to the others:

"Just a few seconds—alone."

"Will you write to me?" urged Jerry when he and Peg were alone.

"What for?"

"Peg, my dear!" He took both of her hands in his and bent over her.

Just for a moment was Peg tempted to yield to the embrace.

Had she done so the two lives would have changed in that moment. But the old rebellious spirit came uppermost, and she looked at him defiantly and cried:

"Are you goin' to propose to me too?"

That was the one mistake that separated those two hearts. Sir Gerald drew back from her—hurt.

Jarvis came quietly in:

"Mr. Hawkes says, miss, if you are going to catch the train"—

"I'll catch it," said Peg impatiently, and Jarvis went out.

Peg looked at Jerry's back turned eloquently toward her as though in rebuke.

"Why in the wurrld did I say that to him?" she muttered. "It's me Irish tongue." She went to the door and opened it noisily, rattling the handle loudly, hoping he would look around.

Under her breath she murmured:

"Goodby, Misther Jerry, an' God bless ye, an' thank ye for bein' so nice to me." And she passed out.

In the hall Peg found Ethel and Hawkes waiting for her. They put her between them in the cab, and, with Michael in her arms, she drove through the gates of Regal Villa never to return.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

ONE OF THE SPRING FLOWER FAIRIES MIGHT BE GARBED LIKE THIS.

A fairy-like little dancing frock is this of white crepe de chine with "crispy" ruffles of fine white tulle over others of the same material in a rosebud pink. The modish effect of narrow shoulders is cleverly effected by the shaping and adjusting of the ruffles which serve in lieu of sleeves. The long blouse portion is severely plain and gathered into a girdle of white satin below which is a tunic of the crepe also plain and also bloused. The pink tulle ruffles under white appear again as underskirt. Little knots of arbutus blossoms decorate this charming frock.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD.

"Well, Nell, it's come." Dick tossed his wife a letter and watched her as she read it.

"So you must go right away?" she asked.

"Yes, I think so. I want to get the early train tomorrow morning. After dinner you can help me pack."

"Has your firm gone to the wall, Dick?"

"Really, I can not tell what they are going to do; it depends on the way this patent case is decided; but their business has been so crippled by the fight that it will take months to adjust themselves and get back their customers. They are retrenching in every way. I am going to try for this position out west, anyway. This business is too shaky for a married man to depend on."

They were unusually silent at dinner. Each was carrying on a separate, intense train of thought. Dick had his mind full of the coming interview with the western manager and Nell was picturing life away from all her girlhood friends, away from her girlhood home.

"There's one thing in favor of the move to Kansas that you have not mentioned. We would be near your people. Think of it, we have been married nearly a year and I have never seen your father and mother." Nell looked up brightly, but her husband only nodded. He was thinking too deeply to reply, so Nell decided as she pondered the matter.

Each of them packed a suit case before they went to bed. Nell was going to her mother's to stay during Dick's absence.

Next morning they locked the pretty cottage and started off in the cold, gray fog. Dick set Nell's suit case into the hall of her mother's home as they passed and they went on together to the station. While waiting for the train they walked up and down the platform. The fog hung like a pall over everything, shutting them in a narrow circle alone. To Nell it seemed typical of the uncertainty of their future. She seemed to be at the parting of the ways and all the brightness of her life was receding from her.

Oh, why did they have to move when they were so happy in their little home, the home that had been offered for sale? She could not bear to think of other people living in it.

The train roared past them and they turned; when they reached the coach steps Dick kissed her and climbed aboard.

He waved from the platform and she watched him out of sight. The train nosed its way into the fog and was swallowed up. She felt as if the bright first chapter of her married life was ended.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Illness of Leander Lobster.

Leander Lobster once came in from play and said, "Oh, my!
I feel so very, very sick I think I'm going to die!"
And when his mother looked at him she said, "I feel quite sure
You would not be so red unless you had a temperature.

"I'll send at once for Doctor Clam, because I know that he
Is quite the best physician in this part of the sea.
And while we wait for Doctor Clam," Leander's mother said,
"I think that you had better lie down in your ocean bed."

When Doctor Clam came in and felt Leander's forehead hot,
Said he, "The scarlet fever is what this child has got.
A big dose of cod-liver oil is my invariable rule,
Then call a young Sponge in to bathe his forehead till it's cool.

"If he is hungry he may have a jelly-fish or two,
And later on, if he desires, a dish of oyster stew;
But he must have no other food at all till he is well,
Because you know that most sea food is indigestible."

As soon as Doctor Clam had gone, Leander Lobster said,
"What nonsense that old doctor talks! I will not stay in bed!
And, furthermore, I mean to have as much food as I wish;
I wont go hungry just because I'm scarlet feverish."

In spite of all his mother's tears, he got into his clothes
(A lobster's dress is mayonnaise, as everybody knows),
And started out along the beach. "I think I'll stroll," said he,
"Perhaps I'll meet somebody who will ask me in to tea."

And sure enough he met a Whale, who smiled an oily smile,
And said, "Leander Lobster, wont you step inside awhile?
I'm very fond of Lobsters when I find them nicely dressed;
I'm just about to have my tea—pray wont you be my guest?"

He opened wide his wicked jaws—Leander disappeared;
Just where he went nobody knows—the very worst is feared!
I rather think the truth is this (I'll tell it though it hurts),

"THE $20,000,000 MYSTERY"

Formerly Called ZUDORA

Remarkable Mystery Photo Play Being Shown Serially at Proctor's Theatre Each Wednesday.

Fourteenth Episode Shown at Proctor's Theatre March 10, 1915.

"THE MISSING MILLION."

The death of Henry Howard, the African mine superintendent, due to his ill-treatment at the hands of Dr. Munn and his hirelings, when he was just on the eve of a confession, which would have exposed the machinations of Madame Duval and her band, was a serious setback to the plans of Zudora's supporters. For some weeks everything is quiet. Then, through a clever ruse Madame Duval directs the attention of Tom Hunt, the detective, to the Zudora mine properties in the West. Taking Jim Baird with him Hunt hastens to investigate the clue, while John Storm, Zudora's sweetheart and her attorney, writes a letter to a certain Marcus Villiers, a wealthy mine owner, asking for information about Zudora's father's will and also whether Mr. Villiers has any papers belonging to him.

Meanwhile Madame Duval, who is untiring in her efforts to prevent the vast Zudora properties from leaving her possession, determines on a daring plan. It is nothing less than to masquerade as Zudora. Learning from her agents that Marcus Villiers is expected in New York, with papers relating to the ownership of the Zudora mine, at Captain Radcliffe's suggestion she invites him to be her guest at a big dinner party.

Posing as Zudora she hopes to gain information from him, that will enable her to get absolute control of the coveted mines.

While they are waiting for the Western capitalist's arrival another member of the band reaches New York. It is Bruce, who has made a hurried trip to South Africa to get possession of certain gems, which he had left behind on his previous visit. Madame Duval is anxiously awaiting him and more particularly the treasure that he brings. Bruce saunters nonchalantly down the gang plank smoking a huge calabash pipe, although he knows that he is an object of suspicion by the customs officials. In his debonair fashion, he gaily invites them to inspect his baggage thoroughly, which they pass after a painstaking search. It never occurs to them, that under the tobacco Bruce is smoking with such evident relish, diamonds of immense value are concealed.

In the meantime Captain Radcliffe, disguised, has gone West. It is he, who has instigated the plot against Hunt and Baird, and he goes to see that his plans are brought to a successful issue. Thus it happens, when the two champions of Zudora's cause arrive, the trap for their reception is ready and set. The chauffeur of the superintendent of the Zudora mine is in the pay of the conspirators, and when the two get into his car, they do not realize that they are being led into as desperate an adventure as any they have ever experienced.

Following his instructions, the chaffeur drives them to a deserted mine, where a number of the band, who have accompanied Captain Radcliffe, set upon them. There is a terrific struggle, but the superior fistic talent of Baird and Hunt enables them to escape, although badly mauled, and return to the railroad station. There, after a consultation, they decide that their trip West has been in vain and they hurriedly return to New York, where they realize there is urgent need for their presence.

Arriving there, Hunt learns from one of his men, that Bruce has reached the metropolis and also that the capitalist, Villiers, has arrived. They do not know, however, that the latter has received a dinner invitation from Madame Duval, signed "Zudora", and that he has accepted it. Bruce's trail leads them to the old garage, used by the conspirators as a secret entrance to Madame Duval's Mansion, and here they take up their posts to await developments.

It happens that their arrival is most opportune. Zudora has received a note to which Madame Duval has forged Villier's name, asserting that he is a prisoner at 122 Riggs street, the address of the garage, but is still in possession of the precious papers. As a matter of fact Villiers is just then enjoying the hospitality of Madame Duval, posing as Zudora. Zudora and Storm set out for the garage.

Tom Hunt and Baird observe two burly ruffians lurking in the shadows of the garage. They are preparing to attack them, when, of a sudden, the men disappear within. Their disappearance is followed an instant later by a women's screams. Running to the door, Baird and Hunt find that the precious pair have attacked Storm and Zudora. Their advent compels the conspirators to turn and battle for their own lives, while Storm carries Zudora out to safety.

Why Kelly-Springfield Tires cost more to buy but less to own

The stamp of quality is as obvious on Kelly-Springfield Tires as it is on any other hand-made article of genuine worth. It is as inimitable, as unmistakable as the impress of good breeding on a man or woman. But

Kelly-Springfield

Tires are not made so carefully merely to give them an air of distinction; it is mileage that is built into them so slowly and painstakingly by hand. And judged by the acid test of road mileage, Kelly-Springfield Tires are as good as they look. They are built up to a standard—not down to a price-list.

Made to Make Good

Hereafter the basis of adjustment will be:

In Ford sizes, plain tread, 6,000 miles; Kant Slip 7,500 miles. All other sizes, plain tread, 5,000 miles; Kant Slip tread 6,000 miles. The word "adjust" is merely figurative, because in 1914 the total adjustment in Kelly-Springfield Tires for the whole United States was less than 1%. You get this unequalled service in uninterrupted mileage — not adjustment.

Before buying some other tire at a lower price analyze the basis of adjustment offered by the other maker—see what you really do get for less money.

A Plainfield vs. A New York Account

The advantages to residents of Plainfield and vicinity of maintaining a bank account in The State Trust Company are so numerous that no argument should be necessary to convince those who are now keeping their accounts in New York. Liberal interest rates (3% and 4%), the free collection of out of town checks and New York checking privileges are but a few of the many advantages that such an account affords. On the other hand a New York account means inconvenience in making deposits, charges on out of town checks and in many instances no interest on balances.

We offer our splendid facilities to any one who is willing to overcome habit and profit thereby.

NEW DRUG LAWS NOT TOO DRASTIC

So Say Local Druggists Who Endorse Legislation Recently Enacted.

MORE WORK ENTAILED

Pharmacists Will Have to Bear Increased Taxes and Will Have to Maintain a Careful Supervision Over All Outgoing Drugs.

Local pharmacists, as a rule, are in accord with the terms of the new law regulating the sale of habit-forming drugs although it not only adds to their taxes but to their work as well. It seems to be the consensus of opinion among local drug dealers that the recently enacted legislation is a good thing and therefore the law should be lived up to at all times. The opinion seems to be prevalent that the legislature has passed a regulation that will prove an effective curb against illicit traffic in such drugs. For a municipality of Plainfield's size and considering the number of druggists doing business here the prosecutions brought by the State against local dealers for violations of the drug laws have been comparatively few. There have been several charges lodged against local pharmacists in the past and several have been substantiated.

In accordance with the new law druggists must keep strict account of all the habit-forming drugs he buys and sells. He must pay a dollar for registering with the internal revenue department and another dollar for blanks he must use in purchasing the drugs. This applies also to physicians and dentists. A number of local professional men who have occasion to use or dispose of these drugs, in an interview with a Plainfield Daily Press reporter yesterday stated that they heartily endorsed the law despite the fact that it put them to an extra amount of trouble and expense. It is necessary for Plainfield dealers to go to Newark to obtain the proper credentials and the law invokes a heavy penalty on those who neglect to follow instructions.

The drugs under ban include morphine, cocaine, herein, etc. If a doctor writes a prescription which includes one of these the prescription cannot be renewed. After it is filled it becomes void and if more drugs of the same kind are wanted a new prescription must be produced by the applicant.

In the restricted list codeine also is included. This is an opium derivative that has a powerful grip, and one which fastens its claws upon its victims almost as terribly as does heroin, the most dangerous of drugs, one that leaves an effect so depressing that to obtain more of it the user will take desperate chances.

After the Plainfield druggist has registered at Newark he gets his blanks from the internal revenue collector, one of which is used in ordering drugs, while a duplicate is kept on file. After a prescription is filled it is placed on the druggist's personal file and a duplicate is filed for the inspection of the internal revenue official when he comes around. His visits to this city are not frequent and as a rule he comes unheralded, taking the druggists unawares. Every prescription must contain the doctor's name and address as well as those of the patient.

The new law gives the government full supervision over drugs from the factory to the consumer, and will compel the fiend to get new ways of obtaining the drug that will in time ruin him.

ROBERT F. MANNING DIES IN BROOKLYN

Former Plainfielder and Well Known Lawyer Succumbs to Brief Illness.

Robert F. Manning, thirty-three years old, son of Justice David F. Manning, of the Supreme Court of New York, died yesterday at his home, No. 91 Remsen street, Brooklyn, after a short illness. Mr. Manning, who was born in this city, was admitted to the Bar in 1906 and took over his father's practice when the latter was elected to the bench, when he formed a partnership with George C. Buechner under the firm name of Manning & Buechner.

Mr. Manning was graduated from Harvard University in 1904, and from New York Law School in 1906. He took great interest in athletics and was formerly president of the interscholastic League and manager of both the freshmen and varsity crews of Harvard. He was a member of the Hasty Pudding and Diagamma clubs at the university. He also was a member of the Union and Harvard clubs, of New York city; the Brooklyn Club, the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, the New York County Lawyers' Association and the Brooklyn Bar Association. He was unmarried.

Mr. Manning was a nephew of Mrs. R. Henry Depew, of Hillside avenue, and John H. Manning, of East Sixth street, this city. The funeral will be held at his late home tomorrow morning and burial will be in Hillside Cemetery, this city.

WILL HOLD MASS MEETING FOR WOMEN

Miss Emily March to Speak at Gathering in First Baptist Church Tomorrow Night.

Under the auspices of Mrs. Louis Matlack's Bible class of young women a mass meeting for women only will be held at the First Baptist church tomorrow evening at 7.45 o'clock. It was expected that "Ma" Sunday, wife of "Billy" Sunday, the evangelist, would address this meeting, but she has been called west on account of the illness of Mr. Sunday's mother.

While this is a disappointment to many, those in charge of the service are much pleased that they have been able to secure Miss Emily March as the speaker of the evening. Another feature will be contralto solo numbers by Miss Ethel Kinnaman, of the First M. E. church quartet, selections by Howard Henderson, cornetist, and singing by a choir of young women, under the direction of Clifford Braider.

For several weeks special Sunday afternoon meetings for women have been held at the First Baptist church and a deep spiritual interest has been aroused among the women who have attended these services, and those who have arranged them feel assured that the massmeeting tomorrow night will result in much good in promoting Christian fellowship throughout the community. It is earnestly hoped that as many women as possible attend tomorrow night's service.

Mr. Mason will be accompanied by his wife and they have planned to remain at the seashore over Sunday.

MRS. SARAH TODD DIES AT THE HOME OF HER SON

Mrs. Sarah Todd, widow of Hugh Todd, died this morning at the home of her son, Frederick P. Todd, of West Front street. She had been ailing for a long time. Mrs. Todd was a native of this vicinity, having been born near Mt. Bethel, 84 years ago, and lived near here all her life, most of the time divided between Plainfield and Westfield. Beside Frederick P. Todd, there are two other sons, Hugh A. Todd, of Newark, and Stewart B. Todd, of Trenton. She was a member of the old Methodist church at Westfield, and previous to her illness attended the First M. E. church in this city.

FOUND HOME FILLED WITH VISITORS ON THEIR RETURN

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holstein, of Summit avenue, the borough, were given a surprise party at their home last night in honor of Mr. Holstein's fifty-second birthday anniversary. The affair was a complete surprise and was arranged by members of Iona Council and Miantonomo Tribe, both Mr. and Mrs. Holstein being active in these organizations. There were about thirty present.

Mr. and Mrs. Holstein celebrated the event by enjoying the show at Proctor's last night and when they returned home shortly after 10 o'clock they found their house occupied by friends. A musical program was enjoyed and refreshments were served. Those who arranged the party are Mrs. Marie Clawson, Mrs. Sadie Bowman and Miss Ella Sebring.

FREEDOM CASTLE CONFERS SECOND DEGREE ON TWO

At the weekly session of Freedom Castle, No. 42, K. G. E., held in the lodge rooms last night, second degrees were conferred on two candidates. Past Chief J. O. Randall, who is to leave this city in the near future was presented with a solid gold watch as a token of appreciation from the order for his services as a member of the degree team of Freedom Castle. The presentation speech was made by Past Chief William Day and Mr. Randall made a fitting response.

There was a visitation from Adjutant General Williams, of Philadelphia, who talked on the organization of a military commandery in Freedom Castle. Twenty-eight names were received last night for charter membership in this movement. A meeting will be held next Friday night of a committee to arrange for the instituting of the commandery. TO AID FAMINE STRICKEN PEOPLE

Whirlwind Campaign Planned to Raise Funds for the Albanians.

TO SEND RELIEF SHIP

300,000 Persons in Albania Are Homeless and Starving and 30,000 Have Already Died of Hunger and Cold.

Plainfield, for the next two weeks, it was announced yesterday, is to be the storm centre of a whirlwind campaign for contributions to the Albanian Relief Fund, which in connection with the "Christian Work and Evangelist," the well-known religious publication, will send a relief ship to seaports in Albania the latter part of this month.

The appeal to be sent out by the executive committee of the fund, is based on a report of the fund's secretary, William Willard Howard, and a recent message from the American ambassador to Turkey, Henry Morgenthau, to the State Department at Washington, in which he says:

"300,000 persons in Albania are homeless and starving; 30,000 already have died of hunger and cold, and that many more thousand will die unless helped."

The report of the fund's secretary, made as a result of personal investigation of conditions in Albania, shows that of the 300,000 victims of famine, 200,000 are women and children.

Since last April, the report points out, 200 villages in Southern Albania have been destroyed by Greek soldiers. In the six months prior to that 100 villages in Central Albania were destroyed by the Servians, while in Northern Albania, 300,000 were made homeless by the Montenegrin and Servian troops. Since Mr. Howard's return to America, he has received advice that conditions have steadily grown worse. Women and little children are living in holes in the ground and dying by the thousand. In a letter recently received from Albania, the writer says:

"Here we are in the dead of winter; the snow lies deep on the ground, yet many of the refugees go barefoot through the snow. Women and children are dying at the rate of a hundred a day. There is no way of getting food from the outside world, as exports are forbidden from Italy and surrounding countries.

"Greek soldiers still continue their atrocities. Not long ago the Christian residents of the little village of Panarity, in the district of Bakefet, heard cries in the night. The next morning it was discovered that the entire Mohammedan population, 300 men, women and children, had been slaughtered by soldiers from the Greek garrison. These acts were done without provocation. Word has come also that Servian troops have lately destroyed nine villages.

"Many thousands of refugees, who went down to Valona, hoping to get relief from the Italian soldiers, are now camped in the vicinity in a state of extreme starvation."

Those in charge of the campaign here emphasize the following fact: The only hope of Albania's hunger zone is the "Christian Work Relief Ship," which will carry a cargo of flour and seed corn, to be used for the spring sowing. These supplies will be in charge of the fund's agents. It is estimated that the cost of sending the ship will be $100,000. A considerable part of this has already been contributed.

It is understood that the ministers and missionary societies in Plainfield will endorse the campaign. Several of the ministers of the prominent churches here have signified their interest. Among these are Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Rev. John Y. Broek, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring and Rev. John Baltzly.

The executive committee of the Albania Relief Fund comprises a number of prominent men in New York and Chicago. Among them are Charles R. Crane, the Chicago millionaire; Prof. Samuel Train Dutton, of Columbia University; Norman Hapgood, of Harper's Weekly; Hamilton Holt, editor of the Independent; Rev. John Wesley Hill and Dr. Frederick Lynch, the treasurer of the fund.

LECTURED AT P. H. S.

Miss Addie Parker Jackson, supervisor of physical education in the local public schools, gave a talk on the calibre of work being conducted under her auspices in the Plainfield High School auditorium yesterday afternoon. INNOVATION TO BE TRIED BY LOCAL LIBRARY BOARD

With a view to making more wide spread the advantages the local Public Library has to offer for the lovers of good literature, the Board has decided to establish a parcel post service as an experiment. Those interested will be supplied with a subscriber's receipt card which is not unlike the commuter's ticket inasmuch as it is made up of spaces on which are printed parcel post rates. As the charges are made against the subscriber, who purchases one of these tickets, a space is punched out.

All books will be mailed to the subscriber and may be retained by him for a period of four weeks, except those books marked "seven days."

SEVEN MORE CONTRIBUTORS FOR THE BELGIAN BABIES

The Daily Press acknowledges the receipt of three contributions for the fund to buy milk for the Belgian babies, $1 from Mrs. L. L. Manning, $1 from a friend and twenty-five cents from a friend. Those desiring to contribute to this cause are urged to send funds in any amount, as it is one of the most worthy appeals ever made in this country. $1 keeps two Belgian babies alive for a month and goes half way toward caring for a third. Money sent to the Press office will be promptly forwarded to the local relief commission, who are striving to get $310 together to buy 4,800 cans of condensed milk to make another shipment. Any amount from a nickel up will be gladly accepted.

Other contributions received today were $2 from Mrs. G. S. R., 25 cents from Miss V. M., $5 from a friend and $1 from F.

The girls will also get a ten dollar prize and the contest will be judged on the following points: Memory, ease, articulation, interpretation.

FOUR-LEGGED BURGLARS CAUSED WEST END SCARE

"Help! Burglars! Police!" These were the cries of distress that awakened the sleeping populace in the vicinity of 817 West Sixth street to sudden activity at 3:30 this morning. Heads began making their appearance through open windows in the chilly early morning atmosphere and in a few moments a squad of wide-awake bluecoats surrounded the home of Frank M. Girard.

Inquiries to ascertain the cause of Mr. Girard's frenzied calls for assistance led to the announcement that burglars were turning things topsy-turvey in the first floor of the house. An investigation followed but the blucoats found everything all right despite the fact that the householder claimed to have heard crashing glass and a general disturbance which had awakened him from a sound slumber.

Carrying their investigation to the backyard the minions of the law found the lid of a tin garbage can several feet from that receptacle and it is the supposition of the police that dogs and cats looking for a "square meal" had dislodged the covering and created the disturbance.

Peace and calm was soon restored and the residents of that section "turned in" to finish their interrupted slumbers mumbling something about "nightmares" and "krazy kats."

COMMITTEE WILL MEET.

Reports of the work being conducted by the Committe on the Unemployed will be made at a meeting to be held in the Mayor's office tonight at 8 o'clock.

DEATH OF MISS ELIZA E. KENYON

Was Principal of the Seminary and Founder of Monday Afternoon Club.

Miss Eliza Elvira Kenyon, for forty years principal of the Plainfield Seminary, died yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, after an illness of several months. Miss Kenyon was born in 1835, and came to Plainfield in the autumn of 1866. She resigned the principalship of the seminary in 1906, and since that year had been principal emeritus. She founded the Monday Afternoon Club, which began as a mothers' meeting, held at the seminary, and was twice president of it, from 1888-1890, and again from 1892-1894.

She was also the first president of the Woman's Auxiliary of Muhlenberg Hospital. The first entertainment to raise money for the hospital was given under her leadership in the seminary grounds.

During the half century in which she had lived in Plainfield, Miss Kenyon was a natural centre in the life of the town. Her intellectual gifts and cultivation and the vigor, sweetness and dignity of her character impressed themselves permanently not only on her pupils, many hundreds in number, widely scattered, and of all ages, but also upon the whole fabric of this community. She stood for everything that is sound and good in education, and she will be remembered with admiration and love. In accordance with Miss Kenyon's wish, the funeral will be private.

GIVES INTERESTING ADDRESS ON "CHINA"

Mrs. F. G. Mead Speaks at Annual Meeting of Crescent Avenue Society.

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was held in the church parlors yesterday afternoon during which reports were read and officers elected for the coming year. Mrs. E. G. Read presided at the meeting. Mrs. White, the treasurer, reported receipts of $1,406 for the year. The reports of the secretary and the secretary of literature showed encouraging results for the past twelve months. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. E. G. Read, vice-presidents, Mrs. J. S. Zelie, Mrs. E. W. Cochran and Mrs. S. T. Carter, Jr., treasurer, Miss Laura Lovell, secretary, Mrs. W. H. Murray; secretary of literature, Mrs. I. N. Van Sycle.

Following the business session an interesting talk on "China" was given by Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead, who recently returned after a long stay in the Orient, primarily on a visit to her son, Lawrence, a worker in the Chinese Y. M. C. A. Mrs. Mead spoke of Yokahama, Tokio and other Japanese cities, which she visited but dwelt chiefly on Shanghai, China. This city is much more European in its ways than many of the other big communities, having automobiles, palatial steamers on the river and American shopping customs. So many of its inhabitants live on the river boats that it is impossible to take a census in Shanghai, yet drunkenness is practically unknown. The American mission boards have purchased an estate in the mountains adjacent to Shanghai where they have established the mission of Kuling. It is at this place that many Plainfielders are located and Mrs. Mead's son is there now, being taught.

Speaking of the Chinese language, Mrs. Mead said that it has four tones and that the raising or lowering of a voice indicates a different object; for instance, to speak a certain word in one tone, it means "soup," to speak the same word in a lower tone means "sugar."

GERMAN CRUISER ARRIVES IN U. S.

Prince Eitel Frederick Turns up Unexpectedly at Newport News.

SUBMARINE IS SUNK

U-20 Added to List of Victims of English Fleet—Crew Taken Off Before Sinking of Boat—Continue Attack on Dardanelles.

Newport News, Va., March 10—The Prinz Eitel Fredrich, converted auxiliary German cruiser, reached this port today. It is said that she has 326 French and Russian prisoners aboard. It seems likely that the cruiser will interne here, as it is understood that she is badly in need of repairs. Her supplies and coal are said to be practically exhausted.

London, March 10—Another German submarine was aded to the list of those known to have been destroyed by the announcement by the Admiralty office today, that the U-20 was rammed by the destroyer Ariel. The submarine sank after the members of the crew had surrendered.

A news agency despatch from Petrograd states that the Czar left last night for Helsingfors, the seaport capital of Finland.

Six British warships, headed by the super-dreadnought Queen Elizabeth, are concentrating their fire upon the batteries of Fort Namazieh, overlooking the Dardanelles narrows, according to Athens despatches today. A determined effort is being made to silence the guns of Namazieh, which have so far swept the strait for several miles and blocked the advance of mine sweepers.

The newest monster of the seas, the super-dreadnought Warspite, is believed to have joined the allied fleet. Admiralty officers have virtually admitted that another big battleship of the Queen Elizabeth type is in action. The Warspite was laid down five days after the Queen Elizabeth, and was launched November 26, 1913.

Nearly thirty French and English warships, the Admiralty admitted today, are now shelling the Ottoman defences. In addition to these a dozen other powerful fighting craft are unofficially reported to be in action. The aggregate tonnage of the Anglo-French naval forces at the Dardanelles is nearly six times that of the entire Spanish Armada of ancient days.

The Russian Black Sea fleet will render assistance to the allied forces when the final grapple comes for Constantinople. The great advantage to the Allies of the proximity of the Czar's ships lies in the fact that the Turks will now have to withdraw troops from the Dardanelles to avert a flank movement on the part of the Russians.

The Admiralty's announcement of the sinking of the steamships Tangistan, Blackwood and Princess Victoria by German scubmarines raiding at widely separated points came just as the British public was coming to the conclusion that the German undersea operations had been blocked by the careful surveilance of British seamen.

The Tangistan was sunk off Scorborough on the east coast of England at 12:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Only one of her crew of thirty-eight was saved. He was picked up by the steamer Woodville and landed at West Hartlepool. The Tangistan was of 2,393 tons displacement and built in 1906.

The Blackwood was sunk off Hastings on the English Channel at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. Her crew of seventeen was saved and taken to Hastings. This was a 741-ton vessel, built in 1907.

The Princess Victoria of Glasgow, 444 tons displacement, was sent to the bottom at 9:15 o'clock in the Irish Sea off Liverpool. The crew of thirty-four was picked up.

These vessels were sunk without warning. Since January 21 eighteen British ships have been sunk by submarines.

Amsterdam, March 10—The Russians have partly evacuated Persia and are now holding but a few points of stragetic value, according to a despatch from Constantinople to the Vossische Zeitung. A despatch yesterday from Constantinople told of a Russian victory over the Turks in the vicinity of Khoi, in northwestern Persia.

A despatch to the samepaper from Athens states that the notorious Epirete chief, Kussler, who has been at the head of a band of outlaws operating in northwestern Greece and in Albania has been arrested.

Paris, March 10—The French war office gave out the following statement today:

A SONG AIMED TO CHECK WARFARE

Expressions of a Mother on Modern Conflicts.

A New York man has put out a song which is the mirror of a mother's heart. Eliminating the commercial element, he has issued it to render a national service, and, if possible, to end the horrors of war. Here is a part of the chorus:

I Didn't Raise My Boy To Be A Soldier

CHORUS. BRYAN & PIANTADOSI

Copyright, 1915, Leo Feist.

An American mother is speaking. With loyal instinct she breathes a sigh in the lines, "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier" because she knows well that a soldier's lot is to kill—or die. The beauty of the thought is so apparent and the music so skilfully woven that the song is achieving a popularity second to no other musical work written within a century.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The attraction at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow afternoon and night will be the five-reel picture production of George M. Cohan's melodramatic farce, "Officer 666." When this play was first presented on the legitimate stage it ran for an entire season in New York and is still being acted by road companys throughout the country. The name of George M. Cohan is synonymous with fun and action and in "Officer 666" the versatile actor-author-manager is seen at his best. The management of the Plainfield Theatre is fortunate in securing another big picture production in Hal Caine's "The Christian," which is scheduled to be shown on Friday and Saturday of this week. The story of "The Christian" is familiar to playgoers the world over and in being transferred to the screen is even more elaborate than when first shown as a play. The camera permits of more scope than the narrow confines of the ordinary stage and "The Christian" is presented with all the detail necessary to carry the points promulgated by Mr. Caine. The mob scene is especially vivid, thrilling the audience with its terrible intensity. "The Christian" is one of the Paramount pictures, which service the Plainfield Theatre has exclusively on all new productions. Every Tuesday the Plainfield Theatre presents the serial "The Master Key," and every Friday "The Trey O' Hearts." Popular prices prevail during all photo-play presentations.

OVERSEER TALKS ON COUNTY IDEA

Garret T. Dunham Favors Combine if Saving Could Be Effected.

PRESENT SYSTEM GOOD

Plainfield Indigent Are Receiving Proper Attention at a Minimum Expenditure—Chairman Cose Also Expresses Views.

That the county almshouse theory of caring for the indigent will become a reality in the near future is thought to be inevitable, but on the other hand there as a number of so-called "inside" workers who maintain that a change in policy would not be expedient at the present time. The State Charities' Aid and Prison Reform Association at the meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders, last week, presented a resolution advocating the abolition of all municipal almshouses and the establishment of a county institution to replace them, and this move has evoked no little amount of comment from all sources.

In an interview with a Plainfield Daily Press reporter, this morning, Overseer-of-the-Poor Garret T. Dunham declared that while a county institution would minimize the expense per individual it would probably eliminate the close relationship and supervision the city maintains over its charges at the present time. It was suggested to the overseer that a plan to establish a tri-county almshouse for Somerset, Middlesex and Union might be feasible, but he was opposed to the proposition on the grounds that the municipality would lose all trace of the inmates for which it was responsible after committal.

Statistics furnished the Daily Press by Mr. Dunham show that there are at the present time thirteen inmates at the local almshouse on Rock avenue, whereas the cost of maintenance would not be proportionately increased if that number were doubled. The overseer makes but two trips a week to the institution at which intervals he takes an inventory of the food supply and other details, the remainder of the supervision being in charge of a matron and caretaker. Excellent order is maintained at the home and the inmates are in reality boarders who earn their keep by assisting in tilling the soil on the farm that surrounds the place and by doing various other chores.

According to Mr. Dunham, Elizabeth at the present time has about seventy-five individuals unable to care for themselves, about four times as many as Plainfield. Westfield, as far as is known, has none. In view of this variation of conditions the local overseer maintains that it would not be to the advantage of the county to establish a common almshouse and make each one of the towns share the expense on a percentage basis. The local overseer is a staunch advocate of municipal supervision over municipal inmates and he is not in favor of any measure that will serve to disrupt this feature without furnishing in return a decided saving.

Councilman John H. Cose, chairman of the councilmanic alms committee, has taken an active interest in the preliminary discussion with a view to being well informed on the proposition when it comes up. At the present time he will not commit himself one way or the other. There are two other almshouses in the county besides the local one, one at Rahway and the other at Elizabeth, but Mr. Cose as yet has not been in communication with either of the managements.

As far as the abolition of the local institution is concerned, Mr. Cose says he believes this city, Elizabeth and Rahway would be benefitted, but he does not hold the same opinion of other municipalities which are not maintaining almshouses at the present time.

Mr. Cose said there are several examples of the maintenance of individuals as boarders in private families, where actual saving is showed over the keeping of the same people at the almshouses. These persons are aged and in some cases eccentric and irritable. The management at the almshouses was unable to control these people, but the individuals with whom they board experience little difficulty in keeping them at a nominal consideration paid by the city.

NEW 'PHONE BOOK USHERS IN SPRING

158,000 Copies of the Mammoth Edition Are Being Distributed Today

The first sure harbinger of spring is appearing simultaneously today in all the cities and towns of New Jersey with the distribution of the new edition of the New Jersey Division Telephone Directory. A small army of men with wagons and automobiles are employed in delivering the big book, and the distribution of the mammoth edition of 158,000 copies will be completed within a few days.

In a new jacket of light blue, slightly thicker than the thumb-worn edition it displaces, the new telephone book will for three months be the most used volume in the State. The book has 450 pages, containing approximately 122,000 listings.

A copy of the new directory will be placed beside every telephone in the division. The men who deliver the new books will also collect the old ones. Care is taken to collect and destroy all obsolete directories, so that the service will not be impaired through the use of incorrect telephone directory information.

The New Jersey Division Telephone Directory has come to be more than a mere list of telephone subscribers. Besides its constant use in telephone calls, the book is referred to for addresses, initials, and the spelling of names. It is coming to be the community's guide book.

Bent, whose delightful lecture on Mexico has been enjoyed by the audience since Monday. Mr. Bent is an experienced traveler and speaker and has secured hundreds of photographs on his many trips. Commencing tomorrow he will lecture on "Alaska," the great territory to the north of which Eastern people know so little about. The new vaudeville acts on tomorrow's program will be as follows: The Usher Trio, comedy variety skit; "Almost a Millionaire," a mixture of singing, dancing and genuine humor; Charles B. Ward & Co., high-class singing, both solo and duet numbers; Dotty King, character dancing with typical and handsome costumes; Swan & Swan, versatile jugglers who perform many difficult feats while executing modern dance steps and toe dancing; Leo Beers, society entertainer, presenting a pianologue preceded and followed by tuneful whistling. A new series of war pictures will be shown tomorrow in addition to the succeeding episode of "Runaway June." The continuation of "The Exploits of Elaine" is scheduled for Friday, and another of those popular feature photo-plays in five parts, "A Daughter of the People," will be shown next Monday and Tuesday.

MODERN POLICE SIGNALLING METHODS IN NEW YORK

The following article from the Telephone Review is of particular interest to Plainfielders, as it has been suggested that the local police department adopt a more modern method of signalling to patrolmen on their beats.

THE NEW BOX READY FOR AN INSPECTION.

Both the flash light unit and the telephone unit can be easily removed from their respective compartments for inspection and repairs.

A new system for establishing communication between precinct headquarters and a patrolman at any point on his beat, at any time, has recently been adopted in certain sections of Manhattan and will probably be greatly extended in the near future. The equipment and operation of this system are described in the current issue of The New York Telephone Review in an interesting article on this important phase of increasing the efficacy of police protection in our cities.

The present police patrol system, using a telephone equipment of 48 monitor switchboards and 836 police box stations, was put into service in 1902 and has increased in various ways until it has become in reality a collection of systems each independent of the other. The switchboards are located in the precinct station houses and telephone lines extend from them to the police boxes located at convenient points throughout the several precincts.

The necessity of establishing a means of communication between the patrolman and the precinct headquarters has been the actuating force in the development of this old system; but signaling to the patrolmen by bells has proved uncertain, since the patrolman must often be out of hearing; nor is there any provision in this old system for the calling of a patrolman by a citizen without his first getting into touch with the precinct headquarters. The Police Department has therefore conferred with the Telephone Company on the question of using a flashlight system in connection with the telephone to summon the officer to the police boxes. Early experiments, although not offering a real solution of the problem, showed the idea was practicable and capable of vastly improving the service.

To reach the heart of the problem a special box and lantern had to be designed. The Equipment Engineer's force of the New York Telephone Company developed the box and the telephone equipment; the Western Electric Company evolved the lantern, and the New York Edison Company, on whose poles the installations have been made, designed the architectural features of the equipment. Through the co-operation of the companies concerned, a design was completed which was satisfactory to the companies and to the Police Department, and after being approved by the Municipal Art Commission, it was ready for use.

By means of the apparatus thus designed it is comparatively easy for the Precinct Commander to call the patrolman in any zone equipped with the system. The lantern signals flash a green light which is so strong as to be clearly visible at a distance of from 1,500 to 2,000 feet even in bright sunlight. The lamp is lighted for periods of four seconds at intervals of three seconds, until the call is answered. The officer need not remain at any fixed position, for the signals can be seen from all directions.

A novel feature of the new box, and one which shows a marked improvement over the old is the citizen's call button. This is prominently located on the outer door of the box and is so wired that anyone can operate it and light the signal lamp to summon a patrolman. The operation of this button does not give a signal of any kind at the station house. It merely closes the local electric light circuit through the signal lamp.

Note the Citizen's Call Button and the instructions for operating it. The instruction and number plates are enameled.

Each of the new boxes contains, in addition to a standard police telephone unit, special signal apparatus which is connected to the telephone line so as not to interfere with the use of the line for telephone purposes after the patrolman has answered the flashlight signal. When the receiver is removed from the hook in the police box, the signaling current is automatically disconnected from the telephone line, and the line restored to its normal condition for telephoning. The ordinary telephone line signal instantly appears in front of the Sergeant operating the switchboard in the station house, thus indicating that the patrolman has answered the call.

Although this new equipment has been installed but a short time, the experimental system has been in actual service since August and that a satisfactory answer has been found to the problem of police signaling may safely be assumed from the fact that the city is already installing an extension of the system.

CARRANZA YIELDS TO DEMAND OF U. S.

Appeals Made to Washington Red Cross for Food for Mexico City.

Washington, March 10—Gen. Carranza is reported to have agreed to meet the demands of the United States. His formal reply to the latest note from the Government is on its way to Washington. A preliminary message from Consul Silliman says that it is favorable.

An appeal for food supplies for the suffering people of Mexico City was received at the Red Cross Headquarters here today. Plans immediately were made to get supplies through to the famine threatened city, but difficulties at once presented themselves. General Obregon is said to have taken possession of all the rolling stock on the railroads preparatory to evacuating the capital, and therefore railroad communication is entirely cut off.

A better feeling toward foreigners is apparent in Mexico City the State Department learned to day. It is understood the report of the receipt of the American note by General Carranza is largely responsible for the change.

KNOCKING OUT EXTRA MAN LAW

Fifteen States Have Dealt Body Blows to Trainmen's Job Measure.

Trenton, N. J., March 10.

With the Full Crew—"excess man crew"—Law matter about to come to a head here, there is much interest in how it has been treated in other states. The belief grows that what has happened elsewhere will happen here. In Washington legislative committees have agreed upon a bill to repeal the Full Crew Law and leave the question to the commission. The senate has passed this bill. In Missouri by a two to one vote of the people, a full crew law was repealed last fall. In North Carolina a bill was defeated March 2d. In Kansas, farmers and business men killed one February 13th in the senate committee. The West Virginia legislature adjourned February 26th, having side-stepped a bill. In Alabama the legislative committee adversely reported a bill. Texas farmers are again in strong opposition to another effort to pass a full crew law there. Full Crew Law bills failed in Massachusetts, Colorado, Delaware, Oklahoma, Ohio and Connecticut. New York is about to repeal the law as passed by the discredited Sulzer administration.

Hearing is expected to be held by a legislative committee during next week, at which time both the railroads and the trainmen will urge their sides of the matter. There will also appear as witnesses in favor of repeal of the full crew law business men from various parts of New Jersey.

COURTESY IN BUSINESS LETTERS

The New York Telephone Review takes a decided stand against the neglect of courtesy, in the writing of business letters, in a discussion entitled "Notes on Business Correspondence" in the current issue. The article says: One of the most deplorable customs prevalent in the writing of business letters to-day is the omission of all forms of expression of the type "Permit me to state," "I beg to remain," etc. A prominent mercantile house has printed at the bottom of its letter heads this sentiment: "We have never heard a good reason for the use of 'Dear Madam,' 'Dear Sir,' 'Yours very truly,' and other similar phrases in business correspondence. For the sake of accuracy, brevity and economy we have discontinued their use." If good reasons for the use of customary forms of courtesy have failed to present themselves, experience will eventually teach the much needed lesson. Courtesy is a sine qua non in business letters, as much as in the use of the telephone or any other mode of intercourse. Expressions of the type quoted are never objectionable, so long as they are not used to excess, and as a means of showing proper courtesy they are, as a rule, indispensable.

If the rush of business has caused many people to neglect the courtesies of business correspondence, it has at least not deprived them of an appreciation of these courtesies when shown to themselves. Rarely does the politely expressed letter, having the other essentials of effectiveness, fail to "win out" against its curt neighbor in the pile of morning mail.

* * * * * * *

With courtesy as a foundation, the business letter is capable of almost unlimited variation. No stereotyped rule can be laid down. For instance, a business letter to be telling should be short, as a rule, but circumstances alter cases. Each situation must be met as the multiplicity of circumstances demands and the judgment of the writer determines.

A positive element of personality is of prime importance, for a colorless letter, like a colorless character, can accomplish little. As the strength of a man's personality is felt the moment he enters an office, so should the business letter exert a similar force.

SOCIETY LEADERS IN RED CROSS

English Noblewomen Subjected to Much Criticism.

THERE has been much criticism of English society women who have gone to the war as Red Cross nurses, and some of them have been described as absolutely inefficient and as a menace to the wounded soldiers. As belonging to this class there was considerable criticism of Lady Dorothy Fielding, daughter of the Earl of Denbigh. She was described as very young and frivolous and as one who gave most of her time to carrying on flirtations with doctors and officers. But in spite of all this talk, and in all probability because she has seriously devoted herself to her duties, Lady Dorothy was recently decorated with the Order of Leopold by King Albert for efficient work performed in the Belgian Red Cross hospitals.

After the Crimean war, when Miss Florence Nightingale revolutionized the whole system of army nursing, Great Britain had no opportunity of applying her doctrines until forty years afterward in the Boer war. All military campaigns during that period had been conducted in savage countries or in the orient, where it was impossible to admit women nurses. The army medical service at the beginning of the Boer war included eight women nurses and one matron for a hospital of 500 patients, as the sum and substance of the reforms of Miss Nightingale which had been incorporated in the war department. Before the close of the war the Queen Alexandra imperial military nursing service had been organized by royal warrant.

The regulations for admittance of women into the new service for army nursing were severe in two respects—that the candidate had to have three years' preliminary training and service combined in a civil general hospital before entering for the special training of the military service and have as well the status of a good social position given by birth and breeding, with sponsors to prove that she was a desirable person to enter a service composed of ladies. When the necessity for additional women nurses arose in the present war the government threw overboard the first regulation for the service—that of three years' preliminary training—but clung with even more tenacity than before to the second regulation—good social position.

The most prominent English society women in army nursing are now Millicent, Duchess of Sutherland, Lady Sarah Wilson, the Duchess of Westminster, and Lady Dorothy Fielding, ladies who a year ago were attending court balls and occupying boxes at the opera as their main occupation in life, the value of their diamond tiaras and the pedigree of their pet dogs filling columns of space in the society papers.

The hour in which war was declared there was an enrollment of 15,000 regularly trained nurses in England, a large majority of whom could have been taken into government service. They have, however, not been able to obtain work at the front at all. Amateurs have been rushed forward, titled ladies who made donations to the hospital work or pretty ones who possessed influence with a member of the government. The most serious cases of army nursing have come under the hands of these amateurs, who have taken perhaps a course of a few weeks cramming at one of the fashionable nursing classes as their sole preparation for service.

LIGHTS ON SOMERSET STREET.

Somerset street merchants have requested the Borough Council to furnish adequate lighting facilities for Somerset street, between the bridge and Manning avenue and it is suggested that it shoud receive favorable attention. Figures presented by the petitioners show that the expense would be only $179 more annually than that borne at the present time and four and a half times as much illumination would be provided. Inasmuch as these figures have been verified and the Public Service has agreed to furnish the improvement at this outlay, the Council should grasp the opportunity.

Somerset street is North Plainfield's one business thoroughfare and the globes now in use are little better than the old gas fixtures. In one instance, at Chatham and Somerset streets, there are four lights within a radius of 150 feet and yet the light thrown out is so dim that it would be impossible to read newspaper type at a point central to the four.

The seven new lights asked for would probably mean the rental of a number of stores along this thoroughfare that are now vacant, the principal reason being that the illumination at night is so meager. It would also serve to attract much of the transient trade from the mountain districts to the borough, for now the country shoppers do not stop at the borough's business center but "hit for the white lights" of Front street.

Now that the Plainfield High School swimming pool and gymnasium have been thrown open to the public and scores of people seeking recreation are being cared for by the Columbus Club, the need for a new Y. M. C. A. building in Plainfield has been somewhat lessened. Both of the aforementioned institutions provide modern facilities for body development such as have heretofore been had only in the Y. M. C. A. and for sometime before the opening of these places a new association building was a community need. Hundreds of those who heretofore clamored for benefits such as could be provided only by the Y. M. C. A., are being cared for by the Public Recreation Committee and the Columbus Club officials. The expense to the individual has also been lessened preceptibly, making the benefits universal. While the association is still caring for a large number of active participants in the many branches of Y. M. C. A. endeavor the crowded condition of the classes is not so noticeable and others have sought the High School for recreation. It is only fitting, however, that the Y. M. C. A. should get its just dues for promoting those branches of work when other places were not available. At the same time it is encouraging to note that the demands have been met by the addition to the High School and the opening of the modernly equipped club on West Front street.

An improved system of illumination in the city building on North avenue is one of the municipality's needs at the present time. The structure, in which are housed the municipal offices is one of the poorest lighted in the city and several narrow escapes from serious accidents have been recorded recently, due to the darkness that prevails on the stairways. Several new systems of providing light are being tested in the county courthouse at Elizabeth and it might be well for the city fathers to inquire into the merits of these facilities. Not very long ago President George S. Clay, of the Common Council, found it necessary to have that body meet in one of the committee rooms and the illumination was so dim that lamps had to be provided. At that time the president took the matter up with the lighting company but no remedy appears to have been advanced. Not only have the entrances and stairways been made perilous because of poor lights, but the offices are unusually dark and the city officials experience considerable difficulty in working, even when the lights are in use.

"To the north of Arras in the region of Notre Dame de Lorette, the night was calm and the situation is unchanged. The importance of our progress yesterday in Champagne is confirmed. A very violent German counter attack was launched at night on ridge No. 196. It was repulsed with vigor. We gained besides a little ground along the road from Perthes to Tahure.

"On the rest northeast of Mesnil our infantry after having captured German earthworks, as reported, in last night's communique, advanced beyond that field fort to the ridge on which is the highway extending from Perthes to Maison de Champagne.

"In the Argonne, at Fontaine Madame, we destroyed a blockhouse and advanced our trenches 24 yards."

BIG COLLEGE CONFERENCE.

Madison, Wis., Mar. 10—A conference of leaders in university extension education from all parts of the United States opened here today at the University of Wisconsin. The colleges which are using the extension method of enlarging their fields of usefulness to the general public have decided to discuss the various phases of the work. Reports of the work in the eastern, western and middle western states are being submitted, and the various degrees of success are being studied. The organization of the work is the leading subject under discussion, for the extension idea is gaining ground rapidly, and many colleges now taking up the work are anxious to gain the experience of the pioneers.

LOCAL GIRLS WILL TRY NEWARKERS FOR A CHANGE

The two games scheduled for tomorrow night at the Columbus Club will be well worth seeing. In the preliminary the "Plainfield Five" will line-up against the Public Service "maidens" from Rahway, while the Columbus Five will play its first game of the series with the St. Joseph's Club. The Plainfield lassies have not lost a game this year and they will probably give a good account of themselves in tomorrow's contest. The teams will line-up as follows:

Plainfield Five—Helen Hummel, f.; Ida Hummel, f.; Helen Brynairski, c.; Ellen Doughty, s. c.; Marion Mair, g.; Clara Smith, g.

Rahway Public Service—Anna Evans, f.; S. C. McGreedy, f.; Helen Meehan, c.; A. Irwin, s. c.; J. Dewitt, g.; A. Jackson, g.

LOCAL WOMAN TESTIFIES.

Eight affidavits were filed yesterday in Surrogate Sawyer's office in White Plains, N. Y., in refutation of the assertion of Mrs. Eugenie M. Ferrer Lord that she is the widow of Thomas A. Lord, of Yonkers, who died last June leaving a will in which he gave $500,000 to friends, because, as he stated in the will, "he had no wife or children." One of the affidavits was filed by Mrs. McNeill Hopcraft, of this city, in which the local woman says she believes the contention of Mrs. Lord is false.

GREAT OVATION FOR BOB FITZSIMMONS

"Grand Old Man of the Roped Arena" Appeared in Exhibition Last Night.

Eighteen years ago, a week from today, Bob Fitzsimmons, of Dunellen, won the heavyweight championship of the world from James J. Corbett, in Carson City. As he climbed out of the roped arena that day he was given one of the greatest ovations ever received by a fighter.

But it was a "small town" affair compared with the greeting that was handed him last night as he entered the ring to box his son, Bob, Jr., three rounds at the benefit exhibition for the poor in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory.

Five hundred persons, including several hundred women, stood up and cheered as the grand old veteran climbed in between the first and second ropes. This event was the climax of one of the greatest boxing benefits ever held.

ASSEMBLYMAN RUNYON AGAINST BOXING BILL

Local Law Maker Denounces Measure as Being a Step in Retrogression.

Assemblyman Singer's bill permitting ten-round boxing bouts in this State passed the House of Assembly at Trenton yesterday afternoon by a vote of 32 to 20. The measure provides for the appointment of an athletic commissioner, who would have jurisdiction over clubs staging bouts.

Assemblyman Jacob J. Singer, of Hudson, father of the measure, was the first speaker yesterday afternoon. He advised the passage of the bill because, he said, it meant the development of the youth of the State. There was nothing abusive in scientific boxing, he pleaded, and pointed out the development it meant to both mind and body. He said boxing bouts were carried on, anyhow, and it would be much better if they could be supervised in this State in a similar way in which they are conducted in New York with soft gloves in use. Mr. Singer said only the "thin bloods" and not the real men would vote against the bill.

Majority Leader William N. Runyon, of this city, the next speaker, said he would accept the soft impeachment and speak in behalf of the "thin bloods." He said the passage of the bill was a step in retrogression rather than one in advancement. Mr. Runyon was most bitter in his denunciation of the measure.

Two of the three games went to the credit of the local printers. The first two games were very close, being won by two-point margins.

The locals dropped the initial roll by a pair of pins, the scores being 761 to 759, and then reversed the score in the second game, winning by a tally of 759 to 748. In the final and deciding roll the Plainfield five tallied 761 while their opponents only hit for 729. The scores:

NEWARK-ELIZABETH ROLL POSTPONED FOR ONE WEEK

The roll-off match between the Newark and Elizabeth teams of the Senior Elks' League, which was to be held on the local Elks' alleys next Friday night, has been postponed one week. The Newark five could not roll this week and by consent of the Elizabeth officials and the executive committee, it was put off one week.

The same officials that were selected for this week will have charge of the match when it is rolled.

LUTHMAN TOOK FIVE.

E. Luthman won five games out of six played in the borough one-man tourney last night, retaining his hold on first place with a record of 12 victories and 2 defeats. He made a clean sweep over Miller and then took the odd roll from Connolly who previously had won two from Ferrero.

BACK SWIM RUN-OFF.

Eight members of the College League of the Y. M. C. A. boys department took part in the two lengths' swim on the back yesterday afternoon. Willett, of the Army team, won the event, his time being 20 seconds. Blanchard, of the Navy team, was second.

CANDIDATES BUSY SECURING VOTES

Contestants Climb Toward Goal Which Ballots Will Bring.

HUSTLERS WILL WIN

Revised Standing to Be Published Tomorrow—Only One Way to Visit California Free and That is by Hustling.

In tomorrow's Press will be published a revised vote standing of the candidates, and will include all votes cast up to 6 o'clock last evening.

Some candidates were surprised when the first vote standing was published to find a shortage of votes, and wasted no time in telling the contest manager about it, but when it was explained that the votes they had been counting upon had not reached the contest until after the closing time set for that count, they were satisfied in knowing that the votes would appear in the next count. Candidates should take notice of the date and hour set for the closing of the ballot box for the counting and arrange to get their votes in prior to that time, else they will not be counted until the next time.

In the list of candidates for the trans-continental tours there are a number of aspirants for the high honor who are associated in commercial circles, being identified with the business they represent.

A great many candidates are accumulating the single and subscription ballots, which means success and a splendid trip offered by the Press.

There is one thing that stands out with distinctness. Regardless of the district or territory, wherever candidates have had the judgment to realize the magnitude of the Press offer, there is any number of persons ready and willing to support them and enlist their friends in their behalf.

The only qualifications for the winning of one of these trips is ambition. If you have been dissuaded from doing so because of the ill-considered judgment of some friend or acquaintance not familiar with the plan, visit the office of the Press Tour Department and give the contest manager or assistants an opportunity to talk it over with you and to go into details fully.

Perhaps they have joked you in the family circle about your chances, although you believed that your opportunity was as good as anyone's. There is but one thing to do. Take the initiative. Demonstrate to those unbelievers that you have a chance of winning. Start out and secure the clipped coupons and perhaps a subscription ballot from your friends who did not discourage you.

Do not noise it around that you are actively interested, and surprise them all by securing several subscriptions and obtaining several thousand votes.

More candidates are entering the Press trans-continental tour and Panama-Pacific contest from each of the three districts. The idea uppermost in the minds of each, it seems, is that all they want is an equal opportunity with every other candidate and as the Press has promised that they shall have this, the contest will not only be a lively one, but the harmonious and friendly one which it must be. It will be a contest among friends, and the winners will receive the congratulations of their opponents.

All who will be in the race will have equal chances to win under the well-regulated rules governing the contest.

Those wishing to enter should thoroughly read the rules which appear in the prospectus, which we will gladly furnish you.

The Ballots.

Ballots cast for persons who have not entered in accordance with the rules governing it will not be counted. See that your candidate's name is among the list of candidates. The ballots which appear in the Press are counted as one ballot for the candidate and are known as "singles." When voted within the date limit on them they are good for one vote for the candidate whose name appears thereon. All ballots issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions will be known as "specials," and must bear the receipt number for their proper recording. Special ballots will be issued for paid-in-advance subscriptions when payment is received at the contest department of the Press.

Ballots sent by mail may be sent to the contest department of the Press. "Singles" will appear in each issue of the Press, excepting during the last two weeks of the contest, which closes on April 17.

The contest is young yet, but many thousands of votes have been cast. Opportunities are as strong now as ever before. Join now. You may be the favorite. Perhaps your friends are stronger than you imagine. Perhaps you have more friends than you ever thought. In the territory hundreds of votes are waiting for some ambitious young woman to come and take them. There is no such thing as a corner on opportunities. You are on an equal footing with everyone. Some of the most sensational spurts in the past have been made by those who started late and at the foot of the list. You might head the list. Try it. Get into the race at once; it's worth an effort.

Contest of Popularity.

It is impossible for wealth to influence votes in this contest. It is a contest of popularity. The candidates are divided so that women in their own district compete against their sister candidates in that district only for the district prize of a trip across the American continent and to the Panama-Pacific Exposition. No expense will be spared to make the trip a success, and the splendor thrown around it will confer the highest honors on those who win.

Coupons clipped from the Press should be cut on the border lines thus making them uniform in size which greatly facilitates the counting.

It is not necessary to write the name of the candidate on each coupon, provided they are tied together so that they will not become separated. If tied or banded together, it will only be necessary to place the name and district number on the top one or two. It is requested of all candidates to make a package of all votes placed in the ballot box and if this request is complied with, chances for errors in counting will be reduced to a minimum.

The territory from which the candidates may secure their votes is not bounded. The votes are waiting for the candidates to discover them—so demonstrate how keen is your sense of perception.

Vote early and often. The coupon will appear daily at the top of page 2.

Every person, no matter where situated, may vote for his or her favorite candidate, who may be entered from any district, simply by remitting a paid-in-advance subscription for not less than three months or more than two years to the Press, and the number of votes allowed the candidate will be credited to her.

Everyone Wins.

The management of the Press has decided to be most liberal to the candidates who may enter this contest. In addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all those candidates who do not win trips, and remain active until the end of the contest, a commission of ten per cent. will be paid on new subscriptions, and a five per cent. commission will be paid on old subscriptions.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday until further notice.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic, you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.—Adv.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Advice of This Plainfield Woman is of Certain Value.

Many a woman's back has many aches and pains.

Ofttimes 'tis the kidney's fault.

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

Many Plainfield women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, says: "I endured much misery from backache, caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest at all and in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and any strain on my back made the aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians, but their medicine didn't help me and it was not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's drug store, that I had any hope of getting rid of the trouble. They made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Moore had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink

TEMPTING OFFERS HAVE NO LURE FOR HANS WAGNER, GREATEST OF PLAYERS

Hans Wagner is the one great baseball star who never commercialized his greatness. None of baseball's sidelines ever appealed to him. He has ignored big sums for the use of his autograph or picture; newspaper syndicates and magazines have made him the biggest kind of inducements to "write" for them, but the famous German has flatly ignored every proposition where he may have added many more thousands per annum to the $10,000 he has been getting from Barney Dreyfuss for the past ten years.

Despite his frugal nature and simple mode of life Honus never showed any money-mad tendencies, and entered his forty-second year on February 24 about $100,000 short of what he would have stored away had he swallowed the hundreds of moneyed baits cast out to him since he established his greatness more than fifteen years ago. What he has now in cash, automobiles and a few little properties in his home town of Carnegie represents his earnings on the ball field. Not one penny has he ever "made on the side," though his face and his name probably have been in greater demand than those of any other man in the game.

Thriftier stars, like Mathewson, Cobb, Collins, McGraw, Dooin, Jennings, Donlin, Tinker, Evers, Chance and a lot of others have fattened incomes through filling stage engagements, "writing" for newspapers and magazines, lending their names and likenesses to advertising schemes and pursuing other divergent paths strewn with greenbacks. But not so with the ageing Honus, who for eighteen years has been the greatest individual earning power of the National league. His rod and gun, the wild woods, streams and country roads brought too much joy to his simple, boyish nature for him to engage in any work on the side in the off-season.

Corduroys, jeans and homespuns sufficed for Honus, and he could always wear his blue flannel shirt and a wash polka dot tie around the fashionable hotels with the ease and grace of a dolled-up millionaire. With lots of money and a thorough willingness to spend it, the great exponent of the simple life could order ham and eggs three times a day at the Waldorf-Astoria with all the poise and sang froid of any gentleman. There never has been a false move or fril' to the Dutchman's make-up, and he is the same carefree boy in gorgeous environment as he is when alone in the woods with his dogs.

The patches of gray that began showing on those Teutonic temples some years ago are whitening. As a shortstop he probably is through, but he is still fast, tricky and good enough to be depended upon to fill the Pirate first base job next year. Those oft-cartooned curved limbs have been hacked to pieces by flying steel in the last eighteen years, but Honus himself, thinks they are sound enough to carry him through 100 or more games a year until about 1920.

For ten years syndicate writers have tried in vain to loosen Wagner's tongue and make him talk and "write" for publication. Honus never could see it. He refused big offers of cash with the remark:

"I ain't no writer and don't pretend to be. Reporters are paid for that kind of stuff and it's not a ball player's job."

Honus stood firm against cash offers and guarantees of big dividends. But he had a weakness, and one writer on the staff of a baseball publication knew it. When this man reached Carnegie recently for a talk the big Teuton was as obdurate as ever. Finally the scribe drew forth a package. As he unpacked it the eyes of Honus glistened like those of a kid around a Christmas tree. It contained a shotgun worth about $65.

"It's yours," said the scribe, turning it over to Honus. The German found his tongue and talked as he had not talked for years. The scribe was his companion for two or three days, and then departed for home with a lot of material.

The money that Honus has turned down for the same work would have bought him a young arsenal and some apartment houses. But it is all a case of knowing your man and catering to his fancies, and a shotgun proved the lucky bait.

That shotgun is about the only thing that Honus has made in baseball outside of what he earned on the diamond.

No less than a dozen offers were made Honus to appear on the stage. In a brother act he and Lajoie were to split $1,500 a week in vaudeville some years ago, but the German went on a fishing trip while the Frenchman was figuring on splitting the first week's pay. Fred Clarke once was offered $500 a week salary, with $200 a week extra for every week he could keep Honus on the stage in a little act where all the two had to do was to engage in an exhibition with a basketball. Nothing ever came of it.

An automobile concern that located in the west two years ago offered Wagner a big sum and some stock in the business for the use of his name and pictures and his cooperation in advertising stunts. He would not listen to it. Similar offers have been made to him for the last twelve years, but he has declined them all.

Newspapers and writing syndicates have offered him as high as $1,000 and a percentage for his articles, and he has scorned their cash.

And then he fell for a shotgun.

A filtered water concern once pulled a trick over on Wagner, and Honus almost started a riot. They had offered him a good sum of money for the use of his name in connection with their bottled water. Failing in this their photographer camped at the Pirate bench one day. While Wagner and Marty O'Toole stood on either side of the drinking stand the photographer snapped them. A week later the advertisement with the picture appeared in the street cars. Honus was furious.

In the face of these things how can any one blame the Feds for not trying to land the German. Wagner is not paid his $10,000 a year by the Pittsburgh club for his ball playing alone. A big part of this remuneration is a reward for his loyalty to the National League when the American was formed. But Ban Johnson might have landed Honus had he given him a shotgun.

Perhaps the Feds could win Honus over with an auto, fishing tackle and a can of bait. With a man of Wagner's humor these things have a greater influence than the millions of Rockefeller.

Wagner is among the humblest of men. He abhors chance acquaintance with well-dressed folk. In his travels he makes pals of railroad men, elevator operators and quite often he will hook up with some poor fellow and show him a time. He would rather whittle a stick with some poor farm hand than be entertained by a millionaire. On the ball club he holds aloof from the big fellows and for companions he selects the youngest and most obscure "rookies."—Exchange.

15 OUT OF 24 WENT TO THE BOROUGHITES

N. P. H. S. Basketball Players Had a Good Season on the Court.

Fifteen victories and nine defeats is the record established by the North Plainfield High School basketball team, which recently closed its season. The schedule was a long and hard one and the boroughites have put up some fine games during the four months of play. There is no need to comment on the great interscholastic series again. Other close scores made by the North Plainfield team were with the Y. M. C. A., a two-point overtime defeat; Westfield, a one point victory; Plainfield Five, a three-point win, and Kearny, a two-point victory.

"Wren" Townley led his teammates in the scoring department, getting a total of 299 points in 23 games. "Ronny" Conroy was second, totaling 226. Townley made 110 field goals and 79 fouls, while his running mate tallied 92 from the field and 42 points from the fifteen foot mark. VanMater, Abrams and Hebert were the only three players to take part in every game.

BASEBALL DOPE FOR PRIVATE SCHOOL BOYS

Leal Youngsters Rounding Into Form for Mid-season Activities.

Coach C. D. Wardlaw, of Leal School, has already started baseball practice with some of his "raw" material from which he hopes to get some stars for the coming season. The private school trainer is up against it this season in more than one way and is holding preliminary practice in the Y. M. C. A. gym with the hope of finding infielders and pitchers. In the last named department there is now only one candidate, he being Voorhees, a port-sider, who did some of the twirling last year.

The Leal schedule this year is one of the hardest that has ever been arranged and several pitchers will be needed to put the nine through any sort of a successful season. There are several other positions to be filled on the team, one of which was left vacant by Augustus VanDeventer, who was utility man last year. He played in the field and around the third sack and was Leal's best man with the willow. VanDeventer is now attending the Borough High School and may play against his former teammates in interscholastic contests.

Mr. Wardlaw has a large squad of "rookies" to work with but whether they will round into ballplayers or not remains to be seen.

RIVERSIDES LOST ONE TO SOMERVILLE FIVE

The Riverside Five went to Somerville last night and lost out to the Knights of King Arthur basketball team of that place by the close score of 36 to 34. Cawley, who did most of the scoring for the K. of K. A. team, shot the winning basket in the last few minutes.

T. Ricketts and Brandt played the best games for the Riversides and Cawley and Pistachio were the stars for the winners, Pistachio making eight out of nine tries good from the fifteen foot mark and Cawley playing a fine game at forward.

Six games have been rolled on the Washington avenue lanes and the other six on the Watchung avenue alleys. Each time the home team copped two games. The averages which have been compiled for the first dozen games, show Monroe H. Long, of the Park Club team, to be the leader of the individual averages, having a mark of 184.6. Frank Blatz, of the "Bills," is second with an average of 181.6 and he holds the high score mark to date, a 235 which was made in the last match rolled on the Elks' alleys. PARK-ELK JUNIORS IN SECOND MATCH

Antlered Quintet Best Rivals in all Three Encounters Last Night.

The Junior Elks' bowling team bested the Park Club Junior pinners in all three games of the second match between these two teams, played on the Washington avenue alleys last night. This gives the Elks five games out of the six played. They copped two out of three on their home alleys in the first match. However, another series will probably be arranged.

The home team was many points behind its opponents in each of the three games, the initial roll being the closest of the trio. There was a difference of thirty-five pins in this game. Waldorf rolled the highest score of the night, a 208 registered in the second game. The "Bills" made their highest team count in the last roll, it being an 862 against the opposition's 727. Lyman rolled the best scores for the Park Club, his scores being 198, 184 and 170.

WHY NOT GIVE "LIDDY" A SHOW?

Inasmuch as some serious consideration is being given to a change in referees for that second Plainfield High School-Y. M. C. A. encounter on the Association court next Saturday night it might be well to bring the name of Eugene Lidgate into the controversy. Because one official has evidently failed to measure up to the anticipations of certain individuals that is no reason why other local arbitrators should be eliminated from consideration in the future. Two years ago Lidgate was a central figure in Y. M. C. A. combats and as the eleventh man on the floor he proved himself ably fitted for the task of handing out decisions. He is thoroughly acquainted with the rules that govern the pastime and knows a thing or two about handling crowds. Of course, as far as we're concerned, it is only natural that there should be a little personal feeling regarding who should officiate at the contest, but if it comes to a finish where another man has to be engaged we're inclined to believe that the local managers are duty bound to give Lidgate a whack at the task. It goes without saying that Lidgate would accept and we feel sure that he would measure up to the standard expected. He has been a close observer of a majority of the "big" games this season on local courts and his knowledge of the style of play indulged in by the respective forces makes him better fitted to serve as an official than a rank outsider who is brought to Plainfield to purloin a little loose change that should be turned over to "home trade."

Feathers will flutter on the Columbus Club court tomorrow night when the St. Joseph's and Columbus Club basketball representatives meet in the first game of a series. It is understood that both aggregations have padded for the occasion and it will no doubt be a battle royal well worth the admission fee. The feminine Columbus Club representatives, of course, will appear in the preliminary bill and this should serve as an excellent appetizer for what is to be served up later.

Someone has come through with the prediction that Moulton won't get any twenty-one goals when he matches his prowess against "Bill" Peacock in that Saturday night city title engagement. That might be so but we'll add that Peacock will have to exhibit a whole lot better form than he did last Saturday in order to keep the troublesome Harry under cover.

That N. P. H. S. handout was an indigestible morsel for the red and blue squad and we wouldn't be a bit surprised if it had some direct influence on the calibre of basketball the school boys will serve up to the Y. M. C. A. Then again, it may bring the school squad up to the realization that they have to play their best throughout the entire forty minutes in order to pull over a verdict. That letup in the final dash for Saturday's victory cost them another scalp and incidently deprived them of the honor of copping fifteen out of seventeen starts.

Three one-point and one overtime two-point decisions have been the result of North Plainfield-Plainfield basketball fighting this season to date. The boys' games twice went in Plainfield's direction by one-point margins and North Plainfield came across with a single point victory Saturday. The local girls hung up a two-point verdict in an overtime tilt. Teams could hardly be more evenly matched than those of this year.

Despite the fact that Columbus Club basketball representatives have been in the limelight but a short two months they have already laid claim to recognition in local circles and next year will probably make an impressive bid for the city title. The matches staged on the West Front street court to date have been clean-cut and spirited and the crowd that witnessed each clash is evidence enough of the popularity of the pastime among the K. of C. workers. The indoor frolic has come to stay in the Columbus Club and rapid strides of progress have been recorded to date.

Now that we have a swimming tank in which the public can take an occasional dip it might be well for someone to come through with a little agitation for a city aquatic meet to include teams from Hope Chapel, the Y. M. C. A., the Columbus Club, St. Joseph's Club, T. A. B. and other organizations promoting athletics in this burg. All the project needs is a little pushing and we'll have one of the biggest events ever pulled off in the Queen City.

PEG O' MY HEART

By J. Hartley Manners

A Comedy of Youth Founded by Mr. Manners on His Great Play of the Same Title—Illustrations From Photographs of the Play

CHAPTER XXVIII.

After Many Days.

FRANK O'CONNELL stood on the quay that morning in July and watched the great ship slowly swinging in through the heads, and his heart beat fast as he waited impatiently while they moored her.

His little one had come back to him. Amid the throngs swarming down the gangways he suddenly saw his daughter, and he gave a little gasp of surprised pleasure.

They reached O'Connell's apartment. It had been made brilliant for Peg's return. There were flowers everywhere.

His heart bounded as he saw Peg's face brighten as she ran from one object to another and commented on them.

"It's the grand furniture we have now, father!"

"Do ye like it, Peg?"

"That I do. And it's the beautiful picture of Edward Fitzgerald ye have on the wall there!"

"Ye mind how I used to rade ye his life?"

"I do indade. It's many's the tear I've shed over him an' Robert Emmet."

"Then ye've not forgotten?"

"Forgotten what?"

"All ye learned as a child, an' we talked of since ye grew to a girl?"

"I have not. Did ye think I would?"

"No, Peg, I didn't. Still, I was wondherin' "—

"What would I be doin' forgettin' the things ye taught me?"

"An' what have ye been doin' all these long days without me?"

He raised the littered sheets of his manuscript and showed them to her.

"This."

She looked over her shoulder and read:

"From 'Buckshot' to 'Agricultural Organization.' The History of a Generation of English Misrule, by Frank Owen O'Connell."

She looked up proudly at her father.

"It looks wondherful, father."

"I'll rade it to you in the long evenin's now we're together again."

"Do, father."

"An' we won't separate any more, Peg, will we?"

"We wouldn't have this time but for you, father."

"What made ye come back so sudden-like?"

"I only promised to stay a month."

"Didn't they want ye any longer?"

"In one way they did an' in another they didn't. It's a long history—that's what it is. Let us sit down here as we used to in the early days an' I'll tell ye the whole o' the happenin's since I left ye."

She softened some things and omitted others—Ethel entirely. That episode should be locked forever in Peg's heart.

Jerry she touched on lightly.

"There's one thing, Peg, that must part us some day when it comes to you," he finally said.

"What's that, father?"

"Love, Peg."

She lowered her eyes and said nothing.

"Has it come? Has it, Peg?"

She buried her face on his breast, and, though no sound came, he knew by the trembling of her little body that she was crying.

So it had come into her life.

The child he had sent away a month ago had come back to him transformed in that little time into a woman.

The cry of youth and the call of life had reached her heart.

After awhile he stood up.

"Ye'd betther be goin' to bed, Peg."

"All right, father."

She went to the door. Then she stopped.

"Ye're glad I'm home, father?"

He pressed her closely to him.

"I'll never lave ye again," she whispered.

All through that night Peg lay awake, searching through the past and trying to pierce through the future.

Toward morning she slept, and in a whirling dream she saw a body floating down a stream. She stretched out her hand to grasp it when the eyes met hers, and the eyes were those of a dead man—and the man was Jerry!

"I love you, Peg," said Sir Gerald.

She woke trembling with fear, and she turned on the light and huddled into a chair—and sat chattering with terror until she heard her father moving in his room. She went to the door and asked him to let her go in to him. He opened the door and saw his little Peg, wild eyed, pale and terror stricken, standing on the threshold. The look in her eyes terrified him.

"What is it, Peg, me darlin'? What is it?"

She crept in and looked up into his face with her startling eyes, and she grasped him with both of her small hands and in a voice dull and hopeless cried despairingly:

"I dreamt he was dead—dead! An' I couldn't rache him. An' he went on past me—down the stream—with his face upturned." The grasp loosened and just as she slipped from him O'Connell caught her in his strong arms and placed her gently on the sofa, and she fell asleep.

* * * * * * *

Those first days following Peg's return found father and child nearer each other than they had been since that famous trip through Ireland when he lectured from the back of his historical cart.

She became O'Connell's amanuensis. During the day she would go from library to library in New York verifying data for her father's monumental work.

One evening some few weeks after her return she was in her room preparing to begin her night's work with her father when she heard the bell ring. That was unusual. Their callers were few. She heard the outer door open, then the sound of a distant voice mingling with her father's.

Then came a knock at her door.

"There's somebody outside here to see ye, Peg," said her father.

"Who is it, father?"

"A perfect sthranger—to me. Be quick now."

She heard her father's footsteps go into the little sitting room and then the hum of voices.

Her father was talking. She opened the door and walked in. A tall, bronzed man came forward to greet her. Her heart almost stopped. She trembled violently. The next moment Jerry had clasped her hand in both of his.

"How are you, Peg?"

He smiled down at her as he used to in Regal Villa, and behind the smile there was a grave look in his dark eyes and the old tone of tenderness in his voice.

"How are you, Peg?" he repeated.

"I'm fine, Mr Jerry," she replied in a daze. Then she looked at O'Connell, and she hurried on to say:

"This is my father, Sir Gerald Adair."

"We'd inthroduced ourselves already," said O'Connell good naturedly, eying the unexpected visitor all the while. "And what might ye be doin' in New York?" he asked.

"I have never seen America. I take an Englishman's interest in what we once owned"—

"An' lost through misgovernment."

"Well, we'll say misunderstanding."

"As they'll one day lose Ireland."

"I hope not. The two countries understand each other better every day."

The bell rang again. Peg started to go, but O'Connell stopped her.

"It's McGinnis. This is his night to call and tell me the politics of the town. I'll take him into the next room, Peg, until yer visitor is gone."

"Oh, please," said Jerry hurriedly and taking a step toward the door, "allow me to call some other time!"

"Stay where ye are!" cried O'Connell, hurrying out as the bell rang again.

"I want to ask ye somethin', Sir Gerald," she began.

"Jerry!" he corrected.

"Please forgive me for what I said to ye that day. It was wrong of me to say it. Yet it was just what ye might have expected from me. But ye'd been so fine to me—a little nobody—all that wondherful month that it's hurt me ever since, an' I didn't dare write to ye. It would have looked like presumption from me. But now that ye've come here ye've found me out, an' I want to ask yer pardon, an' I want to ask ye not to be angry with me."

"I couldn't be angry with you, Peg."

He paused, and as he looked at her the reserve of the held in, self contained man was broken. He bent over her and said softly:

"Peg, I love you!"

The room swam around her.

Was all her misery to end?

Did this man come back from the mists of memory because he loved her?

She tried to speak, but nothing came from her parched lips and tightened throat.

Then she became conscious that he was speaking again, and she listened to him with all her senses, with all her heart and from her soul.

"I knew you would never write to me, and somehow I wondered just how much you cared for me—if at all. So I came here. I love you, Peg. I want you to be my wife. I want to care for you and tend you and make you happy. I love you!"

Her heart leaped and strained.

"Do you love me?" she whispered, and her voice trembled and broke.

"I do. Indeed I do. Be my wife."

"But you have a title," she pleaded.

"Share it with me," he replied.

"Ye'd be so ashamed o' me."

"No, Peg; I'd be proud of you. I love you."

Peg broke down and sobbed.

"I love you, too, Misther Jerry."

In a moment she was in his arms.

It was the first time any one had touched her tenderly besides her father.

Jerry stroked her hair and looked into her eyes and smiled down at her lovingly as he asked:

"What will your father say?"

She looked happily up at him and answered:

"Do you know one of the first things me father taught me when I was just a little child?"

"It was from Tom Moore, 'Oh, there's nothin' half so sweet in life—as love's young dream.'"

When O'Connell came into the room later he realized that the great summons had come to his little girl.

The thought came to him that he was about to give to England his daughter in marriage! Well, had he not taken from the English one of her fairest daughters as his wife?

And a silent prayer went up from his heart that happiness would abide with his Peg and her Jerry and that their romance would last longer than had Angela's and his.

AFTERWORD.

AND now the moment has come to take leave of the people I have lived with for so long. Yet, though I say "Adieu!" I feel it is only a temporary leave taking. Their lives are so linked with mine that some day in the future I may be tempted to draw back the curtain and show the passage of years in their various lives.

Some day with O'Connell we will visit Peg in her English home and see the marvels time and love have wrought upon her. But to those who knew her in the old days she is still the same Peg o' My Heart—resolute, loyal, unflinching, mingling the laugh with the tear, truth and honesty her bedrock.

We will also visit Mrs. Chichester and hear of her little grandchild, born in Berlin, where her daughter, Ethel, met and married an attache at the embassy and has formed a salon.

It will be a grateful task to revive old memories of those who formed the foreground of the life story of one whose radiant presence shall always live in my memory, whose steadfastness and courage endeared her to all, whose influence on those who met her and watched her and listened to her was farreaching, since she epitomized in her small body all that makes woman lovable and man supreme—honor, faith and love!

Adieu, Peg o' My Heart!

THE END.

PUFFINGS ACHIEVE A GRACEFUL YOKE ON THIS SKIRT.

The soft thin voile of this striped blue and white frock is puckered up into rows of puffing at the hip and two little ruffles hold out the wide skirt at the foot. Belt, buttons and bracelet cuffs are of blue taffeta that matches the blue stripe in the voile. Like most of the summer frocks of whatever material, this one has long sleeves, but the lace chemisette, high-collared at the back, opens in front in cool V effect.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Nell had solemnly resolved to like the Kansas town which was to be her home, but her heart died within her as they drove to the hotel in a swaying old bus.

The view from the rattling window was unspeakably ugly. In the first place, the time was early spring and the litter winter had accumulated was in the dooryards; fences sagged, loose boards rattled and sprang up menacingly as people passed along the wooden sidewalks. Early as it was, a cloud of dust arose from every passing vehicle. She sank back on the moth-eaten old cushion and closed her eyes.

"Are you tired, dear?" asked Dick anxiously. She was very pale.

"I'll be all right after I rest awhile," she answered without opening her eyes. "My head aches." She had almost said heart, but changed to head in time.

Drawing the shades in the bare hotel room, she lay down with a wet cloth on her head and Dick went away and left her to sleep.

About an hour later he tiptoed into the room.

"Are you awake, dear? Mr. Parsons has just sent word that they are expecting us for dinner. It's kind of them, I must say. Do you feel able to get up and dress?"

Nell reached out her arms and put them around Dick's neck for help to rise.

"I had a nice nap and feel better," she answered, and slid off the bed. Can you have the suit case brought up? It doesn't seem to be here. I wonder if there is a porter in this establishment. I can put on a clean waist, though wrinkled it surely will be.

"What kind of a woman is Mrs. Parsons?" asked Nell, surveying herself in the glass with a dissatisfied air.

"I saw her only at dinner. I believe the child was sick or something. The truth is, I was so occupied with the affairs of Richard Morton that I did not notice her particularly."

"What is their home like?" persisted Nell, eager for information about the new acquaintances.

"They have a roomy house and a great big lawn with trees. I wish I could have found something as good. I had Hobson's choice, as there was just one vacant house in town."

Nell laughed. "I'm ready now," she said, gathering up her gloves.

"Come on then. I'll show you our house on the way over; it's quite near to the Parsons."

"How fine that we are to be neighbors! I do hope I shall like her; it makes such a difference if one has one congenial friend in a place like this."

Household Hints

EGG DISHES

New Way to Fry Eggs—Heat griddle smoking hot, put in just enough grease to keep eggs from sticking to griddle; break eggs separately onto griddle. As soon as nicely browned on underside, turn or roll eggs over to brown on other side, slip them onto warm plate and serve. Eggs cooked this way are light, look dainty; not tough and leathery as when a great amount of grease is used.

Scrambled Eggs—For every six eggs put six tablespoons milk and one tablespoon melted butter in a frying pan, when hot add eggs, but do not stir until whites are nearly cooked, then break the yolk and stir well. As soon as "set" remove from fire and season with salt and pepper to taste.

Breaded Eggs—Allow one cup bread crumbs for each egg. Sprinkle bread crumbs with sweet milk, using enough to moisten. Beat eggs, add pinch of salt, stir eggs in bread crumbs, pour in hot frying pan and brown on both sides. Serve hot.

Creamed Eggs—One tablespoon butter, one cup milk, one tablespoon flour, three hard-boiled eggs, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon pepper, as many slices of toast as required. Put butter in sauce pan and when hot add flour, salt, pepper and gradually the milk. Add eggs cut in thin slices. When hot pour over toast and garnish with parsley.

Egg in Nest—First make pieces of toast for as many eggs as you wish to serve. Have ready a pan, dip toast in a little milk (which should be heated), then place in pan. Now beat white of egg until quite stiff, piling same on toast; drop yolk carefully into center; when all are ready place in rather warm oven until yolk is set and white tinted a nice brown. Have plates heated and by adding a sprig of parsley you have a tasty, pretty dish. You can add seasoning and butter or leave for individuals. Chili sauce is very good served with these.

Baked Eggs No. 1—Butter baking dish, line with bread crumbs, break in required number of eggs, cover with grated cheese or not as preferred, season with butter, pepper and salt; cover with bread crumbs, place in hot oven until whites are "set."

Baked Eggs No. 2—Butter deep plate thoroughly; add a little salt and pepper; break in eggs and immerse them with sweet cream; put into oven and bake five minutes or till egg is "set." Ready for table.

Boiled Eggs—Put them in cold water and when it boils the eggs are done, the whites being soft and digestible, as they are not when put on in boiling water.

Soft-Boiled Eggs—Place eggs in boiling water, one quart for three eggs; remove from stove and let stand covered from seven to ten minutes.

Poached Eggs—Nearly fill frying pan with boiling water; add a little salt and vinegar, break eggs, one at a time, into wet saucer; slip from this upon surface of water; cook slowly three minutes, take up with perforated skimmer, lay carefully upon buttered toast and serve immediately.

Plain Omelet—Three eggs well beaten; stir into eggs about 1½ teaspoons flour, beating it smooth, then add a little salt and large tumbler of milk. Heat frying pan, melt on it a little butter to grease it well, pour on omelet and bake in oven to a nice brown.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPE.

Cabbage Salad—Chop half head cabbage very fine. Stir half cup sugar in beaten yolks of two eggs, add one teaspoon each of salt and mustard, one-fourth teaspoon pepper. Now stir the whole into three-fourths cup boiling vinegar and cook until thick. When cool add two tablespoons sweet cream and pour over the cabbage; serve.

Party Dessert—Wash one cup rice, boil in salt water, fifteen minutes (or until grain is soft); cook in morning, drain and set aside to cool. When ready to serve, whip one pint cream, sweeten and flavor, crumb rice in cream, stir carefully. Serve in sherbet glass with dip of preserved cherries or strawberries. Serve with cakes. This recipe will serve fifteen people.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW BALL

The Illness of Cornelia Calf.

Cornelia Calf one summer day began a noisy bawl;
Said she, "I'm so uncomfortable, I don't feel well at all!
I am so stuffy in the head that I can scarcely speak;
And what is harder still to bear, my eyes and nose both leak."

Her mother said in great alarm, "I'll go for Doctor Sheep,
And while I'm gone, Cornelia, dear, do try to get some sleep!"
She hurried to the doctor's home and soon came back again
With wise old Doctor Sheep, who said, "My child, where is the pain?"

Cornelia said, "It's id by eyes; it's also id by dose."
(She spoke like that because her head was stuffy, I suppose.)
Then Doctor Sheep said right away, "I know what's wrong with her,
She has been playing in the field and caught the hay-fever."

Said he to Mrs. Cow, "The child will have to go away
To some place where she will not see a single bit of hay."
"Where that will be," moaned Mrs. Cow, "I really do not know."
"The sea-shore," said old Doctor Sheep, "is just where she should go."

Good Mrs. Cow was quite alarmed; "We'll go at once," said she,
"But will you tell me, Dr. Sheep, where is the nearest sea?"
"I'm not quite sure," said Doctor Sheep, "I'll have to look around;
But I am sure some handy sea can easily be found.

"I'll let you know this afternoon just what I've learned," said he,
"And in the meantime she must take a dose of cow-slip tea."
But Miss Cornelia cried and bawled more loudly than before;
"I will not go one single step to any old sea-shore."

They tried to tell Cornelia that the sea-shore would be grand;
Said she, "There's not a blade of grass and I can't live on sand."
And though they coaxed and coaxed she said, "It is no use to tease."
Then all at once Cornelia Calf commenced to sneeze and sneeze.

I do not know how true it is, but this is what folks say:
By evening Miss Cornelia Calf had sneezed herself away;
Which goes to show it mostly pays to listen to advice,
And if you have a doubt of this just try it once or twice.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Conducted by

THE W. C. T. U.

PROHIBITION SPELLS HIGHER WAGES.

Mrs. Katharine Lent Stevenson, Pres. Massachusetts W. C. T. U.

A new and interesting proof of the attitude the business world is taking towards the prohibition of the liquor traffic has recently been afforded in the town of Millbury, Massachusetts. Millbury has been a confirmed license town for years, but the sentiment for local prohibition has been increasing very much of late and the recent organization of a Woman's Christian Temperance Union has helped in the growth of sentiment for the outlawing of the saloon.

On January 27 the W. W. Windle Company, a local manufacturing firm, surprised the citizens by sending out a statement that if the town voted "no" on the following Monday, there would be an increase of ten per cent. in the wages paid to all teetotal employes of that firm. Mr. Windle backed up his offer by strong statements to prove that the firm could well afford this increase, although paying unusually high wages at that time, because of the better workmanship and increased safety guaranteed through prohibition even when limited to the township area. He said: "Business men are waking up to the fact that rum and business do not mix. A saloon in town means more accidents, poorer production, higher taxes, sickness and hundreds of other evils. Only a short time ago an out-of-town manufacturer, who owns considerable property here, told me he would never build another dollar's worth of property as long as there was an open saloon in Millbury."

PROHIBITION A MORAL AND FINANCIAL BENEFIT.

Governor L. B. Hanna, of North Dakota.

I believe that prohibition has done much for North Dakota, both from a moral and financial standpoint. The law is respected and easier of enforcement each year, and I am satisfied that the people of the State will never repeal it.

ABSOLUTE DESTRUCTION OF LIQUOR TRAFFIC DEMANDED.

Governor Moses Alexander, of Idaho.

I am proud, as a citizen of Idaho, to be able to say that the cause of temperance and sobriety has made such strides among the people that the day has arrived when the licensed saloon has no longer a right to existence in our State. There is no longer any ground to stand upon in defense of the dispensing of alcoholic liquors by consent of the State. Local option had its day, but that day is past. What the people now demand from us is the absolute destruction of the liquor business.

PROSPERITY FOLLOWS PROHIBITION.

Governor Locke Craig of North Carolina.

As to the effects of prohibition upon the finances of North Carolina, I will say that the total revenue from all sources during the year 1908, the last year during which whisky was sold under license, was $2,616,439.62. During the year 1913, the total receipts from all sources were $3,668,085.07. In 1908, the last year that whisky was sold, the average term of the public school in North Carolina was barely four months. This year many counties in the State will have a full six month term and in some counties it will be much more. North Carolina has never known in all her history a period of greater prosperity than that through which she has passed since prohibition was adopted. Real estate in all of the cities and larger towns has greatly enhanced in value, and every line of business has prospered.

In view of the deplorable conditions now existing in San Francisco, the executive board of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Northern California begs to make the following statements:

1. There are at the present time hundreds of girls and women looking for employment, who can find none. Many of these girls and women are destitute, strangers in a strange city, having come to San Francisco with barely sufficient to pay their board and lodging for a few days.

2. Every day adds to the number of the unemployed and the conditions are growing constantly more serious. The Exposition authorities have ten applications for every position they have to fill.

3. The unemployed are from all grades and classes

We ask that these statements be given all possible publicity in The Union Signal and State W. C. T. U. papers, in the religious press, and in the newspapers generally throughout the country.

We also appeal for co-operation from all who read this article to assist in securing the desired publicity for this warning.

In view of the foregoing the executive board of the California Woman's Christian Temperance Union wishes to advise strongly that no girl or woman come to San Francisco to look for employment unless she has with her sufficient means to pay her living expenses while looking for work and to pay her return traveling expenses should suitable work not be found.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

"It Taxes Credulity."

In a recent issue of the New York Evening Post, Mr. Gilbert M. Tucker asks whether anyone ever proposed to confer the suffrage on any class of people among whom there was organized resistance to receiving it.

The tone of Mr. Tucker's communication implies that he expects a loud "Never," in reply to his query. But if like Hashimira Togo, he "asks to know," then the following letters must be illuminating to Mr. Tucker and others. The correspondence appeared in the Post of March 6, under the headlines given:

Fleshpot Opposition.

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

Sir: I live in the same town with Mr. Gilbert M. Tucker. I have heard him ask, over and over, the question he asks you, and which appears in your Saturday issue. He seems to think he is saying something serious. He has hypnotized himself into the belief that because the anti-suffrage movement is organized it is therefore unique.

He has entirely overlooked a trait in humanity so conspicuous as to have been the subject of a generalization by one of our great scientists. It was Huxley, wasn't it, who commented on the certainty with which humanity could be counted on to block its own progress?

Wherever there has been a movement to "enlarge" any considerable group of humans an inevitable difficulty in the enterprise has been the opposition of those most concerned. Go into history wherever you choose, in any episode of this character you will find the evidence.

Once there was a man named Moses, who would lead his people out of bondage into a land promised of Jehovah. He prepared himself mightily for a struggle with the Egyptians; he set out as on a joyous venture with a stout heart to overcome the objections of the Canaanites and the Hittites and the Amorites and the Perizzites and the Hivites and the Jebusites; but his soul turned sick within him because of the trouble in his own ranks made by those who longed for the fleshpots of Egypt.

Now this Fleshpot Opposition among the followers of Moses differs only in one respect from the anti-suffrage movement among women today: it didn't have a card catalogue. Neither did Moses. That a movement expresses itself after the manner of its own time is insufficient ground for claiming for it any distinction of uniqueness.

At a recent meeting in Albany, Mr. Tucker, asking as always this question, was answered by a woman who told the story of a committee of workingmen in England at the time it was proposed to extend the franchise to them, whose spokesman said for them that they did not want the ballot—that they were perfectly satisfied to believe that their betters could vote for them better than they could vote for themselves. Mr. Tucker frankly questioned the authenticity of the story, adding naively, "It taxes my credulity."

It would, wouldn't it?

As an aid in answering his own question one might suggest that Mr. Tucker refresh his memory by reading history here and there, to note the uniform fate of Fleshpot Oppositions.

KATHERINE HULST GAVIT.
Albany, March 1.

They Organized Against It.

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

Sir: Mr. Gilbert M. Tucker asks whether any one ever proposed to confer the suffrage on any class of people among whom there was organized resistance to receiving it.

This happened in the case of the Reform Bill in England in 1832, which enfranchised small tenant farmers and many wage-earners. Scores of anti-suffrage societies were formed among these men, and one or more conventions of these societies passed resolutions which read curiously like the arguments of our female Anti-Suffragists.

All extensions of the suffrage have been made to classes of people of whom only a minority actually asked for it.

The proportion of the unenfranchised who are now demanding the ballot is enormously greater than on any previous occasion, and no class has ever been nearly as well prepared to receive it as are our women.

GEORGE H. WRIGHT.

A Plainfield vs. A New York Account

The advantages to residents of Plainfield and vicinity of maintaining a bank account in The State Trust Company are so numerous that no argument should be necessary to convince those who are now keeping their accounts in New York. Liberal interest rates (3% and 4%), the free collection of out of town checks and New York checking privileges are but a few of the many advantages that such an account affords. On the other hand a New York account means inconvenience in making deposits, charges on out of town checks and in many instances no interest on balances.

We offer our splendid facilities to any one who is willing to overcome habit and profit thereby.

GIRL'S CHARGES AGAINST PASTOR

South Plainfield Miss Accuses Jersey City Clergyman of Serious Crime.

TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

Detective Arrests Rev. Walter G. Jones After Complaint is Filed by Girl's Father—He Declares He is Innocent.

In default of $2,500 bail, the Rev. Walter G. Jones, pastor of the North Baptist church, Jersey City avenue and Fourth street, Jersey City, was yesterday held a prisoner on a serious charge preferred against him by Miss Laura Shrope, the seventeen-year-old daughter of Melvin Shrope, of Railroad avenue, South Plainfield. He was arrested at his home, 289 Pavonia avenue, Jersey City, yesterday by Detective Alexander Gallagher and appeared to be greatly surprised when the allegations of the South Plainfield miss were made known to him.

When a Plainfield Daily Press reporter visited the Shrope home in South Plainfield last night the father, who is a conductor on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, straightened out to his full heighth of six feet and profoundly denounced the clergyman. Miss Shrope, who is pretty and looks to be at least twenty, said:

"Every word I have said about Mr. Jones is true. I have no reason to accuse him unless he is guilty."

When assured that the visit of the reporter was of a friendly nature the parent finally consented to discuss the case and several times interrupted his story to swear vengeance on the man who had taken advantage of his daughter's youth and innocence.

According to the story related by Mr. Shrope, his daughter took a position in the Jones household in Jersey City at the recommendation of the Rev. J. J. Allen, pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church. The father said his daughter knew Dr. Allen and when the latter suggested that she take a position as companion to Mrs. Jones, the Jersey City clergyman's tubercular wife, she consulted with her parents. Inasmuch as the South Plainfield minister had first mentioned the proposition the Shropes were satisfied that their daughter would be in safe hands and she went to the clergyman's residence.

Miss Shrope said she remained in Dr. Jones' employ until December 20. During the months of November and December, she says, the Jersey City pastor twice committed an assault on her. The minister's wife did not improve and on December 20 left for Florida for her health. Their little six-year-old daughter was sent to relatives in Norristown, Pa., and the day Mrs. Jones left for the south Miss Shrope was sent home.

The girl said: "I left before Christmas, and made up my mind then I would not tell anyone. But I couldn't hide it any longer and told my father."

Dr. P. B. Cregar, of this city, was called to the South Plainfield home and the father immediately took the girl to Jersey City and went before Justice of the Peace Edward Markley, where Miss Shrope made an affidavit, detailing her experiences in the minister's home.

Shrope told Chief Monohan, of Jersey City police department, of the charges, adding:

"I much prefer taking the law in my own hands."

"That will do no good," Monohan advised. "Let the law take its own course."

The father appears to be greatly wrought up over the incident and declared to the reporter last night:

"I will see this thing to a finish. The only thing to do with such men as Jones is to go right after them. I am confident that what the girl has told me is the truth. She is a good girl and had no reason to make false charges against her former employer. People living near my home here will tell you what kind of a child she is. We have placed every confidence in Dr. Allen and, of course, when he recommended Dr. Jones to us we thought the child would be in safe hands. You don't know who to trust nowadays."

The minister, who is thirty-two years of age, has been pastor of the Jersey City church for one year. He went there from a charge in Bayonne and previously was a pastor in Scranton, Pa. Following his arrest, to which he submitted willingly, Dr. Jones was not placed in a cell but was permitted to wait in the headquarters building until the Rev. Dr. Robert T. Craig, of the Summit Avenue Baptist church, concluded his evening service, after which he promised he would obtain the $2,500 bail in which County Judge Tennant held him.

COUNCIL AGAINST ACT AMENDMENT

Takes Stand as Being Opposed to Senate Bill No. 262.

OVERSEERS INTERESTED

Resolution Introduced by Councilman Francis J. Blatz Last Night—One Year Clause Not Favored.

Councilman Francis J. Blatz introduced a resolution at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council last night advocating that the city fathers go on record as being opposed to Senate bill No. 262 to amend an act entitled "An act for the settlement and relief of the poor." It was brought to the attention of Mr. Blatz by Overseer of the Poor Garret T. Dunham, the latter acting on a resolution passed by the State Overseers' Association at a recent meeting, in which the officials in the various towns represented in that body were instructed to bring the matter before the governing bodies. A vote of the Council brought out the fact that all of the members were in accord with Mr. Blatz's stand and the resolution was unanimously adopted.

The bill in its original form provides for a residence of five consecutive years in any municipality to make an individual a bona fide resident entitled to relief privileges in that municipality. The amendment proposes to change the bill so that a one year's residence will be legal.

It is the opinion of the porr authorities that to make persons eligible to the benefits such as those bestowed on indigents after they have lived in the municipality but one year would be unfair. At the present time one without the means of support must have lived in Plainfield for five years to derive the benefits provided by the poor department. If, after he has lived here for that length of time, he is found to be indigent, he is committed to the Industrial Farm on Rock avenue and cared for by the city. The amendment would make it possible for a person to move to Plainfield from some other town and after being here for a year make demands of support upon the city. In this case the place from which he originally lived would not be liable for his maintenance.

The poor association also advocates that the Common Pleas Court be vested with the proper authority to summon before it by proper process those relatives who are or who are not residents of the county wherein indigents may have a settlement.

This is advocated with the idea of making relatives responsible for the support of indigents in such cases as the court may deem advisable.

FINAL TRIBUTE TO ALBERT L. FORCE

Departed Editor Revered by Large Gathering at a Simple Funeral Service.

IN BELOVED CHURCH

Pastor Broek and Dr. Johnson Officiating Clergymen—Casket Borne to Grave by Trinity Associates—Burial at Hillside.

In Trinity Reformed church, the edifice that had been near and dear to him for nearly thirty years and which had been a factor in his daily life, the funeral of Albert Lewis Force, founder of the Daily Press and Constitutionalist, was held yesterday afternoon. A gathering of relatives, friends and business associates filled nearly every pew, many of those present coming from distant cities. The service was in charge of Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor and confidant of the deceased, assisted by Rev. Dr. Edward P. Johnson, of the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick. Arthur L. Titsworth presided at the organ and interspersed the addresses with several hymns, rendered with a tremelo effect.

Following appropriate scripture readings, Mr. Broek delivered a eulogy using as a theme the text in St. Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians 1:23: "To depart and be with Christ, which is far better." In his remarks the pastor spoke of the steadfast Christian character which Mr. Force had possessed for so many years. It was practised not only in his home

MUSICIANS' UNION INSTALL OFFICERS

Plainfield Local, No. 693, A. F. M., Officially Started on Its Career.

With the accompaniment of strains of music from bands and drum corps, Plainfield Local, No. 693, American Federation of Musicians, was officially started on its career last night by the installation of its recently elected officers. A delegation of 100, headed by Bracken's band came as a representation of Elizabeth Local and there were other visitors from New Brunswick, Somerville and other places. Previous to the exercises in Eagles' Hall, on East Second street, a parade was held through the principle streets. Bracken's band was in the lead and the Independent and St. Mary's T. A. B. Fife and Drum Corps discoursed martial airs. There was plenty of red fire all along the route.

The installation ceremonies were in charge of President Bracken, of Elizabeth Local, No. 151, and the Plainfield officers were placed in the following stations:

President, Andrew G. Carpenter; vice-president, Kenneth Stuart; recording secretary, Wendell D. Glover; finance secretary, Charles A. Nichols; treasurer, B. A. Paroubek; board of directors, F. L. Manchester, Charles M. Suhr, Lewis Clauss and Allan Squier, of Plainfield, and Antone Gloeckner and John A. Fine, of Elizabeth; sergeant-at-arms, Edward Townley; trustee for three years, William N. Runyon; trustee for two years, Fred W. Hayles; trustee for one year, John Emery; delegates to building trades, B. A. Paroubek and John Bennett.

Following the installation a buffet lunch was served and a general social time enjoyed. The informal program included speeches and music. The committee in charge of last night's affair was composed of B. A. Paroubek, Andrew G. Carpenter, Lewis Clauss, Kenneth Stuart, Charles A. Nichols and Fred W. Hayles.

BELGIAN BABIES FUND CONTINUES TO GROW

Friends Send Contributions to Be Used to Buy Condensed Milk.

Contributions continue to come to the Daily Press office to be applied to the Plainfield fund of $310 which is being raised to send another shipment of 4,800 cans of condensed milk to the Belgian babies. Every $1 sent in will buy enough condensed milk to keep two and a half babies alive for a month, and Plainfield has already done a big part in aiding this work, the local Commission having recently devoted all its energies to the cause.

Those who have contributed today are C. L., $3, and Two Friends, $1 each; "Mrs. D. C.," $1, and Mrs. DeForest, $1.

Contributions may be sent to the Daily Press office, where they will be acknowledged through the columns of the paper, and then forwarded to the local Commission. About $100 more is needed to complete the shipment, which will be the third of the kind that has been sent from Plainfield. All told well over $2,000 has been raised for the Belgian cause in this city.

Shipments of clothing donated during the last few months have been so large and generous that an adequate supply for months to come has accumulated, according to a cable despatch received from the London office of the Commission for Relief in Belgium. Space in the vessels of the Commission is needed for the transportation of food, and accordingly the Commission is appealing to all committees and individuals to focus their efforts upon supplying food, of which there is still a serious shortage.

London W. Bates, vice-chairman of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, in New York, has made the following statement concerning the feeding of Belgians:

"In connection with the reports that relief work in Belgium may be hampered by the Channel and North Sea situation, it can only be said that the work for relief must go on, and we expect surely to continue to get food into Belgium. In response to inquiries made from the State of Kentucky and elsewhere as to whether the Commission would continue to receive or buy food, I answered that it would."

ITALIAN CLUB PLANNING TO PRESENT A COMEDY

The Italian Social and Educational Club will hold an entertainment and dance Friday evening, March 19, under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee in the Bryant School Auditorium. The program is an unusually interesting one, comprising vocal solos by members, selections by their own orchestra, and a one-act comedy, "The Marble Arch."

A dance will be held after the concert, music being furnished by Angela Sorbo and "Al" Squires. The fee will be small, according to the general policy of the Public Recreation Committee.

The guests of the club will be pleased to see what has been done during the winter and will no doubt be surprised that the members are so resourceful. Regular club meetings are held each Monday and Friday evenings at Lincoln School, when various forms of activities are engaged in by the young people. The orchestra and dramatic group have been holding rehearsals regularly and Dr. Charles G. Davis has been leading the boys in group games and calesthenics. A short time ago a most enjoyable evening was spent in holding a mock trial under his direction. Music and dancing are frequently enjoyed during a part of an evening. The game room is decidedly popular and many of the boys have become expert checker players. Mr. Coletta, the president, is anxious that the interests of the club may be broadened so that every Italian in the city will find it a pleasure to spend an evening at the club.

Tomorrow night at 8 o'clock there will be an illustrated talk on the principal cities of the United States with pictures of their prominent streets and public buildings. Any Italian who drops in at Lincoln School tomorrow evening will be made welcome.

HONORS FOR DR. FRANK S. WELLS

Tendered a Banquet on Completion of Fifty Years as an Active Dentist.

AFFAIR A SURPRISE

Taught Rudiments of the Profession to Many Dental Surgeons—Has Had An Unusual Career—Veteran of Civil War.

Dr. Frank S. Wells, of Grant avenue, who on March 1 last, completed his fiftieth year as a practicing doctor of dental surgery, was tendered a testimonial dinner by the Plainfield Dental Society at Truell Inn, last night. The affair was a complete surprise to the guest of honor as he believed the gathering was only the regular monthly meeting of the organization, but it only served to make the proceedings all the more enjoyable to him. Covers were laid for twenty, as in addition to those from Plainfield there were present Dr. James Seymour, of the University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Chauncey M. F. Egel, of Westfield, and Dr. W. F. Naylor, of Somerville. Dr. Wells is a veteran of the Civil War and a patriotic aspect prevailed through wall decorations of flags and flowers, while at each plate reposed a small silken American flag. As the participants prepared to sit down they waved the miniature "Old Glories" and sang "He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Dr. Guy H. Hillman, president of the dental society, was the presiding

ELOQUENT SERMON BY BISHOP MATHEWS

Large Congregation Greeted New Prelate at Grace Church Last Evening.

A large congregation greeted Rt. Rev. Paul Mathews, the new bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey, upon his first appearance in this city, at Grace church last night. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the rectof, extended a hearty welcome to the bishop, to which the latter made an appropriate response.

The discourse by the bishop was inspiring and impressive, holding the close attention of his hearers throughout. He emphasized the words, "I am, I can, I must," concluding with the words, "I will." The preacher said that the words 'I am' denoted personality, the only possible source of which is God. He said that personality is because God is and is God in man, and for that reason the attributes of God, Love, Truth and Righteousness, are also attributes of man.

"Having those attributes," said the bishop, "it is possible for man to conquer as he conquered the earth, air and sea. All things are now subdued by man except himself and because he has God-like attributes and is able to say 'I am,' he should be able to say 'I can' conquer myself.

"Man is placed under the obligation to conquer himself and it is his duty to say 'I will' and 'I must.' It is through Christ in man that all things are possible; man yielding himself to the mighty power of Christ is sure to rise up and declare that 'I must and will,' and a self-conquest will be the ultimate result."

All were deeply impressed with the forceful sermon and after the service those present accepted the invitation to adjourn to the parish house where they had the opportunity of personally meeting Bishop Mathews. He will later visit the local parish for confirmation.

ST. PATRICK'S RECEPTION UNDER AUSPICES OF ELKS

One of the pleasing events arranged in celebration of St. Patrick's Day is the dance and reception to be held in the Elks' club house in Watchung avenue next Tuesday night. Van Eps' banjo orchestra will furnish the music for the dancing and admission may be gained through the presentation of invitations supplied by members of the lodge.

The St. Patrick's day social gathering is one of a series being conducted under the auspices of the B. P. O. E. members during the winter season, the previous ones having been thoroughly enjoyed and well attended. Appropriate printed invitations have been issued.

ISSUE EXCEEDED AMOUNT NEEDED

CANCELL FOUR BONDS

Purchasers Agreed to Take Ninety-six Instead of One Hundred Bonds at Same Rate—This Also Leaves $252.80 Over Amount Needed.

An agreement arrived at between Mayor Leighton Calkins and the firm of Bond & Goodwin, of New York city, the purchasers of the authorized issue of $100,000 school bonds for the erection of the new Evergreen Avenue School, was presented to the Common Council in the form of "Special Message No. 2 from the Mayor" at the adjourned meeting last night. The details of the transaction met with the favorable consideration of the Council and it was passed on the strength of explanatory communications that passed between the Mayor and the New York firm. It is estimated that a saving of $9,000 to the city will result.

The original requisition of the Board of School Estimate called for an expenditure of $100,000 for the erection of the new school and this amount was authorized by the Council. As the bonds brought a premium of $4,330 it has been found that it will be necessary on the basis of the bid to issue only $96,000 par value to produce the total of $100,000, the amount determined by the Board of School Estimate as being sufficient to meet the expense of erecting the new school. The $96,000 with the premium will amount to $100,252.80, which is $252.80 more than has been asked for.

Investigation by Mayor Calkins brought out the fact that if two bonds maturing in 1943 and two bonds maturing in 1965 were cancelled it would not change the premium basis or the interest basis but would leave the price bid by Bond & Goodwin exactly the same as though the firm took the entire $100,000 worth of bonds. The cancellation of the four bonds mentioned above and the delivery of the ninety-six bonds to the Bond & Goodwin company was approved by the Council's attorneys, Hawkins, Delafield & Longfellow, of New York city.

The bond purchasing company agreed to the cancellation of the sale to them of $2,000 of the shortest and $2,000 of the longest bonds and also to take the remaining $96,000 at the same bid.

The four bonds cancelled were ordered destroyed by City Treasurer William F. Arnold and another resolution was passed authorizing the purchase of three bonds of the Evergreen Avenue School issue out of the sinking fund.

H. H. WILLIAMS TO DISCUSS COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

The next regular meeting of the West End Civic Association will be held tomorrow evening in Washington School at 8:15 o'clock. The special attraction at this meeting will be an address by Howard H. Williams on the subject of "Commission Form of Government."

Mr. Williams has made a special study of this leading question of the day, and it is believed that whether one in accord or not, with this form of legislation, his views will prove interesting.

RUNAWAY JUNE DAILY.

In order to reduce the size of the installments of Runaway June, which have been printed heretofore on Mondays in the Daily Press, the serial will be concluded in shorter sections, and beginning today it will be found as a daily feature on the Woman's Page of the Press. As the story is being written at the same time that the moving pictures for a similar serial are taken, it is possible that there will be occasions when short intervals will occur between the installments, but the story will be completed as fast as it comes from the authors, George Randolph and Lillian Chester.

CANTATA AT GRACE M. E.

Under the auspices of the choir, a cantata, "The Holy City," will be given in Grace M. E. church tonight. Miss Alice Carroll has been in charge of the rehearsals and an excellent musical treat is anticipated.

FIERCE FIGHTING AGAIN REPORTED

French Colonials Perform Brilliantly in the Champagne Region.

BATTLE IS RENEWED

Germans Shifting Troops From Grodno—Retreat From Augustov Reported to Be Rout—3,166,000 Russians Taken Prisoners.

Paris, March 11—Fierce and continuous fighting in the Champagne region since February 16 is described in an official report given out by the war office today. Particularly brilliant feats by the French Colonial Infantry in capturing the fortifications of Beausejour are related. The Germans were forced to bring heavy reserves to reinforce their line at that point. The Colonials have since been relieved by line regiments.

The French war statement also said:

"The English attacks yesterday captured 2,500 metres of trenches before Neuve Chappelle, and the village itself, and then progressed in the direction of Aubers, as far as Moulin du Prietre and in a southeasterly direction as far as the north limit of the forest of Biez, that is to say, about 2 kilometres beyond Neuve Chappelle. The German artillery is being little used. On the rest of the front there is nothing to report in addition to the communique of last evening."

The Rome correspondent of the Echo says it is believed in Rome that the interview, yesterday, between Prince Van Buelow and Premier Salandra, was secured by the German diplomat, to enable him to offer Austrian concessions of territory as a supreme bid to insure Italy's neutrality. The negotiations indicate how critical the situation is considered by Germany.

Petrograd, March 11—Military experts believe that Przasnyz will be the scene of another great battle. The Germans are hurrying troops there, withdrawing them from Grodno and from the lines in the southwest, where they are abandoning their offensive against the Russians left flank.

The Russkoe Slovo publishes a despatch from the front today, which declares that the German retreat from Augustov has begun to assume the character of a rout.

HIGH SCHOOL YOUTHS TOOK ADVANTAGE OF FOREIGNERS

An argument between two Italians, who didn't know any better, and three North Plainfield boys, who should have a little more common sense, resulted in the subsequent arraignment of the five individuals before Recorder Hand, in the borough police court, this morning. Dominick Geriso, of 803 East Fourth street, and Mauco Andrea, of 423 Sottage place, the two foreigners, were arrested last night; but Robert Hebert and Ronald Conroy, two North Plainfield High School boys, and William Taylor, a North Plainfield High School graduate, were released to appear at the hearing this morning.

In court it developed that the five had become involved in an argument on Somerset street the early part of last evening, the three boys taking up the issue against the two Italians. The fracas waxed warm until one of the foreigners drew a knife after being pushed into the gutter by one of the boys and a wild fight resulted. Chief Weiss arrested the frenzied Italians.

RUNAWAY JUNE, GEO. RANDOLPH CHESTER'S PHOTOPLAY SERIAL MYSTERY, SHOWS FASHIONS

Characters Are Arrayed In the Latest Vogue

Descriptions of Gowns and Hats Worn by "June"

WOMEN theater goers readily acknowledge that for years they have found one of the biggest contributing factors o their pleasure at seeing a new play o be the clothes worn by the actresses. Especially is this true of the society drama, where the gowns are sure to be mportations of the latest styles and here, equally with the gowns, the hats nd the furs, due attention has been iven to the dozens of small accesories that are necessary to the picture he modish woman must present. The exact angle at which to wear the hat, he way the veil is fastened, the kind f hand bag carried, the necklace, hain, earrings and other barbaric ornments in vogue for the moment—ll these are shown by the actress as hey should be worn, and studied carefully by her lay sisters in the audience rom the "bald headed row" to the oof, and copied thereafter as faithfully as may be, according to natural alent and the size of the purse. Even those who have no sartorial ambitions or themselves take a vicarious delight n the lovely clothes worn so gracefully by the women of the stage, and an usually describe them in minutest etail afterward.

Following their custom maintained hroughout their other series of big pictures, the Reliance Company, in "Runaway June," have spared neither care nor expense in costuming the characters of George Randolph Chester's story. With a rare foresight and generosity they have provided lavish wardrobes, not only for the little bride but for all the other women in the cast who might be supposed naturally to wear handsome clothes. Every one can call to mind plays and pictures where the heroine, in addition to having all the other plums, has likewise the only good looking clothes in the company, even though the others are supposed to be her friends and relatives. It is, therefore, very pleasing to view one where all the clothes of all the women are things of beauty and a joy to those who see as well as to those who wear them.

As Runaway June herself Miss Norma Phillips has opportunities for wearing such charming, dainty fripperies as are sure to make her envied by girls all over the country, for just as surely as Judy O'Grady is kin to the wife of the colonel do all pretty girls—and plain ones, too—love pretty things to wear and a chance to wear them.

A tea gown like No. 1 would delight the soul of anything feminine, so delicate is it in its shell-like pinkness. The accordion plaited skirt of crepe de chine falls straight to within an inch of the floor. The little coatee of pink crepe meteor is cut on lines like those of a Chinese girl's coat, and, like hers, is embroidered in pastel shades about the bottom, but it is neither so long nor so primly fastened down the front as is the oriental garment. In fact, although it seems almost like sacrilege to say so, this fashionable little coatee bears a remarkable resemblance to a combing jacket—etherealized, idealized, but unmistakable. However, the effect is quite different.

The armholes are unusually large and corded, the better to display the sleeves of the lace bodice, which are very short and finished with a lace frill. The front of the coatee is cut away squarely so that the lace bodice can be seen, but it fastens just above the waist with a small square tab. The coquettish boudoir cap of lace, with a lace frill, slightly stiffened so that it forms a frame for the face, is decorated with a huge butterfly bow of pink taffeta at the back.

Never did a member of the Rainy Daisies evolve anything that could compare with the practicality of this costume for rainy weather, No. 2, which Miss Phillips designed for herself. In color it is the new putty shade, and in material it is cravenette, and right there are two samples of the good sense of the designer's good ideas.

The skirt is short and moderately narrow, with plaits at each side. The coat is loose, although with nothing of the box effect, with plaits in the skirts and with large patch pockets buttoned on toward the front. The belt, of medium width, also buttons to the coat on either side of the front, and the sleeves carry out the same idea with a band buttoned on at the cuff. The revers are long and wide, and the fastening is quite low. A roll collar of georgette crape gives a bit of relief to the monotone of the suit.

With this is worn an English walking toque of corded velvet in the same putty color as the cravenette and edged with beaver. A veil of nigger brown (tete de negre) is edged with a band of the beaver also. And this veil is one of the newest of the "very latest things," even with those who are always a day or two ahead of themselves. We have had the silk and the velvet band, but the edge of fur seemed to slip by, although why not on veils as well as lace blouses and chiffon gowns? It has come now, however, and is very pretty, too, drawn in tight about the neck, and very cozy as well when the day is raw and damp.

Of course, with a costume casting such defiance to Jupiter Pluvius, an umbrella would be an anachronism, but habits are hard to break, and one must carry something, so there is a very smart swagger stick, all of pigskin, which is made just for that purpose—that the weather defying damsel may put the cachet of "chic" upon her costume.

For an afternoon stroll on a fair day we have the brown satin coat shown in No. 3. This is cut to hang loose across the chest, but is drawn in by a wide sash just below the hips. The skirt falls in two graduated flounces, both banded with the same silver fox fur which forms the wide collar and cuffs. The muff carried is also of the silver fox and is the flat kind with the animal apparently folded over in the middle with a meditative nose resting above the hands, while the long fluffy tail hangs down below. The small round low hat of brown satin has a rim of the same fur at the top of the crown and two large fur balls dangling over the right ear.

The walking costume in No. 4 will commend itself to all pedestrians who want something to fit their peripatetic needs and at the same time be quite correct if they should happen, on their tramp through the park, to meet a socially inclined friend who wished to take them to tea—say, at the Plaza. This one is a happy combination of satin and gabardine of black, but not of a somber hue.

The hoop skirt of satin immediately gives the lie to any suggestion of mournfulness, while the soldier pockets of gabardine and the shoulder straps worked in silver would make a strong appeal to any lass who loves a soldier. A white linen sailor collar embroidered in silver puts in an added touch of youthfulness, while the furs further carry out the scheme of black and white by the use of black seal banded with ermine. The little hat, which is of the tight round variety, is of black satin with a fold of gold cloth around it and two pins with long je knobs stuck in almost at right angle upon either side for its sole ornamentation. Boots are the first consideration with those who love to walk, and the ones belonging to this costume are of black kid and lace at the inner side.

Miss Phillips claims that this is the "only living, absolute and original" "neutral" costume, and as she goes on one is bound to admit the claim, for the coat is English, the skirt is Dutch and the high boots purely Russian while the little round hat is as German as German can be.

In spite of all her troubles and her one great problem, Runaway June surely must feel a surcrease from sorrow when she dons the evening gown herewith presented in No. 5. Built on the lines of a high waisted baby dress this is a very dream of a gown. O pink chiffon over blue, which in its turn covers a layer of lavender laid over pink, with an overdress of opalescent net in a deeply embroidered lace effect, with lacelike scallops at the bottom and up the front, this little frock is as shimmery a rainbow thing as was ever worn by a lucky girl.

Baby puff sleeves that slip off the shoulder down on the arm with an ingenuous air of helplessness are aided in their task of keeping things up by an opalescent band over the shoulder. These are tethered to the top of the bodice by so substantial a thing as a rosebud. The butterfly impression of fluttering delicacy and daintiness is augmented by a large fan of flesh colored ostrich feathers and by silver stockings and slippers.

INTERESTING TALKS AT SPRING MEETING

Northern New Jersey Congregational Association in Session Here Today.

The morning session of the semi-annual meeting of the Northern New Jersey Congregational Association, held at the Congregational church today, was largely attended by delegates from the various churches. Several interesting addresses were features of the meeting which was opened with devotional exercises in charge of Rev. H. M. Prentiss.

Rev. Dr. H. E. Jackson was the first speaker and he took for his subject "A Constructive Statement on the Sabbath Question." Rev. Dr. C. H. Wilson spoke on "Profitable Sundays for Men," and he was followed by Rev. T. Aired Moffatt, who took for his subject "Profitable Sundays for Young People." All of these talks were very interesting and helpful.

A series of short talks on "Successful Evangelism" concluded the morning program. Those who spoke were Rev. H. L. Everett, of Jersey City; Rev. E. N. Pierson, of Jersey City; Rev. W. T. Boult, of Bound Brook; Rev. G. R. Wilson and Rev. Dr. C. S. Mills, of Uper Montclair. The last speaker gave some fine examples of this work that is being done in Montclair. Interdenominational meetings are being held with great success. Services are held in the theatre every Sunday night, and neighborhood meetings have also been popular and helpful.

Luncheon was served at noon by the women of the church. At this afternoon's session the Church Building Society will enter a protest against the plan of consolidation of the seven benevolent organizations of the Congregational Association. The local church is against that consolidation and Rev. Dr. S. L. Loomis will present the subject. There will be several addresses on the question.

SIGMA GAMMA KAPPA GIRLS WILL ENTERTAIN PARENTS

The Sigma Gamma Kappa girls of the North Plainfield High School will give a party for their parents in the Y. W. C. A. parlors Friday night, March 19. The party promises to be a novel one and considerable interest is being manifested in the plans to bring the parents of these young women in a closer touch with the girls' organization.

The club has a membership of fifty at the present time and has been unusually successful. Mrs. Frederick Goddard is at the head of the organization.

THE DANSANT TO BE GIVEN AT PARK CLUB

Under the auspices of and for the benefit of the Pine Mountain Association, a club formed for the purpose of assisting children of the poor white families of Kentucky to gain a better education, a The Dansant will be given at the Park Club Saturday afternoon, April 10, from 3 until 7 o'clock.

Arrangements have been made to have Franuens orchestra, of New York, which played for the last dance for Muhlenberg Hospital. Tea and ices will be served and there will be other features.

FINANCIAL REPORT OF PUBLIC SERVICE

Statement for the Year Issued by President T. N. McCarter.

A report covering the activities of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey and its subsidiary companies for the year 1914, has just been issued by President Thomas N. McCarter. It shows that while the business of the gas, electric and railway companies each made gains over the previous year, the increases were not as large as usual.

The gross operating revenue was $35,924,453.65, against $34,592,473.80 in 1913. The operating expenses and taxes last year amounted to $19,892,708.59.

The bond issues, rentals and miscellaneous interest charges of the operating companies reached a total of $12,097,109.48 and the corporation's interest charges, amortication of debt discount and expense and sinking fund charges for Public Service general mortgage bonds accounted for $3,841,496.44. The net increase in surplus after all charges were met was $1,583,088.68.

"The above figures," writes Mr. McCarter, "demonstrate that the corporation operating under adverse conditions, has had, on the whole and relatively, a successful year. The severe storms of February and March cost the subsidiary companies of the corporation in loss of revenue and added operating expense upwards of $300,000. For four months of the year, in nearly all of its territory, the Gas Company received only 90 cents per thousand cubic feet for its product, as against $1 during the corresponding months of the year before, and during certain months of the year the Gas Company was compelled to pay for oil 1¾ cents per gallon in excess of the amount paid during the corresponding months of the year before. The voluntary raise of trainmen's wages, inaugurated by the railway company January 1, 1914, and commented upon at length in the last report, cost the railway company $200,000. The wage question is now settled upon a permanent basis, which fact has undoubtedly resulted to the railway company's advantage in the matter of permanency and stability of employment."

Statistics are given in the report showing that the railway company's receipt increased 1.11 per cent whereas the normal gain is about five per cent.

Taxes paid during the year amounted to $2,202,554.91, an increase over the 1913 tax bill of $139,573.22. Upwards of $29,000,000 fire insurance was carried at a cost of $102,808.95, an increase in insurance and a decrease in premiums. The Welfare Work of the companies cost $79,793.84 for sick benefits, pensions and life insurance and $63,033.95 for accidents. The latter amount was $9,100 in excess of the requirements of the workmen's compensation act.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

George M. Cohan has made millions laugh with his musical comedies and delightful farces. One of the latter is "Officer 666," which will be shown in picture form at the Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and tonight. Not only does it provide humor, and plenty of it, but there is a plot running through the play that holds the attention of the spectator with breathless interest. If you fail to see this picture, you will be sorry a long time afterward. Coming to the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow and Saturday is the screen version of Hal Cain's masterpiece, "The Christian." The highest salaried producers and the most competent actors and actresses were engaged to transfer the story to the film, an operation requiring nearly two years of constant work. It is in eight thrilling parts, each one making the spectator all the eager for the next. "The Christian" was shown at the Plainfield Theatre on a previous engagement and hundreds were turned away at every performance, so great was the demand for seats. Messrs. Counihan and Shannon were put to great expense to secure its return, but are confident that the moving picture "fans" will make generous response. Remember that popular prices prevail, both matinee and night, and that no picture becomes tiresome when you are seated in the Plainfield Theatre, the most comfortable amusement house in the city. This theatre has the exclusive contract in Plainfield for all first "runs" of Paramount pictures and by watching these columns you can keep posted on the latest and best in the photo-play world.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S NIGHT.

Young people's night is to be observed at Hope chapel next Sunday evening at the hour of the usual evening service, and will be held in connection with the series of special evangelistic sermons being preached by the pastor, Rev. Frederic Greene. Several of the young people's organizations of the chapel will attend in a body. There is at present a strong possibility of young people's night being observed at the chapel once a month.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grape and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

A SILLY FACULTY.

There is no accounting for what some men do. The faculty of the University of Pennsylvania recently prohibited Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, from giving a lecture to five hundred students, in the university building set aside for that purpose, much as Billy Sunday was prevented from speaking on the Princeton campus.

Thinking persons can appreciate that it is necessary to draw the line in allowing persons to express their views but only where the persons who would talk are characterless men or women. Mr. Gompers is not in that class. He is a man of mature age and experience, lawabiding and orderly. His views on labor, which probably caused the faculty to behave in such a silly manner, are well known. But he represents nothing that is not fully countenanced by law and order.

Even the professors of that great seat of learning may learn something from men of the Gompers type. Shutting Mr. Gompers out can only injure the university. The moss-back policy of the faculty is in striking contrast to the broad and liberal spirit that inspired the foundation of the university by Benjamin Franklin and his contemporaries.

The annual report of the Public Service Corporation for the year ending December 31, 1914, has been published and copies sent to the newspapers. It is a complete review of the various activities of the corporation, and describes all the work that has been done. It reviews the gas decision in which the company was given the right to increase its rates from 90 cents to a dollar, after the Public Utilities Commission had decided in the well known Passaic case that the former figure was just, and says that "this decision was vigorously attacked by the counsel of the cities of Paterson and Passaic, aided by the counsel of the Public Utility Commissioners, and by manufactured clamor in the newspapers." The later reference may be true but the so-called "clamor" was manufactured by an insistent demand of the whole people of the state, and it shows conclusively that no corporation controls the press of New Jersey. It's a pleasure for any newspaper to take the part which the corporation sneers at in an affair of this kind.

Complaint has come to the Daily Press of the practise adopted by some people of going from house to house to beg money for churches and similar causes. The plan has become quite general, especially in the evenings, when there is not much chance of the police observing those who do it. Of course such begging is done for organizations which have little or no standing in the community and there is no way in which a householder can tell whether the person asking aid is a legitimate solicitor, or one who is taking advantage of the opportunity to originate a fake cause. This practise is a hard one for the police to stop, and the only way to effectively break it up is for the householders to refuse to give. If anyone believes that the person seeking funds is an impostor it is his or her duty to phone the police, who will investigate the merits of all claims. A citizen who fails to do this is not aiding the authorities, who are only too willing to prevent fakirs from working in this city. All that Chief Kiely and his men need to wipe out these nuisances is a little help from the people approached.

We offer a prize of a large red apple and two peanuts for the person who comes nearest to guessing when the new Nott fire engine will be placed in commission. Blanks for guesses will be found on page 19 in the third section of today's paper.

The price of bread has dropped, although there has been no material reduction in the price of flour. The bakers who raised rates evidently found that their business fell off so that they were compelled to restore the old figures.

The Saturday editorial will be from the pen (or typewriter) of a comparative newcomer to Plainfield, who has made many friends since he arrived to take an important educational position here.

The tribute paid to Albert L. Force by the speakers at his funeral yesterday was only seconded by the large number of friends who gathered to honor his memory.

Now Mexico City is demanding food from the United States. Truly if the demand keeps up, this country will literally be feeding the world.

It's hard to decide whether the pest who comes in and swipes the exchanges or the fellow who wants us to print poetry is the worst nuisance.

The baseball fan will soon be in his glory, and the movie fan will have to take second place until the fall winds begin to blow.

Will some psychologist tell us why an auction sale attracts so many of the morbidly curious?

Rev. Billy Sunday seems to have rattled a few dried bones in Princeton.

FINAL TRIBUTE TO A. L. FORCE

life, but also in his business, never flinching and never allowing anything to interfere with his customary devotion. Trinity church to him was a second home, he said, and almost daily he visited the edifice for meditation and prayer. Within its walls he wrote personal letters to friends and composed editorials that were printed in his paper for the good of the community. It was through him that Plainfield publications began devoting unlimited space to the cause of Christianity and which has meant so much for the uplift of the church as a whole.

"Mr. Force was not without his faults," said Mr. Broek, "but he recognized them. More than once he remarked to himself, 'by the grace of God I am what I am;' nevertheless his virtues were in the foreground and they will ever remain with us as a pleasant memory. The beautiful organ which we have in this church will stand as a monument to his devotion and though at this time I cannot enter into the secrets of his private life, I doubt if there is a home in the city where the family circle is dearer than it was to him."

Mr. Broek was followed by Dr. Johnson, who endorsed the remarks of his predecessor and then spoke of Mr. Force as he had known him intimately for nine years. He referred to the conscientiousness of the man, both in his home and out of it and expressed great regret at the departure of one who had meant so much to the religious advancement of the city. Dr. Johnson closed with a heartfelt prayer.

At the conclusion of the simple service the casket was opened and all viewed the familiar face for the last time. The body was then borne from the church by six men who had been close to him in the work of Trinity Reformed church, four of them elders and the other two deacons. These were Frederick E. Smith, Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., Alfred K. Willett, H. E. Gayle, Edgar F. Sheppard and William F. Oliver. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, among them being set pieces from Jerusalem Lodge of Masons, Plainfield Lodge, Royal Arcanum, the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church, and the management and employes of the Daily Press.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery beside the body of his beloved wife who died on December 31, 1909.

White, a member of the Plainfield Recreation Committee, and who is a New York lawyer, will speak to the members of the public speaking and elocution class tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Stillman School. Mr. White will tell of some of his experiences and the necessity and advantage of having good presentation of speech in business.

The dancing class, which has been organized for the benefit of the salesmen and saleswomen of local stores, who cannot attend the Saturday night dances, will be held in the Franklin School tomorrow night. A cordial invitation is extended to clerks to attend these dances.

VOTE SHOWS GAIN BY MANY GIRLS

Enthusiasm and Interest of Workers in Tour Contest Shown by Standing.

MANY PARTICIPANTS

List Has Grown With Each Day But There is Still Plenty of Room for More—Campaign Managers Join in Vote Hunt.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Candidates and their friends must see that single ballots, (those cut from the paper) are tied or fastened together in some way before they are deposited in the ballot box. Loose ballots are liable to get misplaced and the candidate for whom they were intended might not get credit for them. It is not necessary to write the candidate's name on each ballot if the above is carried out; the name on the top ballot in a package will be sufficient.

On another page the vote standings of the candidates appear today. The votes included in the figures represented are all those which were deposited in the ballot box at the Contest Department up to 6 o'clock Tuesday night.

The next announcement of the vote standing of the candidates will be published in the Press on Monday. All votes to be counted in that list must be in the ballot box at the Contest Department tomorrow evening by 8 o'clock. Be sure to bring or send in all the votes and subscriptions which you wish to have counted in Monday's list, so that they will be in early enough to be counted.

The air is laden with talk of the Transcontinental and Panama-Pacific Exposition Tour contest.

The prospects of the different candidates are discussed times without number throughout the three districts which are embraced in the contest territory. It is infectious. It is not necessary to hear it heralded from the housetops.

Votes, subscriptions, districts, candidates, ballots, are now the subjects of discussion in retaurants, theatres, street cars and every place where a number of people assemble.

And these are not the only places where the story of vote-getters is being told. Many other places may be mentioned.

The interest and enthusiasm has been keyed to the highest point.

Every store in every town where there is a candidate is working for her.

Traveling men are carrying the news of the contest over their territories.

Right Down to Business.

Then there is the real campaign manager for the candidates. Not less than four of them visited the office of the Transcontinental Tour department yesterday. They came in and deposited their votes for their candidates. They look no different than other people, but when the votes are counted, the effective work they have done is apparent. The campaign of the candidates in the several districts is being managed by some popular man who is selected to work for the candidate determined to go on the 23-day tour across the continent, and to the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He has mapped out a plan of action for his candidate, and has named his different lieutenants. Under his direction every possible prospect for securing votes is canvassed and recanvassed, much the same as before election. The campaign manager sees that his candidate appears prominently among the vote-getters of her district, that every possible vote is secured, and, as the result of the combined efforts of the candidates and their managers, the battle of votes will soon be on in earnest. All the strong candidates are not enrolled yet by any means.

The much-sought ballot continues to flit across the miles of space to the Transcontinental and Panama-Pacific Exposition Tour Department, and the activity of the vote-getters in the outlying districts is becoming each day more evident.

There are votes being secured by those enrolled which would probably be much more gladly given to the hesitating ones.

Wasted opportunities are life's greatest regrets. Enroll now if your name is not among the voters in the list. There is still time.

Next Count of Ballots.

The votest received at the contest department up to 8 o'clock March 12, will be counted for the vote standing of candidates which will appear Monday. All votes received at the tour department after 8 o'clock tomorrow night will not appear until the next publication, Thursday, March 18.

Everyone Wins.

CHARGE AGAINST PASTOR

"I am innocent of this,' said the pastor, "It is true that the girl was in my employ, but I never wanted her in my house. I disliked her from the start, as my wife will tell you. I will be thoroughly vindicated."

He further declares he always found the girl untruthful and disrespectful, and he kept her as long as he did only at the request of his wife.

Mrs. Allen, wife of the South Plainfield pastor, when interviewed by a Press reporter, admitted that her husband and she both knew the girl but she further stated that the acquaintance of her husband with the Jersey City minister was only a casual one and that he knew him only as being one of the profession.

DR. WELLS HONORED

officer and toastmaster. At the completion of the elaborate course dinner, Dr. Wells was addressed by Dr. William E. Stelle in a congratulatory vein and then presented with a diamond and pearl stickpin and a magnificent bunch of fifty sunburst roses, the gift of the craft in Plainfield. In making the presentation Dr. Stelle spoke as follows:

"Fifty years ago this month was begun the practice of dentistry by Dr. Frank S. Wells and during all these fifty years he has practised with honor to himself and the profession; his efforts ever have been untiring and untiring. Dr. Wells fortunately believes the wealthiest are not the happiest, and cares much for a healthy brain and strong body. He has made a kind, loving husband, father and friend. Many times he has helped less fortunate people by his kind words and hard earned cash. As a preceptor to theose who have been trained by him, his patient, careful conscientious efforts have been a fine example. On his left hand is a wound received in the performance of his duty to his country while a soldier in the Union forces in the sixties."

In conclusion the wish was expressed by the speaker that the golden years of his life and practice might be the happiest and best of all and that his cup might be full to the rim and overflowing.

Dr. Frank T. Clawson, who also was associated with Dr. Wells for eighteen years, spoke of his charming and admirable qualities. He has named a son after him.

Dr. Whitford and Dr. Leonard told of great respect felt for Dr. Wells. Dr. Seymour was the essayist of the evening and gave an interesting talk and demonstration on "Mechanical Dentistry." The business meeting of the dental society followed attended by sixteen members, and to each one Dr. Wells expressed the wish that they might be as well after fifty years of practice as he is.

Dr. Frank S. Wells was born at DeRuyter, Madison county, New York, on September 18, 1842. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in the First United States Sharpshooters, a special regiment organized in New York city by Col. Hiram Burdan. Soon after the surrender at Appomattox the young soldier came to Plainfield and on March 1, 1865, began the study of dentistry. In those days there was no State supervision of the profession and it was learned by associating with someone versed in the work or by taking a superficial course in the New York College of Dentistry. Dr. Wells began his apprenticeship with the late Dr. Charles H. Stillman, who was proficient in dental work as well as medical surgery. After remaining with him a year and a half he studied for two years in the New York College, leaving the class before graduation owing to unfair methods permitted in the giving of examinations to pupils absolutely devoid of practical knowledge. He opened an office on West Front street, in a part of the Coriell residence, at present the site of the Andrew Love building. It was owned by the father of W. W. Coriell, of Lincoln place. Four years later Dr. Wells removed his chair to the then pretentious Stillman building on the opposite side of the street. He remained there until 1879 when he removed to his present location, 517 Central avenue, which he has maintained continuously for nearly thirty-six years. He is still practicing active dentistry there at the age of 73 years, a record seldom recorded in the annals of the profession.

Dr. Wells has taught the rudiments of dentistry to many practicing surgeons, among them Dr. E. Stillman Bailey, Dean of the Hahneman University, Chicago, one of the most prominent medical surgeons in the middle west. Dr. Bailey was his first student; Dr. William E. Stelle was his second; his brother, the late Frederick J. Wells, who died about twenty-five years ago, was the third, and Dr. Frank T. Clawson was the fourth. Dr. Wells is a member of the New York Commandery, Military Order Loyal Legion and an active member of the Seventh-day Baptist church.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

People who visited Proctor's Theatre during the first three days of this week are unanimous in their opinion that the lecture on "Mexico," by Hon. Francis P. Bent, is one of the most instructive and entertaining ever given in this city. The beautiful illustrations were made from photographs taken with Mr. Bent's own camera and his style of telling about them is original with himself. Beginning with today, Mr. Bent will give a travelogue on "Alaska," the territory that is part of the United States, but which most of its inhabitants know little about. He spent many years in this virile country, studying its business and manufacturing sections, and secured the finest collection of views ever displayed. When Mr. Bent finishes telling about Sitka, the Klondyke and the places made famous by Rex. Beach and Jack London, the auditors begin to realize what a wonderful country Alaska is. The "Sub-Rosa" humor which Mr. Bent injects in his talks produces laughs at the right time and prevents any suspension of dryness in the lecture, the condition that generally exists in the lectures of the average traveler. The title of "Hon." is affixed to Mr. Bent's name from the fact that while he was vice-chairman of the Board of Aldermen of New York, Mayor W. J. Gaynor and Chairman Mitchell were called from the city, leaving him the active Mayor of the Metropolis for several days.

Swimming News and Notes

Written for the Daily Press by

LOUIS P. HANSEN.

Two intercollegiate swimming records were broken on Friday last at the championships held in the Yale natatorium in New Haven. The Yale team won the point trophy by securing 16 points as against 15 for Pennsylvania and 10 for Columbia.

The bright individual star of the evening proved to be Hal Vollmer, of the Columbia swimming team, [illegible] the 100-yard and fur- [illegible] establishing new inter- [illegible] for both distances, negotiating the former in 58 1-5 seconds, and the latter in 2 minutes 32 4-5 seconds. Shryock, of Pennsylvania, was Vollmer's closest rival, securing second place in the 50, 100 and furlong swims.

Hoadley, of Yale, captured the 50-yard swim in the fast time of 26 1-5 seconds.

The fancy diving contest proved to be a struggle between McAleenan, of Yale, and Frissell, of Princeton, the former winning out by a little more than one point.

The plunge for distance went to Shoemaker, of Pennsylvania, with a distance of 69 feet 8 inches.

The Brookline High School swimmers have again proved their superiority over all other high school swimmers by carrying off the honors in the interscholastic championships held in the natatorium of the New York Athletic Club last Saturday evening.

Handy proved to be the star of the evening by winning the century and furlong swims, proving conclusively that he has no superiors among the high school swimmers at either distance. He created new figures for the furlong swim, covering the distance in 2 minutes 36 2-5 seconds, which is two-fifths of a second better than the time he made at the recent Princeton championships held last month. In the century swim his time was not as fast, it being only 1 minute 2 4-5 seconds, but, taking everything into consideration, it was good time for the slow N. Y. A. C.'s pool.

The fifty-yard swim went to Prendergast, of Brookline; Untersee, Brookline, second; time, 26 4-5 seconds.

The fancy diving contest was won by Clifford Parker, DeWitt Clinton High School, Robert Galbraith, Commerce, being second.

The 200-yard relay race was won by the Brookline swimmers, covering the distance in 1 minute 48 3-5 seconds, Lawrenceville School, securing second place.

The plunge for distance was won by Giebel, Stuyvesant High School, with a distance of 67 feet.

The National 500-yard swimming championship has been allotted by the A. A. U. authorities to the New York Athletic Club, and will be competed for on March 26. Harry Hebner and Perry McGillivray, of the Illinois A. C., have already promised their entries, and a great contest is anticipated between the pair and the young local stars, Joe Wheatley and Hal Vollmer.

F. B. Willis, of Ocean City, holder of the American plunging record of 80 feet, has been training for the championship contest and is in great form. He has lost none of his skill and threatens to again capture the supreme title.

The interscholastic swimming championships of greater New York will be held in the natatorium of City College on Friday evening, and we may see some of the local records go by the boards. There are a number of the local lads who are evenly matched for all distances and many a good contest is anticipated.

The New England authorities have awarded the district championships to the Brookline G. A. A., and they will be held on March 23. The titles at stake are: 50, 100, 220 and 500 yard free style swims, 150-yard back stroke, 200-yard breast stroke, 400-yard relay race, plunge and fancy dive. The 220-yard national championship has also been awarded to the Brookline G. A. A.

Arthur Raithel, of the Illinois A. C., won the fifty-yard national championship swimming contest held in the club's natatorium last Thursday night. He broke the American 40-yard swimming record, establishing 18 4-5 seconds for the distance as against the former record of 19 seconds. His time for the 50 yards was 24 1-5 seconds.

"Bud" Goodwin, the veteran swimmer of the New York A. C., has started in training for the Panama-Pacific Exposition games to be held in the Sutro Baths, San Francisco, during July. "Bud" has his eye on the American one-mile record, and if he succeeds in breaking it it is his intention of retiring from the game after having been in competition for eighteen years and a champion for fourteen. Some record to be proud of.

TIME CHANGED FOR SECOND P. H. S.-Y. M. C. A. BATTLE

Because of the several activities that are scheduled to take place in the city and borough on Saturday night, the managers of the Plainfield High School and Y. M. C. A. basketball teams have decided to play the second game for the city title and The Ritz trophy Saturday afternoon, the game commencing at 3:45 o'clock.

This will give all those who are interested in the two teams a chance to see the game which will be the association team's last chance to stay in the running for the city honor. The High School players used the association floor for a short time this afternoon.

TWO GOOD GAMES.

Two interesting games will be staged on the Columbus Club court tonight, when the Columbus Five will line-up against the St. Joseph boys in the first game for the Catholic championship. Several new faces will be seen in the line-up of the former aggregation and a lively contest is anticipated. The Plainfield Five feminine team will take the floor against the Newark Public Service lassies.

GOT START THROUGH ANOTHER'S BAD LUCK

George Burns.

George Burns, the star outfielder and hitter of the New York Giants, was forced into the limelight of professional baseball through the misfortune of another professional baseball player, one who is well-known in these parts, having performed on Crescent Oval during the years when the old Central New Jersey League was in its prime. The unfortunate one was none other than Louis Hartman, who held down the shortstop position for the Pets during that series several years ago. While in the local league, Hartman was a shining light and his work in the shortfield was the cause of much comment.

After he became too fast for the "bush" leagues of this section of the country, Hartman signed up with the Utica club, of the New York State League, and played shortstop in the season of 1911. Burns was about to be released by the manager of the Utica team when one day Hartman broke his leg in the second inning of a game. After making several shifts the manager found himself short of men and put Burns in right field with the understanding that he was to be paid off and released after the game. Burns had plenty to do during the seven innings he played and he did it so well that he was retained until the end of the season. Since that time he has been a natural star and now has a comfortable position.

Had Hartman not been injured in that game Burns would now probably be working at the cigar business in St. John's, New York, which he left to play with the Utica team.

FRANK BRUGGY IS NOW A FULL FLEDGED BOSTONIAN

Frank Bruggy, the Elizabeth ballplayer, who was at one time a member of the Plainfield Pets, is now a full-fledged member of the world's champion Boston Braves. Bruggy is with the Stallings outfit at Macon, Ga., and is reported to have made a favorable impression on the Big Chief by his batting and backstopping. His throwing to bases has also made a hit with Stallings, although the former is not yet throwing in his best form.

Frank was drafted by the Rochester International League Club from Lawrence of the New England League, where the Betsytown boy was the sensation. The Hustlers turned him over to the Braves, where he is battling with Bert Whaling for the position of understudy to Hank Gowdy, the world's series hero. Bruggy is well-known as a baseball and basketball player. He played with the Ironsides for a season or two, and also played on the courts with some of the leading quintets in the city and State.

SCHNEIDER LEAL CAPTAIN.

Lawrence Schneider was elected captain of the Leal School basketball team for next season at a meeting of the team held yesterday. Schneider played center on the team this year and will undoubtedly make a good leader. The manager for next year will be elected today or tomorrow.

N. P. H. S. WILL LOSE TWO OF ITS STARS

June Graduation Will Deprive Boroughites of Good Players.

Two members of the North Plainfield High School basketball team which finished its season last Saturday with a victory over its bitterest rival, P. H. S., participated in their last scholastic court contest. Next year their names will not appear on the student roster. Captain "Hymie" Abrams and "Duke" Van Mater, who have taken part in every game on the schedule, will be among the missing when the first call is issued for candidates next fall. Their absence will leave a guard and the pivot position vacant.

Both Abrams and Van Mater have been hard and earnest workers for the team's success this year and they will be greatly missed. Captain Abrams has been a most able leader and while his team failed to retain interscholastic honors the season was a very creditable one to say the least. Hyman filled one of the guard positions while Van Mater's work in center aided greatly in pushing the ball toward North Plainfield's goal. These two players have been on the first team for the past two years and in 1912-13 were first string substitutes. Abrams is the possessor of one interscholastic medal while Van Mater has both a city and county award.

The absence of these two players will undoubtedly weaken the team, but the outlook for next year's representative five is very bright. Bob Hebert, "Ronny" Conroy and "Wren" Townley are the regulars who will strive next season to regain lost laurels while "Pete" Van Mater and Harold Lunger come to the fore as likely candidates for "regular" berths. Conroy and Townley will be in the race for the captaincy of the team and no matter what the choice of the squad may be a good man will be chosen. The election of a leader will take place in the near future.

ELIZABETH QUINTET TROUNCED BY LOCALS

Y. M. H. A. Five From the County Seat Not Yet the State Champions.

The State championship aspirations of the Elizabeth Y. M. H. A. were shattered to smithereens last night when the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basketball team walloped the Betsytowners to the tune of 38 to 22, on the local T. A. B. court. The visitors were not in the running for the decision at any time, getting only four points in the initial period. They were constantly disputing the decisions handed out by the local officials, which slowed the game up considerably.

Having been defeated in the first game of the season by this team at Elizabeth, the Plainfielders were out for the verdict and played their best. Rosenson and Cantor were the main scorers while Hirsch made six points. The score at the end of the first half was 13 to 4. In the final period the locals out-scored their rivals by seven tallies. Another game will have to be played before any title can be claimed.

"PRELIM" GAME A RED-HOT STRUGGLE

P. H. S. Second String Men Trimmed Borough Reserves Yesterday Afternoon.

The Plainfield High School second basketball team won an exciting game, yesterday afternoon, in Saengerbund Hall, at the expense of the North Plainfield High School seconds with a final score of 37 to 24. The game was played as a preliminary to the N. P. H. S.-P. H. S. girls' game.

Both sides displayed some fine team work and passing, but the North Plainfield delegation seemed to work in spurts, allowing their opponents to score many baskets that could have easily been blocked.

In the opening session of the contest, Plainfield had no trouble in outscoring its opponents, the N. P. H. S. forwards missing many shots. In the second period, however, the scoring was more even and at one time the losers were within a few points of the opposing delegation.

N. P. H. S. GIRLS' PROFITS AMOUNTED TO FIFTY CENTS

With the victory over Plainfield High School, yesterday afternoon, North Plainfield tied for third place in the city interscholastic championship series, the final game of which will probably be played in the Y. M. C. A. on Friday afternoon, March 19. The first game resulted in a one point decision in favor the Plainfield girls and while yesterday's contest had a wider margin of defeat for the locals they put up a hard game. The Y. M. C. A. is a well chosen court for the third game, both teams being familiar with and having formerly played on the association floor.

A meeting of the managers and coaches of the two quintets will soon be called when definite arrangements will be made for the third game. There is a probability of a third referee being secured for the final contest, as many voiced disapproval in yesterday's contest of the decisions of the new official.

At the game played yesterday afternoon the total receipts amounted to twenty-three dollars. One half of this amount went to Plainfield and the game was a financial failure to the boroughites, although a great success from the scoring standpoint. The official, who came from New York, took back eleven dollars of the boroughites cash and eleven from one half of twenty-three leaves something, but not much.

BOROUGH FEMININE TEAM ASSERTED ITS SUPERIORITY IN SECOND LEAGUE GAME

Crumbling like so much parchment before the strong attack launched by North Plainfield High School feminine forces, the girls from the city High School were treated to their bumps in the second Interscholastic League meeting of the season, yesterday afternoon, and when the final whistle chirped they clutched the minus end of a 24 to 18 count. The battle waged yesterday on the Saengerbund Hall court was in many respects a replica of the initial clash, except that North Plainfield held the upper hand from an early period. Unfamiliarity with the playing floor and their slip from form since the first encounter made the Plainfield schoolgirls easy prey for the smooth going borough machine and after the home squad once asserted itself all efforts to again grasp the lead proved futile on the part of the red and blue.

An early lead indicated that the P. H. S. battlers were out to give the North Plainfielders another dose of defeat, but after seven minutes of play the boroughites snatched a commanding lead which they never relinquished. As in the previous combat the team on the shorter end launched a flashy spurt with the idea of heading off the pace setter near the climax, but on this occasion the splurge proved unsuccessful. In the first tilt, Plainfield was satisfied to run a second until the final few minutes and then shot to the fore, tying the score a second or two before the final time was called. An overtime period resulted in a tally for the locals and the subsequent downfall of the North Plainfielders who had ruled favorite during the early stages. Yesterday afternoon Plainfield again exhibited these same cunning tactics, but when the final rally was called for it was not sufficiently strong to overcome the boroughites' lead.

On the whole the two teams performed in a real championship fashion, but Plainfield was hardly up to the standard established in the first encounter. On the other hand North Plainfield appeared to be at its best and some phenomenal tallying and tactful guarding put away the victory. The Misses Burtis and Spencer proved towers of offensive strength to the winning combination and their versatile exhibition of the feminine court pastime was probably the best seen in some years here. Miss Crane and Miss Morris were conspicuous in the scoring line for Plainfield, the latter being especially adept at foul shooting.

Yesterday's tilt was refereed by Ed. Thorp, the well-known intercollegiate official. Despite the fact that this was his second attempt at dealing out feminine decisions his work was up to par and few kicks were registered. Thorp makes a specialty of male basketball, having refereed fifty-seven combats this year.

At half time the decision favored North Plainfield by a 12 to 9 margin despite the fact that the Plainfielders had held the upper hand during seven out of the fifteen minutes. Soon after the second period was ushered in the North Plainfielders staged a winning pace of the steady variety and soon demonstrated the fact that they were really entitled to the verdict.

The result of yesterday's engagement makes a third encounter necessary and it is expected that the two managers will get together today to talk over arrangements for the final tilt.

RUNAWAY JUNE

NINTH EPISODE

Kidnaped

CHAPTER I.

FROM his concealment amid the shrubbery Ned Warner rose to rush forward as the brilliantly lighted limousine, with its gay party of five, swept down the drive of the Villard home. His eyes were burning, he was breathing heavily, and his fingers were curved like claws, for in a moment more he intended to grapple by the throat the black Vandyked face beat smilingly over Ned's lovely runaway bride.

At that instant three shadowy figures sprang also from amid the shrubbery, two men and a woman. There was no outcry and scarcely any struggle. Ned Warner found himself suddenly seized from behind, a rough sleeve across his mouth, his arms pinioned.

He was lifted bodily and thrown as Gilbert Blye, with the grace and gallantry only possible to a polished man of the world, assisted the radiant June Warner from his luxurious limousine.

The deserted groom, his head still held in a viselike grip and his mouth stopped, saw his bride enter the house, surrounded by the gay group, the darkly handsome Blye on one side and the white mustached Orin Cunningham on the other.

It was Marie who made the gag to slip in Ned's mouth. Then Marie slipped back of the house.

The two men, one apparently a chauffeur, referred to as Henri, and the other a gardener, picked Ned up and followed her. As they passed the brightly lighted library Ned saw June's collie greet her with the height of canine joy, saw Cunningham and Blye making friends with the dog, then saw the twinkling eyed Cunningham sit in a cozy corner with June and begin an animated tete-a-tete.

The chauffeur and the gardener shrank back in among the bushes with their helpless burden.

There came a high powered racer whizzing down the drive. The man let himself in with a latchkey and, with his hands in his pockets, strolled nonchalantly into the parlor.

Mrs. Villard, talking with Gilbert Blye and Tommy Thomas, turned, and as she saw the newcomer her eyes widened imperceptibly, and a look of concern flashed down across her gentle countenance.

"Well, Bert, you're a surprise," she said.

"That's my best trick," he drawled, kissing Mrs. Villard perfunctorily. "Hello, Tommy! Howdy do, Blye?"

Villard was impressed as his eyes fell upon the fresh beauty of June.

"Mr. Villard, Mrs. Warner." The introduction was very cold, and again that concern flickered for a moment on Mrs. Villard's face as she saw her husband's eager interest. "My companion," she added, and Cunningham and Tommy Thomas, glancing at each other, smiled.

With a careless nod to Cunningham, Villard walked over to June and, taking her hand, held it while he smiled down at her with such obvious admiration that the helpless bound and gagged man beyond the library window lurched free from his captors and tugged at his bonds until they almost cut into his wrists.

Marie came back from the corner and motioned. The chauffeur and the gardener followed with the husband of the beautiful young girl, who was then smiling her courteous responses to the dissolute Bert Villard.

Marie sped quickly across the shadowy back lawn to the garage and opened the door.

"He's not to talk, and he's not to come near the house" she whispered as the men passed her with their burden. She caught Ned's indignant eyes fixed on her, and that glare threw her into a panic. "Whatever you do, don't hurt him!" she hastily added. "Don't hurt him!"

Outside the door Marie paused. Her eyes were distended until they were perfectly round, and her high cheek bones gleamed white. She put the knuckles of her right hand against her teeth and looked over at the garage. She pulled at the lobe of her ear with her left hand and looked in the house. She started back, and she started forward, and she turned around in a half circle. She was well nigh distracted with the weight of her great secret, was Marie. If she told Miss Junie that Mr. Ned was in the garage there'd be an end of everything, and maybe it would be all for the best, or Miss Junie might run away again from such comfortable surroundings, and it would be all for the worse. Marie sat down and pulled her thumb; then she jumped up and pulled the other thumb. The piano began a succession of silvery notes. June, and over her bent the inordinately tall Villard.

"Well!" said the gardener in the dimness of the garage, and he brushed his arms. It was all the rest they needed.

He turned ponderously toward their captive, whom they had deposited in a corner on a bench.

The gardener's one word was a question, an exclamation of relief and an expression of complete and thorough bewilderment. He was a broad Swede, and his arms hung crooked with muscles.

"I know nothing," laughed the wiry little chauffeur. He was a Frenchman with an infinitesimal mustache and a quick eye and a childlike joy in everything. "The maid of the charming mademoiselle telephones from the pantry to the garage that there is a man near the hedge who must not come near mademoiselle, who must not speak, to whom nothing must be said and all must be prompt! Voila! I am Henri, and all of action. I call my friend Jens."

And he tapped the huge Swede approvingly on the chest. "I bring my friend Jens swiftly by the mere force of my enthusiasm. We glide through the bushes so, like a snake. No!" He laughed and smote his friend Jens on the wide chest. "Like a snake and a bull. We creep up behind the interloper. We pounce upon him so, like a cat. No! Like a cat and a hippopotamus. We bear him to the earth, Mademoiselle trips lightly from her car, a vision, a dream, a ravishment!"

And he wafted a kiss to the general abstract of beauty. "The charming mademoiselle is safe. The interloper is here. Voila!"

Wide Jens reached his hand into his pocket for a pipe and glanced over to where Ned sat quietly in the corner.

"Well!" he said.

"Wait," replied Henri. "I shall sit here placidly. I shall smoke a cigarette—perhaps two. I shall think."

Ned Warner stirred impatiently. He gave another tug at the ropes which bound his wrist, but it was only an involuntary test. He must rest before he made another determined attempt to free himself.

He gave a sudden wrench at his bonds, struggling so fiercely to loosen them that he rose and reeled toward the door.

Huge Jens Janssen stopped Ned from falling.

The chauffeur laughed, and, springing from his seat in the touring car, he jumped up, cracked his heels together and snapped the fingers of both hands. "I have the grand plan to dispose of our friend the interloper. We shall teach him a ride of joy!" He pointed to a car.

Jens Janssen stooped and circled one arm around Ned Warner's middle and deposited his violent load in the tonneau.

Marie in the pantry hall stood wringing a corner of her dainty little lace apron. Then she dashed back into the servants' hall and folded her arms tightly upon the hollow at her waist. She dared not leave Mr. Ned where he was. She dared not do anything, and yet she must. She burst out of the rear door, was across the porch in two strides, down the steps in one jump and went swishing for the garage. As she came the touring car shot from the opposite door and went whizzing up the drive, Henri in front and in the tonneau Ned and huge Jens Janssen.

ABSINTHE GREEN TAFFETA.

Green taffeta of a particularly soft and beautiful texture served for skirt, tunic and girdle of a frock displayed by a modish house as an exclusive design. The bodice was nothing more than a blouse of chiffon cut on the lines of a plain shirtwaist, the sleeves being part of the blouse and the "V" neck finished with a frill of chiffon to soften. The cuffs are of embroidered chiffon. The girdle is of crushed taffeta drawn down into an oval buckle of pearl to display a broad band of rich embroidery in harmonizing tones. The tunic has a novel finish at the bottom, where it is draped under little tabs of the material.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Do you see that white house with two porches in a big yard? It's the second from the corner."

Dick indicated the house to Nell as they picked their way across the muddy street, trying to use footprints of former passers-by.

"The one with the two big trees in the yard?" asked Nell.

"That's the shell of our future home," announced her husband, stooping to pull on a rubber.

"How big it is!" Nell stood staring at the house, waiting for Dick to catch up with her. "Our furniture will be lost in there."

"We shall enjoy spreading out. We can gradually add furniture. I intend to make a lawn."

"Make a lawn!" echoed Nell. "It looks as if there were grass there now."

"There is grass, but the people here have their yards mowed with a scythe a couple of times in a season, or pasture animals on them to keep them down. I shall have to even up the yard in order to run a mower over it."

"Those trees will make a lovely shade for a hammock, and I can have some flowers." They had stopped in front of the house and Nell was leaning against the fence.

"Is that a well back there?" Her tone was full of surprise.

"Alas, yes. We shall have primitive conditions, all right. Didn't you notice the washbowl and pitcher in the hotel?"

"Yes, but I thought there must be waterworks of some sort."

"You see, Nell, it's a very little place. The only business here is the Scott-Frazee manufacturing plant. They employ about a thousand men. Those buildings over there are the works." He pointed to a group half a mile away. "The two owners have country residences near here and spend part of the year in them. Then Mr. Parsons and a few professional men and some merchants make up the rest of the census.

"Come, we must be going. Mr. Parsons lives in the big gray house with the avenue of trees."

"That's a lovely place. There is another good house a little beyond. Who lives there?"

"The doctor, I believe. We are in the only livable part of town," said Dick as they turned in at the gate.

Mrs. Parsons saw them coming up the drive and was at the door to meet them.

"Come right in," she said cordially. "I knew you would enjoy an informal family dinner better than eating at that impossible hotel; besides, we are to be friends, and the sooner we begin the better."

Nell's heart went out to the sweet-faced woman in a dainty house dress. "These are my little folks," she continued, leading two pretty children to Nell. "Mr. Parsons will be done soon, but I shall have to be excused to get dinner on the table. I have no maid now, the question of help is a problem in Fairport," and she left the room.

Nell led the children over to the chair by the long, low window facing the drive, and as she passed Dick she whispered: "She will be an invaluable friend in a place like this. How rich I feel!"

"How are you, Morton? Glad you've come." Nell turned and was presented to Mr. Parsons, a short, dark man with a serious but kindly face. At this moment the doors were opened into the dining room. "Dinner is served," said the hostess.

Household Hints

WORTH KNOWING

Instead of frying sausage that is stuffed in skins, bake it. Wash it, prick skins, put in pan, cook in hot oven.

Waterproof Leggings—Take an old raincoat, cut out leggings, line and bind all edges with black goods. For buttons up the side take buttons off of old shoes. Make buttonholes same as always. Then take a piece of elastic, fasten where instep is and you have a pair of leggings which will be comfort to the children.

To Freshen Salt Fish—Take four or five fish for a family of four. Scrape, wash and put to soak in pan of water; let soak for at least a day and night, changing water at least three times. When ready to cook scrape all meat from skin, add to meat one egg, teaspoon sugar, dash of pepper, two tablespoons flour, one tablespoon fine corn meal, one tablespoon thick cream. Mix all together. Have skillet hot with plenty of fresh drippings or lard and fry. Make into cakes, having removed all the large bones, you have a good substitute for meat and a cheap one, too, as ten cents' worth makes a meal. These are the lake fish grocers buy in kegs.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

Remedy for Croup in One Minute—This remedy is simply alum. Take knife or grater, shave or grate off in small particles about a teaspoonful of alum. Mix it with about twice its quantity of sugar to make it palatable. Administer quickly as possible. Almost instantaneous relief will be afforded.

For Tender or Sweaty Feet—Use warm salt water; half cup salt to a gallon of water. Feet will soon be well.

For Constipation—Take one pound each of dates, prunes, figs and raisins, and one ounce senna leaves. Mix and put through food chopper. Dose: Piece size of hickorynut. This packed into a fruit jar will keep any length of time.

For Colds—One-half cup goose grease, teaspoon ammonia, teaspoon turpentine, teaspoon kerosene oil, teaspoon camphor. Mix well; apply on throat and chest. Cover with warm woolen cloth.

LEFTOVER RICE

Fried Rice—Beat whites and yolks of three eggs separately, mix thoroughly with cold rice, mixing whites last. Fry in plenty of equal parts of bacon grease and butter a rich brown, then turn and fry. Serve hot.

Rice Muffins—One cup cold rice, half cup white flour, one teaspoon salt and two of baking powder. Rub rice into other ingredients with tips of fingers, then stir in two tablespoons melted butter, a well-beaten egg and milk to mix (about 1½ cups). Bake in hot oven.

Rice Custard—Into 1½ pints milk add cold rice; beat yolks of three eggs, add three tablespoons sugar, piece butter size of walnut, pinch salt, teaspoon vanilla; add to milk and rice; last, add well-beaten whites of eggs. Bake in slow oven thirty minutes.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Illness of Clarence Crab.

For days and days young Clarence Crab, who lived down by the sea,
Had been as disagreeable as any Crab could be;
It's true that at the best of times his temper was a trial,
But everyone agreed it had been worse for quite a while.

At last his patient mother said, "I'm really at a loss
To understand why you are so particularly cross;
I do not think that you can be real well, my dear; I feel
That I had better send at once for good old Doctor Eel."

And although Clarence kicked and screamed, it did no good at all;
His mother sent for Doctor Eel, who came at once to call.
Said he, "I got here just [illegible] stick out your tongue, my lad;
There's something wrong with any child whose temper is so bad."

"And now I'll have to feel your pulse," said Doctor Eel. "Be quick!"
Then all at once young Clarence Crab played a disgraceful trick,
For with his claw he gave the Eel a really fearful nip;
The good old doctor cried in pain. "This child has got the grip!

"He'll have to go to bed and stay, how long no one can tell;
Give him these bitter pills until he dies or else gets well;
And eating will be bad for him because he is so cross,
The only thing that he can have is thin crab-apple sauce."

Said Mrs. Crab, "I cannot tell how bad this makes me feel;"
"I'm suffering from it more than you," said good old Doctor Eel
So Clarence Crab was put to bed without another word,
Where he may still be to this day, for all I've ever heard.

But whether he is still in bed, or whether he is out,
He's sorry now that he was cross, I really have no doubt;
It got him into trouble and it didn't help a bit,
So next time you and I feel cross, let's just get over it.

MOTHERS' WORK

Conducted by the Plainfield Mothers' Association. Every Thursday

Contributing Staff.

The Daily Press for Thursdays containing the column on Mother's Work will be sent by mail for one dollar a year, in advance.

'Tis the human touch in this world that counts,
The touch of your hand and mine
That means more to the fainting heart
Than shelter or bread or wine.
For shelter is gone when the night is o'er,
And bread last but for a day—
But the touch of the hand and the sound of the voice
Live on in the heart alway."

One entire generation of all the world of children, understood as they should be, loved as they ask to be and developed as they might be, would begin the millenium.—Frances Hodgson Burnett.

The village of Watchung has recently organized a Parent-Teacher Association. The president is Mrs. Henry R. Kennedy, of Johnston's Drive.

HADDONFIELD.

The Parent-Teacher Association of Haddonfield is to establish mid-day lunches for school children. On March 2 a mass meeting was held in the High School when J. L. Pennypacker, a prominent citizen of Haddonfield, spoke on the particular needs of the town and how to meet them. Mrs. Sandford, of Plainfield, explained our system of serving the lunches and Mrs. E. Williams, head of Domestic Science Department at Ridley Park, spoke on the preparation of food. The meeting was largely attended and the Board of Education will be asked to co-operate with the plan.

A SCHOOL OF MOTHERCRAFT.

In a private house on West End avenue, New York city, is located a School of Mothercraft. The complete course is eight months and the applicants must be eighteen years of age and have had the equivalent of a secondary education. The subjects are:

The family—its psychology, sociology and ethics.

Biology—eugenics.

Physical care of infants and young children.

Child hygiene and physical development.

Marketing, housewifery, accounts, management.

Home care of sick children, emergencies.

Hygiene for mothers.

Dietetics — Children's cooking, laundry, sewing.

Child psychology and mental hygiene.

Principles of child training and kindergarten.

"TO PUT HEART INTO."

Napoleon is reported to have said: "There are no bad regiments—there are only poor captains." Another great general has said that the main thing in war is not so much to annihilate the enemies' guns as to annihilate his courage. It is no small part of a good commander's work to see that his troops are kept in good spirits. The mental attitude of defeat and discouragement and failure lessens not only the capability of the mind, but the very forces of the body. This, of course, is the reason that this principle of encouragement is carried so largely into military affairs; songs for the soldiers to sing, band music to march by, colors flying, striking watchwords at critical times, the sight of a beloved commander riding in front of his troops—even the cravens stand firm when the right kind of a captain appears who knows how to "put heart into" them, which is what to encourage really means.

It is probable that little children need this encouragement more than any other class of people because, being unable to be guided by an abstract idea for long, they grow discouraged more easily than older people. Scolding or nagging seldom helps matters, but I have found a cheery "We're almost through, children," to work wonders. "That is pretty good for the first time, you will be surprised how much better you can do it the second time" is "putting heart into" a slow child. "That's pretty hard, isn't it We'll do better this time" accomplished a great deal more than a stern "Now you get right to work and do that better." Is it not worth while when we find ourselves discouraged to really discover if we are discouraged or discouraging—(Primary Education).

CATARRHAL COLDS.

* * * Very often a child is not getting sufficient fat or oil during cold weather. Note how the Esquimos and Arctic dwellers eat fat to keep well. Children do not enjoy fat food as a general thing and mothers do not realize the importance of it. Hence the colds and mucous membrane affections, with colds and bad throats.

But whenever catarrhal colds persist there is usually overeating, rapid and imperfect mastication of food, copious drinking of water, tea or coffee at meals, and too much meat in the diet. Schools, living and working rooms are overheated or poorly ventilated, and children as well as adults, who suffer with these colds, usually dread fresh cold air and do not get it. Cough medicine, gargles and atomizer sprays will not cure conditions caused by these bad, unhygienic habits. Get rid of all these unwholesome errors and see if the catarrhal colds do not gradually disappear.—Mother's Magazine.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Adv.

A Plainfield vs. A New York Account

The advantages to residents of Plainfield and vicinity of maintaining a bank account in The State Trust Company are so numerous that no argument should be necessary to convince those who are now keeping their accounts in New York. Liberal interest rates (3% and 4%), the free collection of out of town checks and New York checking privileges are but a few of the many advantages that such an account affords. On the other hand a New York account means inconvenience in making deposits, charges on out of town checks and in many instances no interest on balances.

We offer our splendid facilities to any one who is willing to overcome habit and profit thereby.

NOTICE--STICKY BANDING

for catching insects and caterpillars that come from the ground to reach the foliage is preferable to coal tar as it does not make an unsightly black band around the tree. Easier, cheaper and much more effective than spraying for great tall trees. Particularly valuable in protecting from Spring and Fall cinker worms, brown tail gypsy and tussock moth bag worm, climbing cut worms or any creeping or climbing pest. One pound will make a band from 7 to 8 feet long. Will not injure Trees; also a line of sprayers and pruning tools for sale by

BOARD IS AFTER POLICE CHANGES

Say Department Efficiency Will Be Increased Two-fold by Amendment.

NEW RANKING CREATED

Sergeant Higgins Will Be Lieutenant—Captain Flynn Will Do Day Duty—New Sergeant to Be Named to Fill Vacancy.

An amendment to the police ordinance which, if passed by the Common Council, will mean the adoption of the policy of greater efficiency in the police department in the future, was brought before the Councilmanic Police Board at its meeting in the mayor's office last night. Following a lengthy deliberation on the merits of the proposed measure the board expressed itself as being unanimously in favor of it and Chief Kiely, who was asked for an expression of opinion, declared that he was in accord with the changes.

If adopted the new ordinance will mean a slight shake-up in the present department routine, new rankings and fixed posts for patrolmen being the features. It is proposed to classify the department employes in the following order: Chief, captain, lieutenant, sergeants, patrolmen and patrol driver. The old office of detective-sergeant, last held by John J. Flynn, who was raised to the captaincy made vacant by the retirement of Christian Frederickson, will be abolished and the new position of lieutenant will be instituted. Sergeant Maurice Higgins will be shifted to the new ranking.

It is proposed to increase the number of sergeants to three and do away with roundsmen, although the duties of the sergeants will be similar to those performed by the roundsmen. Inasmuch as it is deemed essential to have three sergeants instead of two roundsmen, in order to leave one on night duty at the headquarters, it will be necessary to make a new appointment. One of the present patrolmen will be raised to this position, the $100 salary raise thus entailed being the only one to be made under the new ratings. Hereafter Doorman Thomas O'Gorman will be known as patrol driver, something that has been agitated for some time past but which has never before been put in the form of an amendment to the ordinance.

Captain Flynn and Lieutenant Higgins will both do day duty in the future, the rules being so framed that while these two officers will alternate on normal regular shifts, their services will be available day or night as emergencies or special demands arise.

In speaking of this latter change to a Plainfield Daily Press reporter this morning, Mayor Leighton Calkins said:

"Captain Flynn is too valuable a man to be doing clerical duty at headquarters every night. It is for the best interests of the city that he be shifted to day duty. Both he and Higgins are capable members of the department and with them working together in the daytime, and available in cases of emergencies at night, the efficiency of the department will be greatly increased. The changes proposed will mean no additional salaries, except the $100 increase in pay for the patrolman who becomes a sergeant, and I think it is to the best interests of the department that the police board's suggestions be adopted."

BURGLARS ROBBED JUSTICE, LEAVING THEIR EQUIPMENT

Burglars have little respect for justice dealers in South Plainfield. This fact was substantiated yesterday morning, when thieves entered the restaurant of Justice of the Peace Patrick Kaine and stole about $25 worth of tobacco, cigars and canned goods, leaving in return a set of burglar tools.

The suburban legalite has declared that he will return the burglar equipment to the rightful owner if the latter will personaly make application for the same. Entrance was gained through a rear window, facing the Lehigh Valley tracks.

Mr. McAdoo was earlier in the day reported to have passed a comfortable night in preparation for the operation, and to be in excellent condition to undergo it.

T. A. B.'S FRIENDS FORM AUXILIARY

Young Women Organize to Aid Temperance Society's Social Affairs.

A meeting of the young women interested in the socil welfare of St. Mary's Temperance Society was held in T. A. B. Hall, on West Fourth street, last night, the idea being to form an auxiliary organization. The attendance numbered about seventy, and great enthusiasm was displayed. The auxiliary was unanimously decided upon and the following officers elected: President, Miss Sullivan; secretary, Miss Katherine McGauley; treasurer, Miss Katherine Howe.

The St. Mary's Society had tendered the use of T. A. B. Hall to the young women one night each week for the privilege of basketball, dances or any other social diversion. A number of functions that the young men have held recently have been unusually successful owing to the help of the gentler sex, and with an auxiliary such as was formed last night the future promises to be a very busy one. The next meeting of the young women will be held at the hall on Friday night, March 19. All interested are invited to attend and contribute their share toward making T. A. B. Hall one of the most active social centers of the Weest End.

The T. A. B. Society is now at work on plans for enlarging its home. A proposed addition on the west side of the building will include two bowling alleys, card rooms and a kitchen for the preparation of refreshments. Contractor Michael D. O'Keefee is chairman of the committee securing estimates on the cost, and action will be taken as soon as the figures are known.

MANY ATTEND MASS MEETING FOR WOMEN

Miss Emily March Gives An Impressive Talk at First Baptist Church.

An enthusiastic and largely attended mass meeting of women was held at the First Baptist church last night, under the auspices of Mrs. Louis Matlack's Bible class, at which time Miss Emily March, the widely-known Christian worker, made the address. Other features were contralto solos by Miss Ethel Kinnaman, of the First M. E. church quartet, who gave two numbers, accompanied by Clifford Braider on the piano and Howard Henderson, cornetist.

A record of one of the popular hymns sung at "Billy" Sunday's evangelistic meetings was reproduced on a talking machine, and was very impressive. Mrs. Mtlack was in charge of the meeting, and Mrs. Robert Love offered prayer. The congregational singing was led by a large chorus of young women.

Miss March gave a most impressive gospel talk, emphasizing the importance of all those present, giving their hearts to Jesus and leading Christian lives. She related several touching stories showing the sacrifice that people have made to become Christians. In conclusion, Miss March urged all present to know Jesus, abide with Him, and then they would receive a crown of glory when their life mission is ended. In response to her appeal several persons declared their intention of leading Christian lives.

ADDED ASSESSMENTS.

The Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes held a special meeting at Elizabeth this morning for the purpose of adding three assessments to the original Garwood assessment books. They were not made at the time the regeular assessing was completed, and the Supreme Court ruled that the county Board had the power to enter them. The addition was opposed by the property owners concerned.

RESUME OF THE WORK FOR RELIEF

Commission on Unemployed Has Accomplished Much This Winter.

PROBLEMS ARE SOLVED

Public Meeting to Be Held in April at Which Some Prominent Speaker Will Discuss the Question of Unemployment in This Country.

An interesting resume of the work thus far accomplished by the Plainfield Commission for Relief of the Unemployed was given at a meeting held in the Mayor's office Wednesday evening at the call of W. M. Wherry, Jr., chairman. S. T. Carter, Jr., the head of the relief committee, reported expenditures of $1,416.51 for February, which was partially offset by the sale of wood amounting to $375.50. It was reported that 1,005 days work had been given to 130 different men; 99 of them married and 31 single. This work was chiefly on the city streets, at the Woodbrook Farm and at the public yard. Permanent employment for 14 men was obtained.

Mr. Carter said that the chief problem of his committee had been the man who was unwilling to work steadily even though employment were offered him. Many of these men have dependent families. The solution of this problem seems to go inevitably back to the establishment of municipal or county workhouses where the wages of the men could be turned over to their families.

Henry L. DeForest reported for the case committee giving an outline of the work of that committee and of several of the particular cases which had been brought to their attention

HAD NARROW ESCAPE LEAPING OFF FREIGHT

Local Man Tried to Alight From Train Traveling Forty Miles an Hour.

In an attempt to alight from a freight train traveling forty miles an hour on the Central Railroad, near Clinton avenue, at 11 o'clock, last night, a man, giving his name as John Keating, sustained painful injuries about the face and hands. After picking himself up, he walked to the home of John Haskard, where first aid remedies were administered, and he was later removed to the office of Dr. Brennan in Grant avenue.

The physician found that the man was suffering from a number of deep gashes about the face, arms and hands, and, while painful, his hurts are not thought to be of a serious nature.

According to the victim he boarded the train at Jersey City in order to get to his home in the extreme West End of Plainfield. He moved here recently from Philadelephia. When the train reached Plainfield it was going faster than he expected, but he decided to "take a chance" in getting off. He made a wild leap to the cinder strewn railroad bed, and was rolled over several times before he knew where he was.

COMPLAINANT GOT SAME DOSE AS DEFENDANT

Harry Gould, a South Plainfield baker, came to grief in Justice of the Peace Patrick Kaine's court yesterday, when he appeared in the role of complainant aginst one, John Robetsky, whom he said had assaulted him when he went to collect a bread bill. After hearing the evidence the court sentenced each to pay a fine of $5.

According to the defendant Gould started to "beat him up" when he said he wouldn't have the money to meet the bill until Saturday, when he got paid off. Justice Kaine declared that one was as much responsible for the fracas as the other.
